I know not whether God will have it so, For some displeasing service I have done, That in his secret doom, out of my blood He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me; But thou dost, in thy passages of life, Make me believe,—that thou art only mark'd For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven, To punish my mis-treadings. Tell me else, Could such inordinate, and low desires, Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts, Such barren pleasures, rude society, As thou art match'd withal, and grafted to, Accompany the greatness of thy blood, And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty I would I could, Quit all offences with as clear excuse, As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge Myself of many I am charg'd withal: Yet such extenuation let me beg, As, in reproof of many tales devis'd,— Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,— By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmongers, I may, for some things true, wherein my youth Hath faulty wander'd and irregular, Find pardon on my true submission.

K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder, Harry,

At thy affections, which do hold a wing Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors. Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost, Which by thy younger brother is supplied; And art almost an alien to the hearts Of all the court and princes of my blood: The hope and expectation of thy time Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man Prophetically does fore-think thy fall. Had I so lavish of my presence been, So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men, So stale and cheap to vulgar company; Opinion, that did help me to the crown, Had still kept loyal to possession; And left me in reputeless banishment, A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood. By being seldom seen, I could not stir, But, like a comet, I was wonder'd at: That men would tell their children, This is he; Others would say,—Where? which is Bolingbroke? And then I stole all courtesy from heaven, And dress'd myself in such humility, That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts, Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,

Even in the presence of the crowned king. Thus did I keep my person fresh, and new; My presence, like a robe pontifical, Ne'er seen, but wonder'd at: and so my state Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast And won, by rareness, such solemnity. The skipping king, he ambled up and down With shallow jesters, and rash bavin wits, Soon kindled, and soon burn'd: carded his mingled his royalty with capering fools; Had his great name profaned with their scoot And gave his countenance, against his name, To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push Of every beardless vain comparative: Grew a companion to the common streets, Enfeoff'd himself to popularity:

That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes, They surfeited with honey; and began To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much. So, when he had occasion to be seen, He was but as the cuckoo is in June, Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes As, sick and blunted with community, Afford no extraordinary gaze, Such as is bent on sun-like majesty, When it shines seldom in admiring eyes: But rather drowz'd, and hung their eye-lids, Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect As cloudy men use to their adversaries; Being with his presence glutt'd, gorg'd, and And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou For thou hast lost thy princely privilege, With vile participation; not an eye But is a-weary of thy common sight, Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee: Which now doth that, I would not have it Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world, As thou art to this hour, was Richard the When I from France set foot at Ravenspurg And even as I was then, is Percy now. Now by my sceptre, and my soul to boot, He hath more worthy interest to the state, Than thou, the shadow of succession: For, of no right, nor colour like to right, He doth fill fields with harness in the real Turns head against the lion's armed jaws; And, being no more in debt to years than Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops To bloody battles, and to bruising arms. What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas; whose high d Whose hot incursions, and great name in Holds from all soldiers chief majority, And military title capital.

Through all the kingdoms, that acknowledged Thrice hath this Hotspur Mars in swathing This infant warrior in his enterprizes Discomfited great Douglas: ta'en him once Enlarged him, and made a friend of him, To fill the mouth of deep defiance up, And shake the peace and safety of our throne And what say you to this? Percy, Northumb The archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, and Capitulate against us, and are up. But wherefore do I tell these news to thee? Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes, Which art my near'st and dearest enemy Thou that art like enough, through vassal Base inclination, and the start of spleen, To fight against me under Percy's pay, To dog his heels, and court'sy at his brow To show how much degenerate thou art.

P. Hen. Do not think so, you shall not find And God forgive them, that have so much Your majesty's good thoughts away from I will redeem all this on Percy's head, And, in the closing of some glorious day, Be bold to tell you, that I am your son; When I will wear a garment all of blood And stain my favours in a bloody mask, Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame And that shall be the day, whene'er it li this same child of honour and renown, gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,

your unthought-of Harry, chance to meet:
very honour sitting on his helm,
did they were multitudes; and on my head hames redoubled! for the time will come
I shall make this northern youth exchange glorious deeds for my indignities.
It is but my factor, good my lord,
gross up glorious deeds on my behalf:
I will call him to so strict account,
he shall render every glory up,
even the slightest worship of his time,
will tear the reckoning from his heart.
In the name of God, I promise here:
which, if he be pleas'd I shall perform, beseech your majesty, may save long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
the end of life cancels all hands;
I will die an hundred thousand deaths,
reak the smallest parcel of this vow.
Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:—
shalt have charge, and sovereign trust, herein.

Enter BLUNT.

now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.
at. So hath the business, that I come to speak of.
Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,—
Douglas, and the English rebels, met, leventh of this month, at Shrewsbury:
ghy and a fearful head they are,
misses be kept on every hand,
er offer'd foul play in a state.
ten. The earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day;
him my sou, lord John of Lancaster;
is advertisement is five days old:—
Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set out; on Thursday, we ourselves will march:
meeting is Bridgnorth: and, Harry, you march through Gloucestershire; by which account,
business valued, some twelve days hence general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet.
lands are full of business: let's away;
stage feeds him fat, while men delay.

SCENE III.

t'cheap. A room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since st action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle?
my skin hangs about me like an old lady's torn; I am wither'd like an old apple-John.
I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and shall have no strength to repent. An I have rotten what the inside of a church is made of a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse: the inf a church! Company, villainous company, see the spoil of me.

F. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot sing.

Why, there is it:—come, sing me a bawdy make me merry. I was as virtuously given, milesman need to be; virtuously enough: swore died, not above seven times a week; went awdy-house, not above once in a quarter—of it; paid money that I borrowed, three or four lived well, and in good compass: and now out of all order, out of all compass.

d. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you needs be out of all compass; out of all re-compass, sir John.

Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern poop,—but 'tis in the nose of thee; thou art light of the burning lamp.

d. Why, sir John, my face does you no harm.
No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of any a man doth of a death's head, or a memori: I never see thy face, but I think upon re, and Dives that lived in purple; for there a his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert ay given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, By this fire: but thou art altogether given over; and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness.

When thou ran'st up Gads-hill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern:
but the sack, that thou hast drunk me, would have bought me lights as good cheap, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire, any time this two-and-thirty years: Heaven reward me for it!

Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your belly!

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burned.

Enter Hostess.

How now, dame Parlet the hen? have you inquired yet, who picked my pocket?

Host. Why, sir John! what do you think, sir
John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house?
I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess; Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair: and I'll be sworn, my pocket was picked: Go to, you are a woman, go.

Host. Who, I! I defy thee: I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Host. No, sir John: you do not know me, sir John: I know you, sir John: you owe me money, sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowias, filthy dowias: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters
of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here ba-sides, sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Host. He? alas, he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face; What call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks: I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked?
I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him,
I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup; and, if he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS, marking.
FALSTAFF meets the Prince, playing on his truncheon, like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad? is the wind in that door, i'faith? must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly?
How does thy husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned hawdy-house, they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said, I heard your grace say so: And, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said, he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?
Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox: and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it; I am an honest man's wife: and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

Fal. What beast? why an otter.

P. Hen. An otter, sir John! why an otter?

Fal. Why! she's neither fish, nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so; thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal? a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said, he would cudgel you, Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, sir John, you said so

Fal. Yea; if he said, my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 'tis copper: Darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare: but, as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion: Dost thou think, I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God, my girdle break!

P. Hen. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine; it is filled up with guts, and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whorson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long winded; if thy pocket were enriched with other injuries but these, I am a villain. A you will staid to it; you will not pocket up Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest, this state of innocence, Adam fell; and what poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villany? seest, I have more flesh than another man; and therefore more frailty.—You confess thou picked my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee: Go, make breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy secherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tract any honest reason: thou seest, I am pac Still?—Nay, pr'ythee, be gone. [Exit Hostess.]
Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the rury lad,—How is that answered?

P. Hen. O, my sweet beef, I must still langel to thee:—The money is paid back ag

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back double labour.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my fath may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thi does, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a cl foot.

Fal. I would, it had been of horse. Whe I find one that can steal well? O for a fir of the age of two and twenty, or thereab am heinously unprovided. Well, God be for these rebels, they offend none but the v I laud them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph—

Bard. My lord.

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to lord John of La My brother John; this to my lord of We land.—

Go, Poins, to horse, to horse; for thou, as Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner th Jack,

Meet me to-morrow i'th the Temple-hall At two o'clock i'th the afternoon: There shalt thou know thy charge; and there Money, and order for their furniture. The land is burning; Percy stands on high! And either they, or we, must lower lie.

[Exeunt Prince, Poins, and B

Fal. Rare words! brave world!—Host breakfast; come:—
O, I could wish, this tavern were my drum

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: If speaking truth, In this fine age, were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas have, As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world. By heaven, I cannot flatter; I defy The tongues of soothers; but a braver place In my heart's love, hath no man than yourself: Nay, task me to the word; approve me, lord.

Doug. Thou art the king of honour: No man so potent breathes upon the ground, But I will beard him.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well:—

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

What letters hast thou there?—I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father,—

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord; he's grievously sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick, In such a justling time? Who leads his power? Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

Wor. I pr'ythee, tell me, doth he keep I

Enter Sir RICHARD VERNON.

My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.
 Pray God, my news be worth a welcome, lord.
 l of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
 hing hitherwards; with him, prince John.
 No harm: What more?

And further, I have learn'd,— g himself in person hath set forth, erwards intended speedily,
 rous and mighty preparation.
 He shall be welcome too. Where is his son,
 ble-footed mad-cap prince of Wales, comrades, that daft'd the world aside,
 t it pass?

All furnish'd, all in arms,
 n'd like estridges that wing the wind;
 ke eagles having lately bath'd;
 ng in golden coats, like images;
 of spirit as the month of May,
 geous as the sun at midsummer;
 as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
 oung Harry,—with his beaver on,
 ses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,— m the ground like feather'd Mercury, lted with such ease into his seat,
 angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
 and wind a fiery Pegasus,
 ch the world with noble horsemanship.
 No more, no more; worse than the sun in larch,

use doth nourish agues. Let them come;
 me like sacrifices in their trim,
 the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war,
 and bleeding, will we offer them:
 led Mars shall on his altar sit, e ears in blood. I am on fire,
 this rich reprisal is so nigh,
 not ours:—Come, let me take my horse,
 to bear me, like a thunderbolt,
 the bosom of the prince of Wales:
 Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
 d ne'er part, till one drop down a corse.—
 Glendower were come!

There is more news:
 l in Worcester, as I rode along,
 of draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.
Hor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.
Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?
Fer. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be;
 My father and Glendower being both away,
 The powers of us may serve so great a day.
 Come, let us make a muster speedily:
 Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear
 Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A public road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack: our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton-Coldfield to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused garnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds.
 I press me none but good house-holders, yeomen's sons: inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver, worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts and butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than puns' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers; but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolved tapsters, and ostlers trade-fallen; the cankers of a calm world, and a long peace: ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old faced ancient:
 and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think, that I had a hundred and fifty tattered pro-digals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had unloaded all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scare-crows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat:—Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on; for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a shirt and a half in all my company: and the half-shirt is two napkins, tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders, like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-nose innkeeper of Daintry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter Prince HENRY and WESTMORELAND.

P. Hen. How now, blown Jack? how now, quilt?

Fal. What, Hal? How now, mad wag? what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire?—My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. 'Faith, sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already: the king, I can tell you, looks for us all; we must away all night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me: I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

P. Hen. I think, to steal cream indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee hutter. But tell me, Jack; whose fellows are these, that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; and food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit, as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty,—I know not where they had that: and for their bareness,—I am sure, they never learned that of me.

P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste; Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamp'd?

West. He is, sir John; I fear, we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well.

To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast,

Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. If may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well;

You speak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,

(And I dare well maintain it with my life,)

If well-respected honour hid me on,

I hold as little counsel with weak fear,

As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle,

Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much, being men of such great leading,

That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: certain horse

Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up;

Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,

That not a horse is half the half himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy

In general, journey-bated, and brought low;

The better part of ours is full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:

For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

[The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter Sir WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,

If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.

Hot. Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; and 'would

to God,

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well: and even those some

Envy your great deserving, and good name;

Because you are not of our quality,

But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend, but still I should stand so,

So long as, out of limit, and true rule,

You stand against anointed majesty!

But, to my charge.—The king hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs; and whereupon

You conjure from the breast of civil peace

Such hold hostility, teaching his duteous laud

Audacious cruelty: If that the king

Have any way your good deserts forgot,—

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The King's camp near Shrewsbury.

*King HENRY, Prince HENRY, Prince
 BN of Lancaster, Sir WALTER BLUNT,
 Sir JOHN FALSTAFF.*

Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer
 As you busky hill! the day looks pale & distemperature.

Yes. The southern wind play the trumpet to his purposes;
 by his hollow whistling in the leaves,
 alls a tempest, and a blustering day.
Gen. Then with the losers let it sympathize;
 nothing can seem foul to those, that win.—

set. Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

now, my lord of Worcester? 'tis not well,
 you and I should meet upon such terms
 we meet: You have deceiv'd our trust;
 made us doff our easy robes of peace,
 ish our old limbs in ungentle steel:
 a not well, my lord, this is not well.
 say you to't? will you again unknot hurlish knot of all-aborred war?
 oove in that obedient orb again,
 e you did give a fair and natural light;
 e no more an exhal'd meteor, lity of fear, and a portent ached mischief to the unborn times?
 . Hear me, my liege:
 ine own part, I could be well content certain the lag-end of my life quiet hours; for, I do protest, not sought the day of this dislike.

Yes. You have not sought it! how comes it then?

Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Gen. Peace, chewet, peace.

. It pleas'd your majesty to turn your looks our, from myself, and all our house;
 et I must remember you, my lord,
 ere the first and dearest of your friends.
 e my staff of office did I break ard's time; and posted day and night et you on the way, and kiss your hand, yet you were in place and in account
 ig so strong and fortunate as I.

myself, my brother, and his son, ought you home, and boldly did outdare ngers of the time: You swore to us,— ou did swear that oath at Doncaster,— ou did nothing purpose 'gainst the state;
 aim no farther than your new-fall'n right,
 at of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster:
 e swore our aid. But, in short space,
 'd down fortune showering on your head;
 sch a flood of greatness fell on you,—
 with our help; what with the absent king;
 with the injuries of a wanton time;
 eming sufferances, that you had borne;
 e contrarious winds, that held the king
 g in his unlucky Irish wars, ll in England did repute him dead,— ron this swarm of fair advantages, ck occasion to be quickly woo'd
 e the general sway into your hand:
 your oath to us at Doncaster;

And, being fed by us, you us'd us so
 As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,
 Useth the sparrow: did oppress our nest;
 Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk,
 That even our love durst not come near your sight,
 For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing
 We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly
 Out of your sight, and raise this present head:
 Whereby we stand opposed by such means
 As you yourself have forg'd against yourself;
 By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
 And violation of all faith and troth
 Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.
K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulated,
 Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches;
 To face the garment of rebellion
 With some fine colour, that may please the eye
 Of fickle changelings, and poor discontents,
 Which gape and rub the elbow, at the news
 Of horlyburly innovation:
 And never yet did insurrection want
 Such water-colours, to impaint his cause:
 Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
 Of pellmell havock and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies, there is many a soul
 Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
 If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
 The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
 In praise of Henry Percy: By my hopes,—
 This present enterprise set off his head,—
 I do not think, a braver gentleman,
 More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
 More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
 To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
 For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
 I have a truant been to chivalry;
 And so, I hear, he doth account me too:
 Yet this before my father's majesty,—
 I am content, that he shall take the odds
 Of his great name and estimation;
 And will, to save the blood on either side,
 Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,
 Albeit, considerations infinite
 Do make against it:—No, good Worcester, no.
 We love our people well; even those we love,
 That are misled upon your cousin's part:
 And will they take the offer of our grace,
 Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
 Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his:
 So tell your cousin, and bring me word
 What he will do:—But if he will not yield,
 Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
 And they shall do their office. So, be gone;
 We will not now be troubled with reply:
 We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exit Worcester and Vernon.]

P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life:
 The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
 Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;
 For, on their answer, will we set on them:
 And God befriend us, as our cause is just!

[Exit King, Blunt, and Prince John.]

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.]

Fal. 'Tis not due yet; I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter; Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour pricks me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No. What is honour? A word. What is in that word, honour? What is that honour? Air. A trim reckoning!—Who hath it? He that died o'Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it:—therefore I'll none of it: Honour is a mere scutcheon, and so ends my catechism. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The rebel camp.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, sir Richard, The liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'Twere best, he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone. It is not possible, it cannot be, The king should keep his word in loving us; He will suspect us still, and find a time To punish this offence in other faults: Suspicion shall be all stuck full of eyes: For treason is but trusted like the fox; Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up, Will have a wild trick of his ancestors. Look how we can, or sad, or merrily, Interpretation will misquote our looks; And we shall feed like oxen at a stall, The better cherish'd, still the nearer death. My nephew's trespass may be well forgot, It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood; And an adopted name of privilege,— A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen: All his offences live upon my head, And on his father's;—we did train him on; And, his corruption being ta'en from us, We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all. Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know, In any case, the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say, 'tis so. Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; and Officers and Soldiers, behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd:—Deliver up My lord of Westmoreland.—Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.]

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,— By now forswearing that he is forsworn: He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen; to arms! for I have thrown A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth, And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it; Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king,

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, 'would the quarrel lay upon our heads; And that no man might draw short breath to-day, But I, and Harry Monmouth! Tell me, tell me, How show'd his tasking? seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my soul; I never in my life Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly, Unless a brother should a brother dare

To gentle exercise and proof of arms. He gave you all the duties of a man; Trimm'd up your praises with a princely title; Spoke your deservings like a chronicle; Making you ever better than his praise, By still dispraising praise, valued with you And, which became him like a prince indeed, He made a blushing cital of himself; And chid his truant youth with such a grace As if he master'd there a double spirit, Of teaching, and of learning, instantly. There did he pause: But let me tell the world If he outlive the envy of this day, England did never owe so sweet a hope, So much misconstrued in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think, thou art enamour'd Upon his follies; never did I hear Of any prince, so wild, at liberty:— But, be he as he will, yet once ere night I will embrace him with a soldier's arm, That he shall shrink under my courtesy.— Arm, arm, with speed:—Aud, fellows, friends, Better consider what you have to do, Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.—

O gentlemen, the time of life is short; To spend that shortness basely, were too fool: If life did ride upon a dial's point, Still ending at the arrival of an hour. An if we live, we live to tread on kings; If die, brave death, when princes die with Now for our conscience,—the arms are fair When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from For I profess not talking; Only this— Let each man do his best; and here draw A sword, whose temper I intend to stain With the best blood that I can meet with In the adventure of this perilous day. Now,—Esperance!—Percy!—and set on. Sound all the lofty instruments of war, And by that music let us all embrace: For, heaven to earth, some of us never shal A second time do such a courtesy.

[The trumpets sound. They embrace, and Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou Upon my head?

Doug. Know then, my name is And I do haunt thee in the battle thus, Because some tell me, that thou art a king Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The lord of Stafford dear to-day he Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king I This sword hath ended him; so shall it Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou pr And thou shalt find a king, that will rev Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and Blunt

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holm I never had triumph'd upon a Scot.

Doug. All's done, all's won; here break the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? no, I know this face A gallant knight he was, his name was Semblably furnish'd like the king himself

A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!
 'd title hast thou bought too dear.
 dost thou tell me that thou wert a king?
 The king hath many marching in his coats.
 Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;
 I'll raze all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
 and meet the king.

Up, and away;
 diers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.]

Other alarms. Enter FALSTAFF.

Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, he shot here; here's no scoring but upon the left! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt;— honour for you: Here's no vanity!—I am as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep of me! I need no more weight than mine rils.—I have led my raggamuffins where peppered: there's but three of my hundred left alive; and they are for the town's end, and living life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince HENRY.

1. What, stand'st thou idle here? lend me
 y sword:
 nobleman lies stark and stiff
 he hoofs of vaunting enemies, leaths are unreveng'd: Pr'ythee, lend thy sword.

2. Hal, I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe —Turk Gregory never did such deeds in
 I have done this day. I have paid Percy, and made him sure.

3. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee.
 e thy sword, I pr'ythee.

4. I lay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou thy sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

5. Give it me: What, is it in thy case?
 y, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot; there's that will
 ty. [The Prince draws out a bottle of sack.]

6. What, is't a time to jest and dally now?
 [Throws it at him, and exit.]

7. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If me in my way, so: if he do not, if I come illingly, let him make a carbozard of me.
 such grinning honours as sir Walter hath:

 is unlooked for, and there's an end. [Exit.]

Another part of the field.

*Excursions. Enter the King, Prince

2. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.
 I do beseech your majesty, make up retirement do amaze your friends.

3. I will do so:—
 of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

4. Come, my lord, I will lead you to your tent.
 Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:

5. 'en forbid, a shallow scratch should drive
 e of Wales from such a field as this;

6. ain'd nobility lies trodden on,

 I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,

O, this boy

12. title to us all. [Exit.]

Alarms. Enter DOUGLAS.
 13. oother king! they grow like Hydra's heads:

I am the Douglas, fatal to all those,
 That wear those colours on them.—What art thou,
 That counterfeit'st the person of a king!

K. Hen. The king, himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart,

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
 And not the very king. I have two boys,
 Seek Percy, and thyself, about the field:
 But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
 I will assay thee; so defend thyself.

Doug. I fear, thou art another counterfeit;
 And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
 But mine, I am sure, thou art, whose'er thou be,
 And thus I win thee.

[They fight: the King being in danger, enter Prince Henry.]

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like Never to hold it up again! the spirits
 Of Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms:
 It is the prince of Wales that threatens thee;
 Who never promiseth but he means to pay.—

[They fight, Douglas flies.
 Cheerly, my lord; How fares your grace?—
 Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
 And so hath Clifton; I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe a while:
 Thou hast redeemed thy lost opinion;
 And show'd, thou mak'st some tender of my life,
 In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. Hen. O heaven! they did me too much injury,
 That ever said, I hearken'd to your death.
 If it were so, I might have left alone
 The insulting hand of Douglas over you;
 Which would have been as speedy in your end,
 As all the poisonous potions in the world,
 And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton, I'll to sir Nicholas
 Gawsey. [Exit King Henry.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Moonmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

P. Hen. Why, then I see

A very valiant rebel of the name.
 I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
 To share with me the glory any more:
 Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
 Nor can one England brook a double reign,
 Of Harry Percy and the prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come
 To end the one of us; Aud 'would to God,
 Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

P. Hen. I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee;
 And all the budding honours on thy crest
 I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities.

[They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal!—Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Enter DOUGLAS; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit Douglas. Hot- spur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth:
 I better brook the loss of brittle life,
 Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;
 They wound my thoughts, worse than thy sword
 my flesh:—

But thought's the slave of life, and life time's fool;
 And time, that takes survey of all the world,
 Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy,
 But that the earthy and cold hand of death
 Lies on my tongue:—No, Percy, thou art dust,
 And food for— [Dies.]

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy: Fare thee well, great heart!—

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!
 When that this body did contain a spirit,
 A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
 But now, two paces of the vilest earth
 Is room enough:—This earth, that bears thee dead,
 Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
 If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
 I should not make so dear a show of zeal:—

But let my favours hide thy mangled face!
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!—

[He sees Falstaff on the ground.]

What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!
I could have better spar'd a better man.
O, I should have a heavy miss of thee,
If I were much in love with vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray:—
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by;
Till then, in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.]

Fal. [Rising slowly.] Embowell'd! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me, and eat me too, to-morrow. 'Shlood, 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit! I lie, I am no counterfeit: To die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is—discretion; in the which better part, I have saved my life. 'Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead: How, if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore, I'll make him sure: yea, and I'll swear I kill'd him. Why may not he rise, as well as I? Nothing comfutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me. Therefore, sirrah, [Stabbing him.] with a new wound in your thigh, come you along with me. [Takes Hotspur on his back.]

Re-enter Prince HENRY, and Prince JOHN.

P. Hen. Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou flesh'd Thy maiden sword.

P. John. But, soft! whom have we here?

Did you not tell me, this fat man was dead?

P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead, breathless and bleeding

Upon the ground.—

Art thou alive? or is it phantasy

That plays upon our eyesight? I pry'thee, speak;

We will not trust our eyes, without our ears:—

Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a double man: but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy: [Throwing the body down.] if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou?—Lord, lord, how this world is given to lying!—I grant you, I was down, and out of breath; and so was he: but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so: if not, let them, that should reward valour, hear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. John. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.

P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother John.—

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.]

The trumpet sounds retreat, the day is ours.
Come, brother, let's to the highest of the field,
To see what friends are living, who are dead.

[Execute Prince Henry, and Prince John.]

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave neat, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, bearing off the body.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the field.

The trumpets sound. Enter King HENRY, Prince HENRY, Prince JOHN, WESTMORELAND, and Others, with WORCESTER, and VERNON, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.—
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to.
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:

Other offenders we will pause upon.—

[Execute Worcester and Vernon, guarded.]

How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, lord Douglas, whom he slew,
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear,— fled with the rest;
And, falling from a hill, he was so bruised,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we divide our power.—

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,
Towards York shall bend you, with your due speed,

To meet Northumberland, and the prelate Scroop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself,—and you, son Harry,—will towards Warwick
To fight with Glendower, and the earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won. [Exit.]

Scene,—England.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's castle.

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; For which of you will stop

The vent of hearing, when loud Rumour speaks?
 I, from the orient to the drooping west,
 Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
 The news commenced on this ball of earth:
 Upon my tongues continual slanders ride;
 The which in every language I pronounce,
 Scattering the ears of men with false reports.
 I speak of peace, while covert enmity
 Under the smile of safety wounds the soul:
 And who but Rumour, who but only I,
 Make fearful musters, and prepar'd defence;
 Whilst the big year, swollen with some other grief,
 Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
 And so such matter? Rumour is a pipe
 Drawn by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
 And of so easy and so plain a stop,
 That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
 The still-discordant wavering multitude,

Can play upon it. But what need I thus
 My well-known body to anatomize
 Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
 I run before king Harry's victory;
 Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury,
 Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his troops,
 Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
 Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
 To speak so true at first? my office is
 To noise abroad,—that Harry Monmouth fell
 Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
 And that the king before the Douglas' rage
 Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
 This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
 Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
 And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
 Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland, Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on,
 And not a man of them brings other news
 Than they have learn'd of me; From Rumour's
 tongues
 They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

The same.

The Porter before the gate; Enter Lord BARDOLPH.

Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho?—Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?
Bard. Tell thou the earl,

That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard;
 Praye it your honour, knock hut at the gate,
 And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Bard. Here comes the earl.

North. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute
 now

Should be the father of some stratagem:
 The times are wild; contention, like a horse
 Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose,
 And hears down all before him.

Bard. Noble earl,
 I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an heaven will!

Bard. As good as heart can wish:—

The king is almost wounded to the death;
 And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
 Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas: young prince John,
 And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field;
 And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk sir John,

Is prisoner to your son : O, such a day,
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not, till now, to dignify the times,
Since Caesar's fortunes !

North. How is this deriv'd ?
Saw you the field ? came you from Shrewsbury ?

Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence ;

A gentleman well bred, and of good name,
That freely render'd me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way ;
And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you ?

Tra. My lord, sir John Umfrevile turn'd me back
With joyful tidings ; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him, came, spurring hard,
A gentleman almost forspent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse :
He ask'd the way to Chester ; and of him
I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury.
He told me, that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold :
With that, he gave his able horse the head,
And, bending forward, struck his armed heels
Against the panting sides of his peer jade
Up to the rowel-head ; and, starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha !—Again,
Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold ?
Of Hotspur, coldspur ? that rebellion
Had met ill luck !

Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what ;—
If my young lord your son have not the day,
Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony ; never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman, that rode by Travers,
Give then such instances of loss ?

Bard. Who, he ?
He was some hilding fellow, that had stol'n
The horse he rode on : and, upon my life,
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf,
Foretells the nature of a tragick volume :
So looks the strand, whereon the imperious flood
Hath left a witness'd usurpation.—

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury ?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord ;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask,
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son, and brother ?
Thou tremblest ; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so wee-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd :
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it.
Thus thou would'st say,—Your son did thus, and thus ;

Your brother, thus ; so fought the noble Douglas ;
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds :
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet :
But, for my lord your son,—

North. Why, he is dead.
See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath !
He, that but fears the thing he would not know,
Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others' eyes,
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton ;
Tell thou thy earl, his divination lies ;
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gain'd
Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not, that Percy
I see a strange confession in thine eye :
Thou shak'st thy head ; and hold'st it fear
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so :
The tongue offends not, that reports his deed
And he doth sin, that doth belie the dead
Not he, which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office ; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son
Mor. I am sorry I should force you to see That, which I would to heaven I had not
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody act Rend'ring faint quittance, wearied and out-to
To Harry Monmouth ; whose swift wrath h

Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom

Mor. The lives of all your loving comp

You cast the event of war, my noble lord
And summ'd the account of chance, before y
Let us make head. It was your presurr you say,—Go forth; and none of this, strongly apprehended, could restrain

We all, that are engaged to this loss, that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas,
we wrought out life, 'twas ten to one:
we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
the respect of likely peril fear'd;
we are o'erset, venture again.

Tis more than time: And, my most noble or certain, and do speak the truth,—

the archbishop of York is up, same word, rebellion, did divide on of their bodies from their souls;

y did fight with queasiness, constrain'd, drink potions; that their weapons only in our side, but, for their spirits and souls, rd, rebellion, it had froze them up,
we in a pond: But now the bishop surrection to religion:

I sincere and holy in his thoughts,
ow'd both with body and with mind;
h enlarge his rising with the blood
ing Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones:
from heaven his quarrel, and his cause;
m, he doth bestride a bleeding land,
for life under great Bolingbroke;
e, and less, do flock to follow him.

I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,
sent grief had wip'd it from my mind.
ith me; and counsel every man
st way for safety, and revenge:
t, and letters, and make friends with speed;
few, and never yet more need. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

London. A Street.

Sir JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

irrah, you giant, what says the doctor to r?

He said, sir, the water itself was a good water: but, for the party that owed it, he ve more diseases than he knew for.

ten of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: n of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is to invent any thing, that tends to laughter, in I invent, or is invented on me: I am witty in myself, but the cause that wit is men. I do here walk before thee, like a bath overwhelmed all her litter but one.
ince put thee into my service for any other an to set me off, why then I have no judghou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I r manned with an agate till now: but I ron neither in gold nor silver, but in vile and send you back again to your master, el; the juvenal, the prince your master, in is not yet flegged. I will sooner have grow in the palm of my hand, than he shall n his cheek; and yet he will not stick to face is a face royal: God may finish it will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may ill as a face-royal, for a barber shall never ence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, had writ man ever since his father was a

He may keep his own grace, but he is at of mine, I can assure him.—What Dumbleton about the satin for my short d slops?

He said, sir, you should procure him better than Bardolph: he would not take his t years; he liked not the security.
et him be damned like the glutton I may se be hotter!—A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security!—The whorson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon—security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him.—Where's Bar-dolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield, to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Atten. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?
Atten. He, my lord: but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Atten. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.
Ch. Just. I am sure, he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Atten. Sir John,—

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? I loth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers?
Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Atten. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiery aside, I had lied in my throat, if I had said so.

Atten. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiery aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that, which grows to me! If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged: You hunt-counter, hence! avaunt!

Atten. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord!—God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say, your lordship was sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship, to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty:—You would not com: when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him! I pray, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen; it is a kind of dizziness.

Ch. Just. I think, you are fallen into the disease; for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not, if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord; but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty: but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He, that buckles him in my belt, cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound; your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gads-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'erposting that action.

Fal. My lord?

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A vassel candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravv, gravity, gravity.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light; but, I hope, he, that looks upon me, will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects I grant I cannot go, I cannot tell: Virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger times, that true valour is turned bear-herd: Pregnancy is made a tapstey, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider not the capacities of us, that are young: you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls: and we, that are in the vaward of our youth, I most confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice,—I have lost it with hollaing, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he, that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have it him. For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you,—he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have check'd him for it; and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes, and sackcloth; but in new silk and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven send the prince a better companion!

Fal. Heaven send the companion a better part: I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you prince Harry: I hear, you are going with John of Lancaster, against the archbishop, a earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit: But look you, pray, all you that kiss my lady at home, that our armies join not in a hot for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts on me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: be a hot day, an I brandish any thing but a bottle, I would I might never spit white. There is not a dangerous action can pesp a head, but I am thrust upon it: Well, I can ever: But it was always yet the trick of our nation, if they have a good thing, to make common. If you will needs say, I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God name were not so terrible to the enemy as I were better to be eaten to death with rust, be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; Bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound, to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well. Commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

[Exeunt Chief Justice and Attorneys.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-mar—A man can no more separate age and cunning, than he can part young limbs and life; but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my cure.

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two-pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this condition of the purse: borrowing only lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.—this letter to my lord of Lancaster; this prince! this to the earl of Westmoreland; to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weak to marry since I perceived the first white in my chin: About it; you know where to [Exit Page.] A pox of this gout! or, a pox of this pox! for the one, or the other, plays with my great toe. It is no matter, if I have the wars for my colour, and my shall seem the more reasonable: a good make use of any thing; I will turn it to commodity.

SCENE III.

York. A room in the Archbishop's palace.

Enter the Archbishop of YORK, the Lord BISHOPS, NOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our counsel: know our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you speak plainly your opinions of our hopes.

And first, lord marshal, what say you to this?

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our business: but gladly would be better satisfied,

How, in our means, we should advance it.

To look with forehead bold and big enough upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hast. Our present numbers grow upon us: To five and twenty thousand men of choice.

And our supplies live largely in the hope of great Northumberland, whose bosom

With an incensed fire of injuries.

Bard. The question then, lord Hastings, is this:—

Whether our present five and twenty thousand may hold up head without Northumberland?

Hast. With him, we may.

Bard. Ay, marry, there's the question: But if without him we be thought too few,

My judgment is, we should not step too far, till we had his assistance by the hand:

For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surmise uncertain, should not be admitted.

 'Tis very true, lord Bardolph; for indeed,
 young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.
 It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with ope,
 he air on promise of supply,
 ng himself with project of a power maller than the smallest of his thoughts :
 with great imagination,
 o madmen, 'ed his powers to death,
 nking, leap'd into destruction.
 Bat, by your leave, it never yet did hurt,
 low'n likelihoods, and forms of hope.
 Yes, in this present quality of war;—
 he instant action, (a cause on foot,) e hope, as in an early spring
 the appearing buds; which to prove fruit, ves not so much warrant, as despair, ets will bite them. When we mean to ild,
 survey the plot, then draw the model ;
 n we see the figure of the house,
 st we rate the cost of the erection :
 f we find outweighs ability,
 o we then, but draw anew the model offices ; or, at least, desist at all ! Much more, in this great work, is, almost, to-pluck a kingdom down, another up,) should we survey of situation, and the model ;
 upon a snre foundation ;
 surveyers ; know our own estate,
 e such a work to undergo,
 a against his opposite; or else,
 fy in paper, and in figures,
 e names of men instead of men :
 , that draws the model of a house his power to build it ; who, half through, et, and leaves his part-created cost subject to the weeping clouds, te for churlish winter's tyranny.
 rant, that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth,)
 e still-born, and that we now possess'd utmost man of expectation :
 we are a body strong enough,
 we are, to equal with the king.
 What ! is the king but five and twenty ousand ?

Hast. To us, no more ; nay, not so much, lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
 Are in three heads : one power against the French,
 And one against Glendower ; perforce, a third
 Must take up us : So is the uniform king
 In three divided ; and his coffers sound
 With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths
 together,
 And come against us in full puissance,
 Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
 He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh
 Baying him at his heels : never fear that.

Bard. Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither ?
Hast. The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland ;
 Against the Welsh, himself, and Harry Monmouth :
 But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
 I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on ;
 And publish the occasion of our arms.
 The commonwealth is sick of their own choice,
 Their over-greedy love hath surfeit'd :—
 An habitation giddy and unsure
 Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
 O thou fond many ! with what loud applause
 Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,
 Before he was what thou would'st have him be ?
 And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
 Thou, bestly feeder, art so full of him,
 That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
 So, so, thou common dog, didst thou discharge
 Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard :
 And now thou would'st eat thy dead vomit up,
 And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times ?

They, that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
 Are now become enamour'd on his grave :
 Thou, that throw'st dust upon his goodly head,
 When through proud London he came sighing on
 After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
 Cry'st now, *O earth, yield us that king again,
 And take thou this !* O thoughts of men accurst !
 Past, and to come, seem best ; things present, worst.

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on ?
Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Reunt.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

London. A street.

*Master Fang, and his Boy, with her ;
 and SNARE following.*

Master Fang, have you enter'd the ac-n ?
 It is enter'd.

Where is your yeoman ? Is it a lusty yeoill a' stand to't ?

Sirrah, where's Snare ?

O lord, ay : good master Snare.

Here, here.

Snare, we must arrest sir John Fal-ff.
 'ea, good master Snare : I have entered him

It may chance cost some of us our lives, ill stab.

Alas the day ! take heed of him ; he stabbed his own house, and that most bestly : in h, a' cares not what mischief he doth, if on be out : he will foin like any devil ; he e neither man, woman, nor child.
 If I can close with him, I care not for his

No, nor I neither : I'll be at your elbow.
 An I but fist him once ; an a' come but y vice ;—

(Am undone by his going ; I warrant you, infinitive thing upon my score :—Good ang, hold him sure ;—good master Snare, ot 'scape. He comes continually to Pie-corner, (saving your manhoods,) to buy a saddle ; and he's incited to dinner to the lubbar's head in Lambert-street, to master Smooth's the silk-man :

 I pray ye, since my exion is enter'd, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long loan for a poor lone woman to bear : and I have borne,
 and borne, and borne ; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing ; unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.—

Enter Sir JOHN FALSTAFF, Page, and BAR-DOLPH.

Yonder he comes ; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, master Fang, and master Snare ; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now ! whose mare's dead ? what's the matter ?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets !—Draw, Bardolph ; cut me off the villain's head ; throw the quean in the channel.

Hast. Throw me in the channel ? I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou ? wilt thou ? thou bas-tardly rogue !—Murder, murder ! O thou honeysuckle villain !—wilt thou kill God's officers, and the king's ? O thou honey-seed rogue ! thou art a honey-seed ; a man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two.—Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't thou? do, do, thou rogue! do, do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice attended.

Ch. Just. What's the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. Ho now, sir John? what, are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time, and business? You should have been well on your way to York.—Stand from him, fellow; Wherefore hang'st thou on him?

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have: he hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his:—but I will have some of it out again, or I'll ride thee o' nights, like the mare.

Fal. I think, I am as likely to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed, to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum, that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself, and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Whitsun-week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou did'st swear to me then; as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not good-wife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly! coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us, she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some; whereby I told thee, they were ill for a green wound! And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people; saying, that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath; deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you: she hath been in good case, and, the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words, that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Host. Yea, in troth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Pr'ythee, peace:—Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done with her; the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honorable boldness, impudent sauciness: if a man will make court'sy, and say nothing, he is virtuous: No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor; I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside.

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, master Gower; what a Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry I Wales,

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—Come, words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I trow must be fain to pawn both my plate, and pesty of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drink for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or of the prodigal, or the German hunting-f work, is worth a thousand of these bed-l and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be t if thou canst. Come, an it were not fo mours, there is not a better wench in Engl wash thy face, and 'draw thy action: Co must not be in this humour with me; I know me? Come, come, I know thou wa to this.

Host. Pray thee, sir John, let it be bu nobles; i'faith I am loath to pawn my g good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I gown. I hope, you'll come to supper: Y me altogether?

Fal. Will I live?—Go, with her, with Bardolph] hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

[Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers.

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well; W news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hund Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster Against Northumberland, and the archbi

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me Come, go along with me, good master G

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord thank you, good sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too l you are to take soldiers up in counties a

Fal. Will you sup with me, master G

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught manners, sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become r was a fool, that taught them me.—This i fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, a fair.

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee a great fool.

SCENE II.

The same. Another street.

Enter Prince HENRY and POIN

P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding w Poins. Is it come to that? I had thou ness durst not have attached one of so h

P. Hen. 'Faith, it does me; though it the complexion of my greatness to ackno Doth it show vilely in me, to desire sma

Poins. Why, a prince should not be studied, as to remember so weak a comp

P. Hen. Believe then, my appetite was n got? for, by my troth, I do now rememb creature, small beer. But, indeed, the considerations make me out of love with ness. What a disgrace is it to me to me! or to know thy face to-morrow? or to see how many pair of silk stockings thou hast, these, and those that were the peach-blossoms? or to hear the inventory of thy goods, as, one for superfluity, and one other for want; but that, the tennis-court keeper knows better; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when I am great while, because the rest of thy lowlies have made a shift to eat up thy holland; and I know, whether those, that bawl out of the sky, shall inherit his kingdom: but I do not say, the children are not in the fault; upon the world increases, and kindreds are daily strengthened.

How ill it follows, after you have laboured, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how good young princes would do so, their facing so sick as yours at this time is?

Yes. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Yes; and let it be an excellent good thing.

It shall serve among wits of no higher rank than thine.

Go to; I stand the push of your one thing, you will tell.

Why, I tell thee,—it is not meet, that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault matter, to call my friend,) I could be sad, and feed too.

Very hardly, upon such a subject.

By this hand, thou think'st me as far in ill's book, as thou, and Falstaff, for obduracy resistency: Let the end try the man. But I see,—my heart bleeds inwardly, that my father is sick: and keeping such vile company as thou, hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

The reason?

What wouldst thou think of me, if I weep?

I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

It would be every man's thought: and that a blessed fellow, to think as every man; never a man's thought in the world keeps d-way better than thine: every man would me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites most worshipful thought, to think so?

Why, because you have been so lewd, much engrafted to Falstaff.

And to thee.

By this light, I am well spoken of, I can with my own ears: the worst that they can me is, that I am a second brother, and that proper fellow of my hands; and those two I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, comes Bardolph.

And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he is from me christian; and look, if the fat have not transformed him ape.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

'Save your grace!

And yours, most noble Bardolph!

Come, you virtuous ass, [To the Page.] O' my word, you must be blushing? wherefore you now? What a maidenly man at arms a become? Is it such a matter, to get a pot's maidenhead?

He called me even now, my lord, through lattice, and I could discern no part of him in the window: at last, I spied his eyes; thought he had made two holes in the alewife petticoat, and peeped through.

Hath not the boy profited?

Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!

Instruct us, boy: What dream, boy?

Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was wed of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him ram.

A crown's worth of good interpretation. 'Tis it, boy.

O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town; there's a letter for you.

P. Hen. Delivered with good respect.—And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician: but that moves not him; though that be sick, it dies not.

P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place; for, look you, how he writes.

Poins. [Reads.] John Falstaff, knight,—Every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself. Even like those, that are kin to the king; for they never prick their finger, but they say, There is some of the king's blood spilt: How comes that? says he, that takes upon him not to conceive: the answer is as ready as a borrower's cap; I am the king's poor cousin, sir.

P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But the letter:—

Poins. Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry prince of Wales, greeting.—Why, this is a certificate.

P. Hen. Peace!

Poins. I will imitate the honourable Roman in brevity:—he sure means brevity in breath; short-winded.—I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears, thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou may'st, and so farewell.

Thine, by yea and no, (which is as much as to say, as thou usest him,) Jack Falstaff, with my familiars; John, with my brothers and sisters; and sir John, with all Europe.

My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.

P. Hen. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. May the wench have no worse fortune! but I never said so.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds, and mock us.—Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

P. Hen. Where saps he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord; in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord; of the old church.

P. Hen. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old mistress Quickly, and mistress Doll Tear-sheet.

P. Hen. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

P. Hen. Even such kin, as the parish heifers are to the town bull.—Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph;—no word to your master, that I am yet come to town: There's for your silence.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir,—I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.]—This Doll Tear-sheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

P. Hen. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leather jerkins, and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a apprentice? a low transformation! that shall be mine: for, in every thing, the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Warkworth. Before the Castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, Lady NORTHUMBERLAND, and Lady PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter, Give even way unto my rough affairs: Put not you on the visage of the times, And be, like them, to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more: Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn; And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O, yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars! The time was, father, that you broke your word, When you were more endeard' to it than now; When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry, Threw many a northward look, to see his father Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain. Who then persuaded you to stay at home?

North. There were two honours lost; yours, and your son's. For yours,—may heavenly glory brighten it!

For his,—it stuck upon him, as the sun In the grey vault of heaven: and, by his light, Did all the chivalry of England move

To do brave acts; he was, indeed, the glass, Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.

He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait: And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish, Became the accents of the valiant;

For those, that could speak low, and tardily, Would turn their own perfection to abuse,

To seem like him: So, that in speech, in gait, In diet, in affections of delight,

In military rules, humours of blood, He was the mark and glass, copy and book,

That fashion'd others. And him,—O wondrous him! O miracle of men!—him did you leave,

(Second to none, unseconded by you,) To look upon the hideous god of war

In disadvantage; to abide a field, Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name

Did seem defensible:—so you left him: Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong,

To hold your honour more precise and nice With others, than with him; let them alone;

The marshal, and the archbishop, are strong: Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,

To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart, Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me, With new lamenting ancient oversights.

But I must go, and meet with danger there; Or it will seek me in another place,

And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland, Till that the nobles, and the armed commons,

Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king, Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,

To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves, First let them try themselves: So did your son;

He was so suffer'd; so came I a widow; And never shall have length of life enough,

To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes, That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,

For recordation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me: 'tis with my mind,

As with the tide, swell'd up unto its height, That makes a still-stand, running neither way.

Fain would I go to meet the archbishop, But many thousand reasons hold me back:—

I will resolve for Scotland; there am I, Till time and vantage crave my company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

London. A room in the Bear's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

1 Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there?

apple-Johns? thou know'st, sir John cannot an apple-John.

2 Draw. Mass, thou sayest true: The priest set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and to there were five more sir Johns: and, put his hat, said, I will now take my leave of thee dry, round, old, withered knights. It anger'd to the heart; but he hath forgot that.

1 Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down. And see if thou canst find out Sneak's mistress Tear-sheet would fain hear some Despatch:—The room where they supped hot; they'll come in straight.

2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the priest master Poin's anon: and they will put on our jerkins, and aprons; and sir John n'know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

1 Draw. By the mass, here will be old: will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Draw. I'll see, if I can find out Sneak's

Enter Hostess and DOLL TEAR-SHEET.

Host. I'faith, sweet heart, methinks now in an excellent good temperality: your beats as extraordinarily as heart would and your colour, I warrant you, is as red rose: But, i'faith, you have drunk too mureis; and that's a marvellous searching w'it perfumes the blood ere one can say,—this? How do you now?

Doll. Better than I was. Hem.

Host. Why, that's well said; a good worth gold. Look, here comes sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF, singing.

Fal. When Arthur first in court—Ex-jordan.—And was a worthy king: [Exit] How now, mistress Doll?

Host. Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be o' calm, they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, mistress Doll. I make them! gluttony and disease them; I make them not.

Host. If the cook help to make the glutty help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my po grant that.

Doll. Ay, marry; our chains, and our j Fal. Your brooches, pearls, and oaches serve bravely, is to come halting off, yo To come off the breach with his pike bent and to surgery bravely; to venture upon th chambers bravely:—

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy con; yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fast two never meet, but you fall to some dise are both, in good troth, as rheumatick a toasts; you cannot one bear with another mities. What the good-year! one must that must be you: [To Doll.] you are th vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear su full hog'shead? there's a whole merchant of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have n hulk better stuffed in the hold.—Com friends with thee, Jack: thou art goo wars; and whether I shall ever see thee no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter Drawer.

Draw. Sir, ancient Pistol's below, a speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! le come hither: it is the foul-mouth'd st England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come by my faith; I must live amongst my ne I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name with the very best:—Shut the door;—th no swaggerers here: I have not lived all to have swaggering now:—shut the doo you.

Dost thou hear, hostess?—

Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John; there are no swaggerers here.

Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Tilly-fally, sir John, never tell me; your swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was master Tisick, the deputy, the other day; he said to me,—it was no longer ago than today last,—Neighbour Quickly, says he;—Dumb, our minister, was by then;—Neighbour, says he, receive those that are civil; th he, you are in an ill name;—now he said in tell whereupon; for, says he, you are on woman, and well thought on; therefore take out guests you receive: Receive, says he, no ing companions.—There comes none here; would bless you to hear what he said:—no, swaggerers.

He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, I may stroke him as gently as a puppy grey—he will not swagger with a Barbary hen, matters turn back in any show of resistance. him up, drawer.

Cheater, call you him? I will bar no man my house, nor no cheater: But I do swaggering; by my troth, I am the worse, me says—swagger: feel, masters, how I look you, I warrant you.

So you do, hostess.

Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere a leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

'Save you, sir John!

Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I rou with a cop of sack: do you discharge me hostess.

I will discharge upon her, sir John, with lets.

She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly er.

Come, I'll drink no proofs, nor no bullets: ik no more than will do me good, for no leasure, I.

Then to you, mistress Dorothy; I will roa.

Charge me? I scorn you, scurvy companion. you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-ade! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I t for your master.

I know you, mistress Dorothy.

Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy way! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in wldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle

! Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-juggler, you!—Since when, I pray you, hat, with two points on your shoulder?

I will murder your ruff for this.

No more, Pistol; I would not have you go : discharge yourself of our company,

No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain! thou abominable damned cheater, not ashamed to be called—captain? If were of my mind, they would truncheon for taking their names upon you before you eed them. You a captain, you slave! for e tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-He a captain! Haug him, rogue! He is mouldy stewed prunes, and dried cakes. n! these villains will make the word cap-icious as the word occupy: which was an good word before it was ill sorted: there-ains had need look to it.

Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Mark thee hither, mistress Doll.

Got I: I tell thee what, corporal Bardolph; I tear her:—I'll be revenged on her.

Pray thee, go down.

I'll see her damned first;—to Pluto's lake, to the infernal deep, with Erebus tres vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. down, dogs! down fautors! Have we not re?

Host. Good captain Peesel, be quiet; it is very late, i'faith: I beseek you now, aggravate your cholera.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall packhorses, And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia, Which cannot go but thirty miles a day, Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals, And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar. Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men, like dogs; give crows like pins; Have we not Hiren here?

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? for God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then, feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis: Come, give's some sack.

Si fortuna me tormenta, sperato me contenta.— Fear we broadsides? no, let the feed give fire:

Give me some sack;—and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword.]

Come me to full points here; and are et ceteras nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif: What! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. Thrust him down stairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway nags?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling; nay, if he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbrue?— [Snatching up his sword.]

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds Untwine the sisters three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing, and driving Pistol out.]
Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these terrors and frights. So; murder, I warrant now.—Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.]

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal is gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you.

Host. Are you not hurt i'the groin? methought he made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turned him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, sir. The rascal's drunk: you have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face;—come on, you whoreson chops:—Ah, rogue! i'faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, if thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost, I'll canvas thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Musick.

Page. The musick is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play;—Play, sirs.—Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I'faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew bear-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o'days, and foining o'nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, Prince HENRY and POINS, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: it do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the price of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good pantler, he would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? haeg him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Lewksbury mustard; there is no more conceit in him, than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness; and he plays at quoits well; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons; and rides the wild mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his hood very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories, and such other gambol faculties he hath, that show a weak mind and an able body, for which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois.

P. Hen. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's best him before his whore.

P. Hen. Look, if the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange, that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lipping to his master's old tables; his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Dol. Nay, truly; I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday: thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come: it grows late, we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth thou'lt set me a weeping an thou sayest so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return.—Well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis.

P. Hen. Poins. Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing. Fal. Ha! a hasted son of the king's?—And art not thou Poins his brother?

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead?

Fal. A better than thou; I am a gentleman, thou art a drawer.

P. Hen. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London.—Now the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty,—by this light flesh and corrupt blood thou art welcome. [Leaning his hand upon Doll.

Dol. How! you fat fool, I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to merriment, if you take not the heat.

P. Hen. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman?

Host. 'Blessing o' your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

P. Hen. Yes; and you knew me, as you did, when you ran away by Gads-hill: you knew, I was at your back; and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

P. Hen. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; none.

P. Hen. Not! to dispraise me; and call me a pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what.

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; bone none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him, which doing, I have done the part of a good friend, and a true subject, and thy father I thank me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal;—none;—no, boys, none.

P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear, and cowardice, doth not make thee wrong this gentlewoman to close with us? Is she wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked is the boy of the wicked! Or honest B. whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer. Fal. The fiend hath pricked down B. irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy where he doth nothing but roast malt with the boy.—There is a good angel about him, the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women,—

Fal. For one of them,—she is in hell and burns, poor soul! For the other,—I have money; and whether she be damned for it, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think, quit for that: Marry, there is another in upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten house, contrary to the law; for the which thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: What's a mutton or two in a whole Lent?

P. Hen. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that, which his grace against.

Host. Who knocks so loud at the door of the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

P. Hen. Peto, how now? what news?

Peto. The king your father is at West. And there are twenty weak and wearied. Come from the north: and, as I came about I met, and overtook, a dozen captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the And asking every one for sir John Falst.

P. Hen. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much So idly to profane the precious time; When tempest of commotion, like the so borne with black vapour, doth begin to And drop upon our bare scarred heads Give me my sword, and cloak:—Falstaff, [Exeunt P. Hen. Poins, Peto,

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest moon night, and we must hence, and leave it [A knocking heard.] More knocking at the

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now? what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, a dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. Pay the musicians, sirrah. [To Farewell, hostess;—farewell, Doll.—Y good wenches, how men of merit are set the undeserver may sleep, when the ma is called on. Farewell, good wenches; sent away post, I will see you again ere

Dol. I cannot speak;—If my heart be to burst:—Well, sweet Jack, have a care

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Falstaff and

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have it these twenty-nine years, come peasecod an honest, and truer hearted man,—thee well.

Bard. [Withn.] Mistress Tear-sheet,

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Withn.] Bid mistress Tear-sheet to my master.

Host. O run, Doll, run; run, good Doll!

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A room in the palace.King HENRY in his nightgown, with a Page.

Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick;
they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,
I consider of them: Make good speed.—
[Exit Page.]

my thousand of my poorest subjects his hour asleep!—Sleep, gentle sleep, soft nurse, how have I fought thee,
in no more wilt weigh mine eyelids down,
of my senses in forgetfulness?
ther, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
easy pallets stretching thee,
h'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber;
the perfum'd chambers of the great,
and canopies of costly state,
'd with sounds of sweetest melody?
hull god, why liest thou with the vile some beds; and leav'st the kingly couch,
-case, or a common 'larum bell?
in upon the high and giddy mast
the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains of the rude imperious surge;
be visitation of the winds,
and the ruffian billows by the top,
their monstrous heads, and hanging them
afu'ning clamours in the slippery clouds,
th the hurly, death itself awakes?
son, O partial sleep! give thy repose
yet sea-boy in an hour so rude;
the calmest and most stillest night,
appliances and means to boot,
to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
lies the head, that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

Many good morrows to your majesty!
1. Is it good morrow, lords?
Tis one o'clock, and past.
2. Why then, good morrow to you all, my ds.
I read o'er the letters that I sent you?
We have, my liege.
3. Then you perceive, the body of our edgdom
it is; what rank diseases grow,
what danger, near the heart of it.
4. It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd;
his former strength may be restor'd,
and advice, and little medicine:—
Northumberland will soon be cool'd.
5. O heaven! that one might read the book fate;
the revolution of the times contains level, and the continent of solid firmness,) melt itself sea! and, other times, to see by girdle of the ocean
for Neptune's hips; how chances mock, ages fill the cup of alteration
ers liquors! O, if this were seen, lest youth,—viewing his progress through,
his past, what crosses to ensue,— out the book, and sit him down and die.
on years gone,
hard, and Northumberland, great friends, together, and, in two years after,
y at wars: It is but eight years, since
y was the man nearest my soul;
a brother toil'd in my affairs,
his love and life under my foot;
my sake, even to the eyes of Richard, defiance. But which of you was by, sin Nevil, as I may remember,) [To Warwick.]
chard,—with his eye brimfull of tears, h'd and rated by Northumberland,— these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
rland, thou ladder, by the which

My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne:—
Though then, heaven knows, I had no such intent;
But that necessity so bow'd the state,
That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss:—
The time shall come, thus did he follow it,
The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption:—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition,
And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd:
The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life; which in their seeds,
And weak beginnings, lie intreasur'd.
Such things become the hatch and brood of time;
And, by the necessary form of this,
King Richard might create a perfect gness,
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would, of that seed, grow to a greater falseness;
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities:—
And that same word even now cries out on us;
They say, the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord;
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd:—Please it your grace,
To go to bed; upon my life, my lord,
The powers, that you already have sent forth,
Shall bring this prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance, that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill;
And these unseason'd hours, perforce, must add
Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And, were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.
[Exit.

SCENE II.

Court before Justice Shallow's house in Gloucestershire.Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULL-CALF, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood. And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bed-fellow?
and your fairest daughter, and mine, my goddaughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black ouzel, cousin Shallow.
Shal. By yea, and nay, sir, I dare say, my cousin William is become a good scholar: He is at Oxford, still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir; to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the inns of court shortly:
I was once of Clement's-inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called—lusty Shallow, then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing; and I would have done any thing, indeed, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Stafforshire, and black George Bare, and Francis Pick-bone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man,—you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-rohas were; and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Fal-staff, now sir John, a boy; and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was a crack, not thus high: and the very same day, did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's-inn. O, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Dead!—See, see!—he drew a good bow;—And dead!—he shot a fine shoot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead!—he would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead!

Enter BARDOLPH, and one with him.

Sil. Here come two of sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you: my captain, sir John Falstaff; a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir; I knew him a good backward man: How doth the good knight? may I ask, how my lady's his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated, than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good; yea, indeed, it is: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated!—it comes from accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase, call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase: but I will maintain the word with my sword, to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command. Accommodated; That is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just:—Look, here comes good sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: By my troth, you look well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow:—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Pie! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men.

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll?—Let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so: Yea, marry, sir:—Ralph Mouldy:—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see: Where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an't please you.

Shal. What think you, sir John? a good limbed fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things, that are mouldy, lack use: Very singular good!—In faith, well said, sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before: could have let me alone: my old dame w done now, for one to do her husbandry, drudgery; you need not have pricked n are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy, you shall go. it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside you where you are?—For the other, sir John, me see;—Simon Shadow!

Fal. Ay marry, let me have him to sit: he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough; a father's shadow: so the son of the female shadow of the male: It is often so, and not much of the father's substance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer,—for we have a number of shadows to muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel upon his back, and the whole frame st pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir: do it: I commend you well.—Francis Fee

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may: but if he had been tailor, he would have pricked you,—make as many holes in an enemy's batt hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as va wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mo the woman's tailor well, master Shal. master Shallow.

Fee. I would, Wart might have gone

Fal. I would, thou wert a man's t thou might'st mend him, and make his I cannot put him to a private soldier, a leader of so many thousands: Let t most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Fee is next?

Shal. Peter Bull-calf of the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf!

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. Fore God, a likely fellow!—me Bull-calf, till he roar again.

Bull. O lord! good my lord captain,

Fal. What dost thou roar before thou

Bull. O lord, sir! I am a diseased

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough

I caught with ringing in the king's affair coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars: we will have away thy cold; and I will order, that thy friends shall ring fe here all!

Shal. Here is two more called than ye you must have but four here, sir;—and you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you not tarry dinner. I am glad to see y troth, master Shallow.

Shal. O, sir John, do you remember all night in the windmill in Saint Geo to more of that, good master Shallow, no that.

Ha, it was a merry night. And is Jane work alive?

She lives, master Shallow.

She never could away with me.

Never, never: she would always say, she t' abide master Shallow.

By the mass, I could anger her to the she was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold well?

Old, old, master Shallow.

Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but certain, she's old; and had Robin Night-work ight-work, before I came to Clement's-inn. hat's fifty-five year ago.

Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen t this knight and I have seen!—Ha, sir id I well?

We have heard the chimes at midnight, hallow.

That we have, that we have, that we have; sir John, we have; our watch-word was, is!

—Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to —O, the days that we have seen!—Come,

[Exeunt Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.]

Good master corporate Bardolph, stand d; and here is four Harry ten shillings in rowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own I do not care; but, rather, because I am

g, and, for mine own part, have a desire ith my friends; else, sir, I did not care, own part, so much.

Go to; stand aside.

And good master corporal captain, for my 's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody y thing about her, when I am gone; and I, and cannot help herself: you shall have

Go to; stand aside.

My troth I care not;—a man can die but e owe God a death;—I'll ne'er bear a base

ut't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so: s too good to serve his prince; and, let it way it will, he, that dies this year, is he next.

Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

[Enter FALSTAFF, and Justices.]

Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Four, of which you please.

Sir, a word with you:—I have three pound

ouldy, and Bull-calf.

Go to; well.

Come, sir John, which four will you

o you choose for me.

Marry then,—Mouldy, Bull-calf, Feeble,

low.

ouldy, and Bull-calf:—For you, Mouldy, ome still; you are past service:—and, for

, Bull-calf,—grow till you come unto it;

ne of you.

Sir John, sir John, do not yourself wrong;

your likeliest men, and I would have you th the best.

Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to man? Care I for the limb, the thaves,

e, bull, and big assenblance of a man!

he spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Wart;

what a ragged appearance it is: he shall ce, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that gibbets-on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow,—give me this man; he presents no mark to the enemy; the foe-man may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife: And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off? O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So:—very well;—go to:—very good:—exceeding good.—O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald shot.—Well said, i'faith Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's-master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's inn,—I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,) there was a little quiver fellow, and 'a would manage you his piece thus: and 'a would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in; rah, tah, tah, would 'a say; bounce, would 'a say; and away again would 'a go, and again would 'a come:—I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.

—God keep you, master Silence; I will not use many words with you:—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.

—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, heaven bless you, and prosper your affairs, and send us peace! As you return, visit my house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure, I will with you to the court.

Fal. I would you would, master Shallow.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke, at a word. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Shallow and Silence.]

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of justice Shallow.

Lord, lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbull-street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when he was asked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: he was the very Genius of famine;

yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him—mandrake: he came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion; and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware—they were his fancies, or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard; and then he burst his head, for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it; and told

John of Gaunt, he beat his own name: for you might have truss'd him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beeves. Well; I will be acquainted with him, if I return: and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me: If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason, in the law of nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

A forest in Yorkshire.

Archbishop of YORK, MOWBRAY,

HASTINGS, and Others.

What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree forest, an't shall please your grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send discoveries forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends, and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenour, and substance, thus:—
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality,
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland: and concludes in hearty prayers,
That your attempts may overlive the hazard,
And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground,
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy:
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion, that we gave them out.
Let us sway on, and face them in the field.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think, it is my lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The prince, lord John and duke of Launcester.

Arch. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in peace;
What doth concern your coming?

West. Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rage,
And countenanc'd by boys, and beggary;
I say, if dam'd commotion so appear'd,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection

With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,— Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd;
Whose hand the silver hand of peace hath touch'd;
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd;
Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,—
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself,
Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace,
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war?
Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances; and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet, and a point of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this?—so the question stands.

Briefly to this end:—We are all diseas'd;
And, with our surfeiting, and wanton hours,
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician;
Nor do I, as an enemy to peace,
Troop in the throngs of military men:
But, rather, show awhile like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness;
And purge the obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run,
And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion:
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles;
Which, long ere this, we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience:
When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our griefs,
We are denied access unto his person.
Even by those men, that most have done us wrong.
The dangers of the days but newly gone,
(Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood,) and the examples

Of every minute's instance, (present now,
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms;
Not to break peace, or any branch of it;
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal
Wherein have you been galled by the king?
What peer hath been suborn'd to grate of
That you should seal this lawless bloody
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the common
To brother born an household cruelty,
I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such reason.
Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him, in part; and
That feel the bruises of the days before;
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honours!

West. O my good lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities,
And you shall say indeed,—it is the time
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the king, or in the present fit,
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on: Were you not restor'd
To all the duke of Norfolk's signiorities,
Your noble and right-well-remember'd father's

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my lord
That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in
The king, that lov'd him, as the state set
Was, force perforce, compell'd to banish
And then, when Harry Bolingbroke, and Being mounted, and both roused in their
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beav'd
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sigh

West. You speak, lord Mowbray, now, not what:

The earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman Who knows, on whom fortune would smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry:
For all the country, in a general voice,
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayer
Were set on Hereford, whom they dete
And bless'd, and grac'd indeed, more th

Hast. Hath the prince John a full co
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon

4. That is intended in the general's name :
 5. You make so slight a question.
 6. Then take, my lord of Westmoreland, this schedule ;
 is contains our general grievances :—
 several article herein redress'd ;
 members of our cause, both here and hence,
 are insinew'd to this action,
 led by a true substantial form ;
 resent execution of our wills and to our purposes, consign'd ;
 me within our awful banks again,
 sit our powers to the arm of peace.
 7. This will I shew the general. Please you,
 ords,
 it of both our battles we may meet :
 ther end in peace, which heaven so frame !
 the place of difference call the swords must decide it.

My lord, we will do so.
 [Exit Westmoreland.]

8. There is a thing within my bosom tells me, o conditions of our peace can stand.
 9. Fear you not that : if we can make our peace ocb large terms, and so absolute, conditions shall consist upon,
 ace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.
 10. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
 very slight, and false-derived cause,
 very idle, nice, and wanton reason,
 so the king, taste of this action :
 here our royal faiths martyrs in love,
 all be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
 ren our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
 od from bad find no partition.

No, no, my lord ; Note this,—the king is eary
 ty and such picking grievances :
 hath found,—to end one doubt by death,
 two greater in the heirs of life.
 before will he wipe his tables clean ;
 up no tell-tale to his memory,
 sy repeat and history his loss remembrance : For full well he knows, not so precisely weed this land,
 misdoubts present occasion :
 are so enroved with his friends,
 lucking to unfix an enemy,
 unfasten so, and shake a friend.
 this land, like an offensive wife,
 th enrag'd him on to offer strokes ;
 striking, holds his infant up,
 igs resolv'd correction in the arm,
 is unprear'd to execution.

Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods offenders, that he now doth lack instruments of chastisement :
 his power, like a fangless lion,
 n, but not hold.
 'Tis very true ;—
 before be assur'd, my good lord marshal.
 now make our atonement well, ce will, like a broken limb united,
 ronger for the breaking.

Be it so.

return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

The prince is here at hand : pleaseth your rdship,
 his grace just distance 'tween our armies ?
 Your grace of York, in God's name then t forward.
 Before, and greet his grace :—my lord, we
 me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another part of the forest.

From one side, MOWBRAY, the Archbishop,
 INGS, and Others : from the other side,
 JOHN of Lancaster, WESTMORE-l, Officers, and Attendants.

e. You are well encounter'd here, my asin Mowbray :—
 r to you, gentle lord archbishop ;—

And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.—
 My lord of York, it better show'd with you,
 When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
 Encircled you, to hear with reverence
 Your exposition on the holy text ;
 Than now to see you here an iron man,
 Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
 Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
 That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
 And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
 Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
 Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroad,
 In shadow of such greatness ! With you, lord bishop,
 It is even so :—Who hath not heard it spoken,
 How deep you were within the books of God ?
 To us, the speaker in his parliament ;
 To us, the imagin'd voice of God himself ;
 The very opener, and intelligencer,
 Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
 And our dull workings : O, who shall believe,
 But you misuse the reverence of your place ;
 Employ the countenance and grace of heaven,
 As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
 In deeds dishonourable ? You have taken up,
 Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
 The subjects of his substitute, my father ;
 And, both against the peace of heaven and him,
 Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,
 I am not here against your father's peace :
 But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,
 The time disorder'd doth, in common sense,
 Crowd us, and crush us, to this monstrous form,
 To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
 The parcels and particulars of our grief ;
 The which hath been with scorn show'd from the court,

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born :
 Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep,
 With grant of our most just and right desires ;
 And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
 Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes ;
 To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
 We have supplies to second our attempt ;
 If they miscarry, theirs shall second them :
 And so, success of mischief shall be born ;
 And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up,
 Whiles England shall have generation.

P. Hen. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,
 To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your grace, to answer them directly,

How far-forth you do like their articles ?

P. John. I like them all, and do allow them well :
 And swear here by the honour of my blood,
 My father's purposes have been mistook ;
 And some about him have too lavishly
 Wrested his meaning, and authority.—

My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd ;
 Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you,
 Discharge your powers unto their several counties,
 As we will ours : and here, between the armies,
 Let's drink together friendly, and embrace ;
 That all their eyes may bear those tokens home,
 Of our restored love, and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these re-dresses.

P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my word :

And thereupon I drink unto your grace.
 Hast. Go, captain, [To an Officer.] and deliver to the army,

This news of peace ; let them have pay, and part :
 I know, it will well please them ; His these, captain.
 [Exit Officer.]

Arch. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland.
 West. I pledge your grace : And, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd, to breed this present peace,
 You would drink freely : but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Arch. I do not doubt you.
 West. I am glad of it,—

Health to my lord, and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season; For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Arch. Against ill chances, men are ever merry; But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus,—Some good thing comes to-morrow.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit. Arch. So much the worse, if your own rule be true. [Shouts within.]

P. John. The word of peace is render'd; Hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest; For then both parties nobly are subdued, And neither party loser.

P. John. Go, my lord, And let our army be discharged too.— [Exit Westmoreland.]

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains March by us; that we may peruse the men We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good lord Hastings, And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by. [Exit Hastings.]

P. John. I trust, my lords, we shall lie to-night together.—

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand,

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already: Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,

Each hurries toward his home, and sporting-place. West. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:—

And you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord Mowbray, Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

P. John. I pawn'd thee none:

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances,

Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,

I will perform with a most christian care.

But, for you, rebels,—look to taste the due

Meet for rebellion, and such acts as yours.

Most shallowly did you these arms commence,

Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.—

Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray;

Heaven, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.—

Some guard these traitors to the block of death;

Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another part of the forest.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you; and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is—Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name; a knight is your degree; and your place, the dale: Coleville shall still be your name; a traitor your degree; and the dungeon your place,—a place deep enough; so shall you still be Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whose'er I am. Do ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think, you are sir John Falstaff; that thought, yield me.

 Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; here will I visit master Robert Shallow, : I have him already tempering between my and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with Come away. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

Westminster. A room in the palace.

King HENRY, CLARENCE, Prince HUMPHREY, WARWICK, and others.

en. Now, lords, if heaven doth give successful end a debate, that bleedeth at our doors, ill our youth lead on to higher fields,
 raw no swords but what are sanctified.
 My is address'd, our power collected, substitutes in absence well invested,
 every thing lies level to our wish:
 we want a little personal strength;
 use us, till these rebels, now afoot, underneath the yoke of government.

Both which, we doubt not but your majesty soon enjoy.

en. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester, is the prince your brother?

ump. I think, he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

en. And how accompanied?

ump. I do not know, my lord.

en. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

ump. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

What would my lord and father?

en. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

hance, thou art not with the prince thy brother? es thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas; hast a better place in his affection, all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy; able offices thou may'st effect

diation, after I am dead, on his greatness and thy other brethren:— ore, omit him not; blunt not his love:

use the good advantage of his grace,

By seeming cold, or careless of his will.
 For he is gracious, if he be observ'd;
 He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
 Open as day for melting charity:
 Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;
 As humorous as winter, and as sudden
 As flaws congeal'd in the spring of day.
 His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd:
 Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
 When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth:
 But, being moody, give him lice and scope;
 Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
 Confound themselves with working. Learn this,
 Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends;
 A hoop of gold, to bind thy brothers in;
 That the united vessel of their blood,
 Mingled with venom of suggestion,
 (As, force perforce, the age will pour it in,)
 Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
 As aconitum, or rash gunpowder.

Cl. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

Cl. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? can'st thou tell that?

Cl. With Poinis, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
 And he, the noble image of my youth,
 Is overspread with them: Therefore my grief
 Stretches itself beyond the hour of death;
 The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape,
 In forms imaginary, the unguided days,
 And rotten times, that you shall look upon
 When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
 For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
 When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
 When means and lavish manners meet together,
 O, with what wings shall his affections fly
 Toward fronting peril and oppo's'd decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:
 The prince but studies his companions,
 Like a strange tongue: wherein, to gain the language,
 'Tis needful, that the most immodest word
 Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attain'd,
 Your highness knows, comes to no further use,
 But to be known, and hated. So, like gross terms,
 The prince will, in the perfectness of time,
 Cast off his followers: and their memory
 Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
 By which his grace must mete the lives of others;
 Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom, when the bee doth leave her comb
 In the dead carrion.—Who's here? Westmoreland?

Enter WESTMORELAND.

West. Health to my sovereign! and new happiness

Added to that, that I am to deliver!
 Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's hand:
 Mowbray, the bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
 Are brought to the correction of your law;
 There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
 But peace pnts forth her olive every where.
 The manner how this action hath been borne,
 Here at more leisure may your highness read;
 With every course, in his particular.

K. Hen. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird,

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
 The lifting up of day. Look! here's more news.

Enter HARCOURT.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
 And, when they stand against you, may they fall
 As those, that I am come to tell you of!
 The earl Northumberland, and the lord Bardolph,
 With a great power of English, and of Scots,
 Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown:
 The manner and true order of the fight,
 This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will fortune never come with both hands full,

But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
 She either gives a stomach, and no food,—
 Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast,
 And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich,
 That have abundance, and enjoy it not.
 I should rejoice now at this happy news;
 And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy:—
 O me! come near me, now I am much ill. [Swoons.]
P. Humph. Comfort your majesty!

Cl. O my royal father!
West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself,
 look up!

War. Be patient, princes; you do know these fits

Are with his highness very ordinary.
 Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.

Cl. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs;

The incessant care and labour of his mind
 Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it in,
 So thin, that life looks through, and will break
 out.

P. Humph. The people fear me; for they do observe

Unfather'd heirs, and loathly births of nature:
 The seasons change their manners, as the year
 Had found some months asleep, and leap'd them over.

Cl. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between:

And the old folk, time's dotting chronicles,
 Say, it did so, a little time before That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.
P. Humph. This apoplex will, certain, be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me
 hence

Into some other chamber: softly, 'pray.
 [They convey the King into an inner part of the room, and place him on a bed.]

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
 Unless some dull and favourable hand
 Will whisper musick to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the musick in the other room.
K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cl. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.
War. Less noise, less noise.

Enter Prince HENRY.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?
Cl. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?
P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?
 Tell it him.

P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.
P. Hen. If he be sick

With joy, he will recover without physick.
War. Not so much noise, my lords:—sweet prince, speak low;

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.
Cl. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Wilt please your grace to go along with us?
P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king. [Exeunt all but P. Henry.]

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
 Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
 That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night!—sleep with it now!
 Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,

As he, whose brow, with homely biggin bound,
 Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
 Like a rich armour, worn in heat of day,

That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
 There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:

Did he suspire, that light and weightless down
 Performe must move.—My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep,

That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
 So many English kings. Thy due, from
 Is tears, and heavy sorrows of the blood;
 Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
 Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously:
 My due, from thee, is this imperial crown;
 Which, as immediate from thy place and Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits,— [Putting it on his head.]

Which heaven shall guard: And put the whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force
 This lineal honour from me: This from the Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me.

He is not here.

K. Hen. O my son!
 Heaven put it in thy mind, to take it hence,
 That thou might'st win the more thy father's love,
 Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
 Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed;
 And hear, I think, the very latest counsel,
 That ever I shall breathe. Heaven knows, my son,
 By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
 I met this crown; and I myself know well,
 How troublesome it sat upon my head:
 To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
 Better opinion, better confirmation;
 For all the soil of the achievement goes
 With me into the earth. It seem'd in me,
 But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand;
 And I had many living, to upbraid
 My gain of it by their assistances;
 Which daily grew to quarrel, and to bloodshed,
 Wounding supposed peace: all these bold fears,
 Thou see'st, with peril I have answered:
 For all my reign hath been but as a scene
 Acting that argument; and now my death
 Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,
 Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
 So thou the garland wear'st successively.
 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
 Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
 And all thy friends, which thou must make thy friends,
 Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
 By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
 And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
 To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
 I cut them off; and had a purpose now
 To lead out many to the Holy Land;
 Lest rest, and lying still, might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
 Be it thy course, to busy giddy minds
 With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,
 May waste the memory of the former days.
 More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
 That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
 How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
 And grant it may with thee in true peace live!
P. Hen. My gracious liege,
 You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
 Then plain, and right, must my possession be:
 Which I, with more than with a common pain,
 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.
Enter Prince JOHN of Lancaster, WARWICK, Lords, and Others.
K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.
P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!
K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness, and peace, son John;
 But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
 From this bare, wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
 My worldly business makes a wrong.—
 Where is my lord of Warwick?
P. Hen. My lord of Warwick!
K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
 Unto the lodging, where I first did swoon?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.
K. Hen. Laud be to God!—even there my life must end.
 It hath been prophesied to me many years,
 I should not die but in Jerusalem;
 Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land:—
 But, bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie;
 In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Gloucestershire. A hall in Shallow's house.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pye, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy!

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see, Davy; let me see;—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus;—those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir,—Shall we sow the headland with wheat?

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook;—Are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir.—Here is now the smith's note, for shoeing, and plough-irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid:—sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had:—And, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. He shall answer it:—Some pigeons, Davy; a couple of short-legged hens; a joint of mutton; and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yes, Davy. I will use him well; A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor; that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship, that he is a knave, sir: but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, these eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, sir John? Come, off with your boots.—Give me your hand, master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph:—and welcome, my tall fellow. [To the Page.] Come, sir John. [Exit Shallow.]

Fal. I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, look to our horses. [Recount Bardolph and Page.] If I were saw'd into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's-staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: They, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving man; their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humour his men, with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow, man could better command his servants. It tain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant care is caught, as men take diseases, one of as therefore, let men take heed of their company: will devise matter enough out of this Shallow keep prince Harry in continual laughter, the ing-out of six fashions, (which is four times two actions,) and he shall laugh without vallums. O, it is much, that a lie, with oath, and a jest, with a sad brow, will do a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulder. O, you shall see him laugh, till his face be wet cloak ill laid up.

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, master Shallow; I come, Shallow. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Westminster. A room in the Palace.

Enter WARWICK, and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my lord chief justice? away!

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now away.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of

And, to our purposes, he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would, his majesty had done with him:

The service, that I truly did his life, Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed, I think, the young king is not.

Ch. Just. I know, he doth not; and myself.

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter King HENRY V.

Ch. Just. Good morrow; and heaven

majesty!

This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,
 so easy on me as you think.—
 You mix your sadness with some fear;
 the English, not the Turkish court;
 ourath an Amurath succeeds,
 Harry Harry: Yet be sad, good brothers, speak truth, it very well becomes you;
 so royally in you appears,
 will deeply put the fashion on,
 as it is in my heart. Why then, be sad:
 certain no more of it, good brothers,
 joint burden laid upon us all.
 by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
 your father and your brother too;
 but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.
 ep, that Harry's dead; and so will I:
 rry lives, that shall convert those tears,
 ber, into hours of happiness.
 ka, &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

You all look strangely on me;—and you most; [To the Chief Justice.
 I think, assur'd I love you not.
 ust. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly, aiesty hath no just cause to hate me.

No!
 ight a prince of my great hopes forget
 t indignities you laid upon me?
 rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison mediate heir of England! Was this easy?
 s be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?
 ust. I then did use the person of your father;

age of his power lay then in me:
 the administration of his law,
 I was busy for the commonwealth,
 ghness pleased to forget my place,
 jesty and power of law and justice,
 age of the king, whom I presented,
 uck me in my very seat of judgment;
 n, as an offender to your father,
 old way to my authority,
 I commit you. If the deed were ill, contented, wearing now the garland,
 a son set your decrees at naught;
 k down justice from your awful bench;
 the course of law, and blunt the sword,
 ards the peace and safety of your person:
 ore; to spurn at your most royal image,
 ck your workings in a second body.
 a your royal thoughts, make the case yours;
 the father, and propose a son:
 ur own dignity so much profan'd,
 r most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
 yourself so by a son disdain'd;
 n imagine me taking your part,
 your power, soft silencing your son:
 is cold consideration, sentence me;
 you are a king, speak in your state,— have done, that miscame my place, son, or my liege's sovereignty.

You are right, justice, and you weigh this
 all;
 re still bear the balance, and the sword:
 lo wish your honours may increase,
 I do live to see a son of mine
 you, and obey you, as I did.
 I live to speak my father's words;—
 sm I, that have a man so bold, res do justice on my proper son:
 t less happy, having such a son, uld deliver up his greatness so hands of justice.—You did commit me:
 ich, I do commit into your hand stained sword, that you have used to bear;
 tis remembrance,—that you use the same
 e like bold, just, and impartial spirit, have done 'gainst me. There is my hand;
 ll be as a father to my youth:
 e shall stoop as you do prompt mine ear;
 ill stoop and humble my intents well-practic'd, wise directions.—
 mees all, believe me, I beseech you;— er is gone wild into his grave, us tomb lie my affections;
 th his spirit sadly I survive,

To mock the expectation of the world;
 To frustrate prophecies; and to raze out
 Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
 After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
 Hath proudly flow'd in vanity, till now:
 Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea;
 Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
 And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
 Now call we our high court of parliament:
 And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
 That the great body of our state may go
 In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
 That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
 As things acquainted and familiar to us;—
 In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.—

[To the Lord Chief Justice.
 Our coronation done, we will accite,
 As I before remember'd, all our state:
 And (God consigning to my good intents,)
 No prince, nor peer, shall have just cause to say,—
 Heaven shorten Harry's happy life one day.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Gloucestershire. The garden of Shallow's house.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE,
 BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard; where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth;—come, cousin Silence;—and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, sir John:—marry, good air.—Spread,
 Davy; spread, Davy; well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man, and your husbandman.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, sir John.—By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper.—A good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down:—come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a,—we shall Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer, [Singing.

And praise heaven for the merry year;
 When flesh is cheap, and females dear,
 And lusty lads roam here and there,
 So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart!—Good master Silence, I'll give ye a health for that anon.

Shal. Give master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit: [Seating Bardolph and the Page at another table.] I'll be with you anon:—
 most sweet sir, sit.—Master page, good master page, sit: proface! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink. But you must bear; and the heart's all. [Exit.

Shal. Be merry, master Bardolph; and my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife's as all;
 [Singing.

For women are shrews, both short and tall:
 'Tis merry in hall, when beads wag all,
 And welcome merry shrove-tide.

Be merry, be merry, &c.

Fal. I did not think, master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once,
 ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There is a dish of leather-coats for you.
 [Setting them before Bardolph.

Shal. Davy,—

Davy. Your worship?—I'll be with you straight.
 [To Bard.]—A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. A cup of wine, that's brisk and fine,
 And drink unto the leman mine; [Singing.
 And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry;—now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come;

I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: If thou wantest any thing, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart.—Welcome, my little tiny thief; [To the Page.] and welcome, indeed, too—I'll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleros about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together. Ha! will you not, master Bardolph?

Bard. Yes, sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thank thee:—The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: he will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look who's at door there: Ho! who knocks? [Exit Davy.]

Fal. Why, now you have done me right.

[To Silence, who drinks a bumper.]

Sil. Do me right,

And dub me knight:

Samingo.

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why, then say, an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. An it please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court? let him come in.—

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol?

Pist. God save you, sir John!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind that blows no man to good.—Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in the realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think 'a be; but Goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff?

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—Sir John, I am thy Pistol, and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee; And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, And golden times, and happy news of price.

Fal. I pry'thee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A foutra for the world, and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa, and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news?

Let king Cophetua know the truth thereof

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John. [Stings.]

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir;—If, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it, there is but two ways: either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die.

Shal. Under king Harry.

Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?

Shal. Harry the fourth.

Pist. A foutra for thine office!—

Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;

Harry the fifth's the man. I speak the truth:

When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just.

Fal. Away, Bardolph; saddle my horse.—Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine.—Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!—I would not take a knight-hood for my fortune.

Pist. What? do I bring good news?

Fal. Carry master Silence to bed.—Master low, my lord Shallow, be what thou wilt fortune's steward.—Get on thy boots; and all night.—O, sweet Pistol.—Away, B. [Exit Bard.].—Come, Pistol, utter more and, withal, devise something to do thyself.—Boot, boot, master Shallow; I know thy king is sick for me. Let us take any man's laws of England are at my comma. Happy are they which have been my friends; woe to my lord chief justice?

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lung Where is the life that late I led, say they:
Why, here it is; welcome these pleasant

Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would die, that I might have thee hanged: 't is drawn my shoulder out of joint.

I Bead. The constables have delivered me to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer I warrant her: There hath been a mar-lately killed about her.

ot to me with a fool-born jest ;

not, that I am the thing I was :

ven doth know, so shall the world perceive,

save turn'd away my former self ;

I those, that kept me company.

how dost hear I am as I have been,

h me ; and thou shalt be as thou wast,

ir and the feeder of my riots :

h, I banish thee, on pain of death,— re done the rest of my misleaders,— come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life, I will allow you ;

That lack of means enforce you not to evil :

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will,—according to your strength, and qualities,—

Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my lord, To see perform'd the tenor of our word.—

Set on. [Exeunt King and his Train.]

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, sir John ; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this ; I shall be sent for in private to him : look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancement ; I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how ; unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word : this that you heard, was but a colour.

Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in, sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours ; go with me to dinner. Come, lieutenant Pistol, come, Bardolph :—I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince JOHN, the Chief Justice, Officers, &c.

Ch. Just. Go, carry sir John Falstaff to the Fleet ; Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord,—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak : I will hear you soon.

Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero me contenta. [Exeunt Fal. Shal. Pist. Bard. Page, and Officers.]

P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the king's : He hath intent, his wonted followers

Shall all be very well provided for ;

But all are banish'd, till their conversations

Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

P. John. I will lay odds,—that, ere this year expire,

We bear our civil swords, and native fire,

As far as France : I heard a bird so sing,

Whose musick, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.

Come, will you hence ? [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

t, my fear ; then, my court'sy : last, my My fear is, your displeasure ; my court'sy, and my speech, to beg your pardons. If for a good speech now, you undo me : for me to say, is of mine own making ; and deed, I should say, will, I doubt, prove a marring. But to the purpose, and so to re.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well,) tly here in the end of a displeasing play, to r patience for it, and to promise you a better. an, indeed, to pay you with this ; which, if, I venture, it come unluckily home, I break, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promise ould be, and here I commit my body to your hate me some, and I will pay you some, and, debtors do, promise you infinitely. tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs ? and yet that were but light payment,—to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me ; if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France : where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions ; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary ; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night : and so kneel down before you ;—but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

CHORUS.

Enter CHORUS.

O, for a muse of fire, that would ascend
 The brightest heaven of invention!
 A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
 And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
 Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
 Assume the port of Mars; and, at his heels, Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and
 fire,

Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
 The flat unraised spirit, that hath dar'd,
 On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth
 So great an object: Can this cockpit hold
 The vasty fields of France? or may we cram
 Within this wooden O, the very casques,
 That did affright the air at Agincourt?
 O, pardon! since a crooked figure may
 Attest, in little place, a million;

And let us, ciphers to this great account,
 On your imaginary forces work:
 Suppose, within the girdle of these walls
 Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
 Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
 The perilous, narrow ocean parts asunder.
 Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts:
 Into a thousand parts divide one man,
 And make imaginary puissance:
 Think, when we talk of horses, that you see
 Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth
 For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our stage,
 Carry them here and there; jumping o'er times
 Turning the accomplishment of many years
 Into an hour-glass; For the which supply,
 Admit me chorus to this history;
 Who, prologue-like, your humble patience
 Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. An antechamber in the King's palace.

Enter the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, and
 Bishop of ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self-bill is urg'd,
 Which, in the eleventh year o' the last king's reign
 Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
 But that the scuffling and unquiet time
 Did push it out of further question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
 Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
 We lose the better half of our possession:
 For all the temporal lands, which men devout
 By testament have given to the church,
 Would they strip from us; being valued thus,—
 As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,
 Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred knights;
 Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
 And, to relief of lazars, and weak age,
 Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
 A hundred alms-houses, right well supplied;
 And to the coffers of the king beside,
 A thousand pounds by the year: Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and

Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The king is full of grace, and fair

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it

The breath no sooner left his father's body,
 But that his wildness, mortified in him,
 Seem'd to die too: yea, at that very moment,
 Consideration like an angel came,
 And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him;
 Leaving his body as a paradise,
 To envelop and contain celestial spirits.
 Never was such a sudden scholar made:
 Never came reformation in a flood,
 With such a heady current, scouring faults;
 Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness
 So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
 As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
 And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
 You would desire, the king were made a prelate.
 Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,

HENRY V.

Act 5. Sc. 2.

Published by W. Pickering 57 Chancery Lane 1824

You would say,—it hath been all-in-all his study:
 Last his discourse of war, and you shall hear
 A fearful battle render'd you in musick:
 Turn him to any cause of policy,
 The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
 Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
 The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
 And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
 To steal his sweet and honeyed sentences;
 So that the art and practick part of life
 Must be the mistress to this theorick:
 Which is a wonder, how his grace should glean it,
 Since his addiction was to courses vain:
 His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
 His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;
 And never noted in him any study,
 Any retirement, any sequestration
 From open haunts and popularity.

Ep. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle;
 And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best,
 Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality:

And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
 Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
 Gave like the summer-grass, fastest by night,
 Concess, yet crescive in his faculty.

Cont. It must be so: for miracles are ceas'd;
 And therefore we must needs admit the means,
 How things are perfected.

Ep. But, my good lord,
 How now for mitigation of this bill
 Ur'd by the commons? Doth his majesty
 Incline to it, or no?

Cont. He seems indifferent;
 Or, rather, swaying more upon our part,
 Thus cherishing the exhibitors against us:
 For I have made an offer to his majesty,—
 Upon our spiritual convocation;

And in regard of causes now in hand,
 Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
 As touching France,—to give a greater sum
 Than ever at one time the clergy yet
 Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ep. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

 Save, that there was not time enough to hear
 (As I perceiv'd, his grace would fain have done,)
 The severals, and unhidden passages,
 Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms;
 And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
 Deriv'd from Edward, his great grandfather.

Ep. What was the impediment, that broke this off?

Cont. The French ambassador, upon that instant,
 Crav'd audience: and the hour, I think, is come,
 To give him hearing: Is it four o'clock?

Ep. It is.

Cont. Then go we in, to know his embassy;
 Which I could, with a ready guess, declare,
 Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ep. I'll wait upon you; and I long to hear it.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room of state in the same.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND,
 and Attendants.

E. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

E. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege?

E. Hen. Not yet, my cousin; we would be resolv'd,

Before we hear him, of some things of weight,

That touch our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, and
 Bishop of ELY.

Cont. God, and his angels, guard your sacred throne,

And make you long become it!

E. Hen. Sure, we thank you.

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed;

And justify and religiously unfold,

Why the law Salique, that they have in France,

Our should, or should not, bar us in our claim.

And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,

That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul
 With opening titles miscreate, whose right
 Suits not in native colours with the truth;
 For God doth know, how many, now in health,
 Shall drop their blood in approbation
 Of that your reverence shall incite us to:
 Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,
 How you awake the sleeping sword of war;
 We charge you in the name of God, take heed:
 For never two such kingdoms did contend,
 Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops
 Are every one a woe, a sore complaint,
 'Gainst him, whose wrongs give edge unto the swords,

That make such waste in brief mortality.
 Under this conjuration, speak, my lord:
 And we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
 That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd
 As pure as sin with baptism.

Cont. Then hear me, gracious sovereign,—and you peers,

That owe your lives, your faith, and services,
 To this imperial throne;—There is no bar
 To make against your highness' claim to France,
 But this, which they produce from Pharamond,—
In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant,
No woman shall succeed in Salique land:
 Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze,
 To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
 The founder of this law and female bar.
 Yet their own authors faithfully affirm,
 That the land Salique lies in Germany,
 Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe:

Where Charles the great, having subdued the Saxons,
 There left behind and settled certain French;
 Who, holding in disdain the German women,
 For some dishonest manners of their life,
 Establish'd there this law,—to wit, no female
 Should be inheritrix in Salique land;

Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
 Is at this day in Germany, call'd—Meisen.

Thus doth it well appear, the Salique law
 Was not devised for the realm of France:

Nor did the French possess the Salique land
 Until four hundred one and twenty years
 After defunction of king Pharamond,

Idly succup'd the founder of this law;
 Who died within the year of our redemption

Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
 Beyond the river Sala, in the year

Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
 King Pepin, which deposed Childerick,
 Did, as heir general, being descended

Of Blithild, which was daughter to king Clothair,
 Make claim and title to the crown of France.

Hugh Capet also,—that usurp'd the crown
 Of Charles the duke of Lorain, sole heir male
 Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—

To fine his title with some show of truth,
 (Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught),
 Convey'd himself as heir to the lady Lingare,

Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
 To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
 Of Charles the great. Also king Lewis the tenth,

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
 Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
 Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied

That fair queen Isabel, his grandmother,
 Was lineal of the lady Ermengare,
 Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of Lorain:

By the which marriage, the line of Charles the great
 Was re-united to the crown of France.

So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
 King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
 King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear

To hold in right and title of the female:
 So do the kings of France unto this day;
 Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law,
 To bar your highness claiming from the female;

And rather choose to hide them in a net,
 Than amply to imbare their crooked titles,
 Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I, with right and conscience, make this claim?

Cont. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!

For in the book of Numbers is it writ,—
When the son dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back unto your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great grandsire's tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great uncle's, Edward the black prince;
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France;
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling, to behold his lion's whelp
Forge in blood of French nobility.
O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France;
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage, that renowned them,
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Ese. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know, your grace hath cause, and means, and might;

So hath your highness; never king of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects;
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood, and sword, and fire, to win your right:
In aid whereof, we of the spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum,
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French;
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign, Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read, that my great grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fullness of his force;
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays;
Girding with grievous siege, castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook, and trembled at the ill neighbourhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege:

For hear her but exempl'd by herself,—
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray,
The king of Scots; whom she did send to France,
To fill king Edward's fame with prisoner kings;
And make your chronicle as rich with praise,
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.

West. But there's a saying, very old and true,—

If that you will France win,

Then with Scotland first begin:

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs;
Playing the mouse, in absence of the cat,
To spoil and havock more than she can eat.

Ese. It follows then, the cat must stay at home:
Yet that is but a cur's'd necessity;
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
The advised head defends itself at home:
For government, though high, and low, and lower,

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent;
Congruing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. True; therefore doth heaven

The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience; for so work the honey bees;
Creatures, that, by a rule in nature, teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.

They have a king, and officers of sorts:
Where some, like magistrates, correct at law;
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad;
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring
To the tent-royal of their emperor:

Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The stinging masons building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate;

The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,—

That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariwise;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark;

As many several ways meet in one town
As many fresh streams run in one self sea
As many lines close in the dial's centre;
So many a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well born
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege,

Divide your happy England into four:
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shew
If we, with thrice that power left at home,
Cannot defend our own door from the do

Let us be worried; and our nation lose
The name of hardiness, and policy.

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent to Dauphin.

[Exit an Attendant. The King enters throne.]

Now are we well resolv'd: and,—by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our use,
Or break it all to pieces: Or there we'll Ruling, in large and ample empery,
O'er France and all her almost kingly isles,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them;
Either our history shall, with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts; or else our graves
Like Turkish mutes, shall have a tongueless
Not worship'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the news
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for, we hear,
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

Amb. May it please your majesty, to give Freely to render what we have in charge,
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning, and our embassy?

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian;
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prison:
Therefore, with frank, and with uncurbed
Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

Amb. Thus then

Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in that
Of your great predecessor, king Edward
In answer of which claim, the prince of Wales
Says,—that you savour too much of you
And bids you be advis'd, there's nought
That can be with a nimble galliard won
You cannot revel into dukedoms there:

He therefore sends you, meeter for your
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this Desires you, let the dukedoms, that you Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin
K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?

Tennis-balls, my liege.
Hen. We are glad, the Dauphin is so pleasant with us ; present, and your pains, we thank you for : as we have match'd our rackets to these balls, will, in France, by God's grace, play a set, I strike his father's crown into the hazard : him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler, all the courts of France will be disturb'd chaces. And we understand him well, he comes o'er as with our wilder days, measuring what use we made of them. never valu'd this poor seat of England ; therefore, living hence, did give ourself unbarous license ; As 'tis ever common, men are merriest when they are from home. all the Dauphin,—I will keep my state ; as a king, and show my sail of greatness, so I do rouse me in my throne of France : hat I have laid by my majesty, mudded like a man for working-days ; will rise there with so full a glory, I will dazzle all the eyes of France, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. all the pleasant prince,—this mock of his turn'd his balls to gun-stones ; and his soul stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance, shall fly with them : for many a thousand widows Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands ; Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down ; And some are yet ungotten, and unborn, That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn. But this lies all within the will of God, To whom I do appeal ; And in whose name, Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on, To vengeance as I may, and to put forth My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause. So, get you hence in peace ; and tell the Dauphin, His jest will savour but of shallow wit, When thousands weep more than did laugh at it.— Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Ambassadors.]

Ere. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.

[Descends from his throne.]

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour, That may give furtherance to our expedition : For we have now no thought in us but France ; Save those to God, that run before our business. Therefore, let our proportions for these wars Be soon collected ; and all things thought upon, That may, with reasonable swiftness, add More feathers to our wings ; for, God before, We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door. Therefore, let every man now task his thought, That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

Enter CHORUS.

Now all the youth of England are on fire, Iken dalliance in the wardrobe lies ; thrive the armourers, and honour's thought's solely in the breast of every man : sell the pasture now, to buy the horse ; ring the mirror of all Christian kings winged heels, as English Mercuries. now sits Expectation in the air ; rides a sword, from hilt unto the point, crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets, s'd to Harry, and his followers. trench, advis'd by good intelligence's most dreadful preparation, in their fear ; and with pale policy's divert the English purposes. land !—model to thy inward greatness, little body with a mighty heart,— might'st thou do, that honour would thee do, all thy children kind and natural ! e thy fault ! France hath in thee found out of hollow bosoms, which she fills treacherous crowns : and three corrupted men,— Richard earl of Cambridge ; and the second, lord Scroop of Masham ; and the third, Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland,— for the gift of France, (O guilt, indeed !) a'd conspiracy with fearful France ; r their hands this grace of kings must die, l and treason hold their promises,) take ship for France, and in Southampton. your patience on ; and well digest use of distance, while we force a play. m is paid ; the traitors are agreed ; og is set from London ; and the scene transported, gentles, to Southampton : s the playhouse now, there must you sit : ece to France shall we convey you safe, ing you back, charming the narrow seas s you gentle pass ; for, if we may, not offend one stomach with our play. ll the king come forth, and not till then, outhampton do we shift our scene. [Exit.]

SCENE I.

The same. Eastcheap.

Enter NYM and BARDOLPH.

Well met, corporal Nym.

Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are ancient Pistol and you friends yet ?

Nym. For my part, I care not : I say little ; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles ;—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight ; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron : It is a simple one ; but what though ? it will toast cheese ; and it will endure cold as another man's sword will : and there's the humour of it.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast, to make you friends ; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France ; let it be so, good corporal Nym.

Nym. 'Faith, I will live so long as I may, 'tbat's the certain of it ; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may : that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly ; and, certainly, she did you wrong ; for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell ; things must be as they may : men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time ; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may : though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and Mrs. QUICKLY.

Bard. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his wife :—good corporal, be patient here.—How now, mine host Pistol ?

Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me—host ? Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term ; Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Quick. No, by my troth, not long : for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen, that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym draws his sword.] O well-a-day, Lady, if he be not drawn now ! O Lord ? here's corporal Nym's—now shall we have wilful adultery and murder committed. Good lieutenant Bardolph,—good corporal, offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish !

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog ! thou prick-eared cur of Iceland !

Quick. Good corporal Nym, show the valour of a man, and put up thy sword.

Nym. Will you shog off ? I would have you solus.

[Stealing his sword.]

Pist. Solus, egreious dog ! O viper villa !

The solus in thy most marvellous face ;

The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat,

H h

And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy ;
And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth !
I do retort the solus in thy bowels :
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason ; you cannot conjure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well : If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms : if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may ; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggard vile, and damned furious wight !
The grave doth gape, and dotting death is near ;
Therefore exhale. [Pistol and Nym draw.]

Bard. Hear me, hear what I say :—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.] Pist. An oath of mickle might ; and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give ;
Thy spirits are most tall,

Nym. I will cut thy throat one time or other, in fair terms ; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe le gorge, that's the word ?—I thee defy again.

O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get ?
No ; to the spital go,
And from the powdering tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind,
Doll Tear-sheet she by name, and her espouse :
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly
For the only she ; and—Pauca, there's enough.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master,—and you, hostess ;—he is very sick, and would to bed.—Good Bardolph, put thy nose between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan : 'faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.

Quick. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days : the king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt Mrs. Quickly and Boy.]

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends ? We must to France together ; Why, the devil, should we keep knives to cut one another's throats ?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on !

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting ?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have ; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound : push home.
Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him ; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends : an thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Pr'ythee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings, I won of you at betting ?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay ;
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood :
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me ;—
Is not this just ?—for I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble ?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well then, that's the humour of it.

Re-enter Mrs. QUICKLY.

Quick. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to sir John : ah, poor heart ! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight, that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right ;
His heart is fractured, and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king ; but it must be as it may ; he passes some humours, and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight ; for, lamb, we will live. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Southampton. A council-chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold, to trust traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.
West. How smooth and even do they bear themselves !

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they do.
By interception, which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man, that was his bedfellow, whom he hath cloy'd and grac'd with private favours,—

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery !

Trumpet sounds. Enter King HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we'll aboard.

My lord of Cambridge,—and my kind lord Masham,—

And you, my gentle knight,—give me your thoughts :

Think you not, that the powers we bear wit Will cut their passage through the force of France,
Doing the execution, and the act,
For which we have in head assembled them ?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man be best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that : since we are well persuaded,

We carry not a heart with us from hence,
That grows not in a fair consent with ours ;
Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd, and Than is your majesty ; there's not, I think, a soldier That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. Even those, that were your father's enemies Have steep'd their galls in honey ; and do set With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of fullness ;

And shall forget the office of our hand,
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit,
According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steeled sinew And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less.—Uncle of Ex Enlarge the man committed yesterday,
That rail'd against our person : we consider It was excess of wine, that set him on ;

And, on his more advice, we pardon him.
Scroop. That's mercy, but too much respect.
Let him be punish'd, sovereign ; lest example Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish him.
Grey. Sir, you show great mercy, if you do him life,

After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and ear Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch.
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our
When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested,

Appear before us ?—We'll yet enlarge that Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey,—I mean,
Dear care,

And tender preservation of our person,—
Would have him punish'd. And now to our causes ;

Who are the late commissioners ?

Cam. I one, my lord ;
Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scop. So did you me, my liege.

Hen. And me, my royal sovereign.

Hen. Then, Richard, earl of Cambridge, there is yours;—

yours, lord Scroop of Masham;—and, sir knight, of Northumberland, this same is yours:—them; and know, I know your worthiness.—

ard of Westmoreland,—and uncle Exeter,— will aboard to-night.—Why, how now, gentlemen?

see you in these papers, that you lose each complexion?—look ye, how they change! cheeks are paper.—Why, what read you there, hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood of appearance?

I do confess my fault; to submit me to your highness' mercy.

Scroop. To which we all appeal.

Hen. The mercy, that was quick in us but late, our own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd:

must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy; your own reasons turn into your bosoms, as upon their masters, worrying them.—

my princes, and my noble peers, English monsters! My lord of Cambridge

here,—

now, how apt our love was, to accord with him with all apertinements, giving to his honour; and this man

for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd, worm into the practices of France,

as here in Hampton: to the which,

night, no less for bounty bound to us,

Cambridgeis,—hath likewise sworn.—But O!

shall I say to thee, lord Scroop; thou cruel, fiend, savage, and inhuman creature!

that did'st bear the key of all my counsels,

new'st the very bottom of my soul,

almost might'st have coin'd me into gold,

h'ast thou have practis'd on me for thy use?

is possible, that foreign hire

out of thee extract one spark of evil,

might annoy my finger? 'Tis so strange,

though the truth of it stands off as gross

black from white, my eye will scarcely see it.

o, and murder, ever kept together,

to yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,

is so grossly in a natural cause,

admiration did not whoop at them:

as, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in us, to wait on treason, and on murder:

whatsoever cunning fiend it was,

ought upon thee so preposterously,

got the voice in hell for excellence:

her devils, that suggest by treasons,

ch and bungle up damnation

atches, colours, and with forms being fetch'd distressing semblances of piety;

that temper'd thee, hadst thee stand up,

see no instance why thou should'st do treason,

to do but thee with the name of traitor.

same dæmon, that hath gull'd thee thus,

with his lien gait walk the whole world,

h'ast return to nasty Tartar back,

l the legions—I can never win

so easy as that Englishman's.

h'ast thou with jealousy infected steadfastness of affiance! Show men dutiful?

o did'st thou: Seem they grave and learned?

o did'st thou: Come they of noble family?

o did'st thou: Seem they religious?

o did'st thou: Or are they spare in diet;

in gross passion, or of mirth, or anger;

in spirit, not swerving with the blood;

'd and deck'd in modest complement;

riding with the eye, without the ear,

it in purged judgment, trusting neither?

nd so finely bolted, didst thou seem:

as thy fall hath left a kind of blot,

on the full fraught man, and best endued, me suspicion. I will weep for thee;

revolt of thine, methinks, is like fall of man.—Their faults are open, hem to the answer of the law:—

d acquit them of their practices!

Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry lord Scroop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd; And I repeat my fault, more than my death;

Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it.

Can. For me,—the gold of France did not seduce; Although I did admit it as a motive,

The sooner to effect what I intended;

But God be thanked for prevention;

Which I in suffrance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God, and you, to pardon me.

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice At the discovery of most dangerous treason,

Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself, Prevented from a damned enterprize:

My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers

Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death;

Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter, His princes and his peers to servitude,

His subjects to oppression and contempt, And his whole kingdom unto desolation.

Touching our person, seek we no revenge;

But we our kingdom's safety must so tender, Whose ruin you three sought, that to her laws

We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence, Poor miserable wretches, to your death:

The taste whereof, God, of his mercy, give you Patience to endure, and true repentance

Of all your dear offences!—Bear them hence.

[Exeunt Conspirators, guarded.]

Now, lords, for France; the enterprize whereof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.

We doubt not of a fair and lucky war;

Since God so graciously hath brought to light This dangerous treason, lurking in our way,

To hinder our beginnings, we doubt not now, But every rub is smoothened on our way.

Then, forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver Our puissance into the hand of God,

Putting it straight in expedition. Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance:

No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

London. Mrs. Quickly's house in East-cheap.

Enter PISTOL, Mrs. QUICKLY, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Quick. Pr'ythee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.—

Bardolph, be blithe;—Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead, And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. 'Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven, or in hell!

Quickly. Nay, sure, he's not in hell; he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom.

'A made a finer end, and went away, an it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, e'en at turning o'the tide:

for after I saw him fumble with the sheets and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends,

I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbl'd of green fields.

How now, sir John? quoth I: what, man! he of good cheer. So 'a cried out—God, God, God!

three or four times: now I, to comfort him, bid him, 'a should not think of God: I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet: So, 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say, he cried out of sack.
Quick. Ay, that 'a did.
Bard. And of women.
Quick. Nay, that 'a did not.
Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said, they were devils incarnate.

Quick. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked.
Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Quick. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women: but then he was rheumatick; and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose; and 'a said, it was a black soul burning in hell-fire?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone, that maintained that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog off? the king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away.—My love, give me thy lips. Look to my chattels, and my moveables: Let senses rule; the word is, Pitck and pay; Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes, And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck; Therefore, caeceto be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms, Let us to France! like horse-leeches, my boys; To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that is but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.
Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear; keep close, I thee command.

Quick. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

France. A room in the French King's palace.

Enter the French King attended; the Dauphin, the Duke of BURGUNDY, the Constable, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns, To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the dukes of Berry, and of Bretagne, Of Brabant, and of Orleans, shall make forth,— And you, prince Dauphin,—with all swift despatch, To line, and new repair, our towns of war, With men of courage, and with means defendant: For England his approaches makes as fierce, As waters to the sucking of a gulph.

It fits us then, to be as provident As fear may teach us, out of late examples, Left by the fatal and neglected English Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father, It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe: For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom, (Though war, nor no known quarrel were in question,) But that defences, musters, preparations, Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected, As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all go forth, To view the sick and feeble parts of France: And let us do it with no show of fear; No, with no more, than if we heard, that England Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance: For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd, Her sceptre so fantastically borne By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, That fear attends her not.

Con. O peace, prince Dauphin! You are too much mistaken in this king: Question your grace the late ambassadors,— With what great state he heard their embassy, How well supplied with noble counsellors, How modest in exception, and, withal, How terrible in constant resolution,— And you shall find his vanities fore-spent Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus, Covering discretion with a coat of folly;

As gardeners do with erdure hide those root That shall first spring, and be most delicate
Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high con-
 But though we think it so, it is no matter:
 In cases of defence, 'tis best to weigh
 The enemy more mighty than he seems,
 So the proportions of defence are fill'd;
 Which, of a weak and niggardly projection,
 Doth, like a miser, spoil his coat, with scant
 A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we king Harry strong?
 And, princes, look, you strongly arm to
 him.

The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon
 And he is bred out of that bloody strain,
 That haunted us in our familiar paths:
 Witness our too much memorable shame,
 When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
 And all our princes captiv'd, by the hand
 Of that black name, Edward black prince of Whiles that his mountain sire,—on mountain
 ing,

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun
 Saw his heroic seed, and smil'd to see his Mangle the work of nature, and deface
 The patterns, that by God and by French
 Had twenty years been made. This is a
 Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
 The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Henry king of
 Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present a Go, and bring them.

[Exeunt Mess. and certain]
 You see, this chase is hotly follow'd, friend Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit: for dogs

Most spend their mouths, when what they threaten,
 Runs far before them. Good my sovereignty
 Take up the English short; and let them
 Of what a monarchy you are the head:

Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
 As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and T

Fr. King. From our brother Engl
Exe. From him; and thus he greets you
 He wills you, in the name of God Almight
 That you divest yourself, and lay apart
 The borrow'd glories, that, by gift of heav
 By law of nature, and of nations, long
 To him, and to his heirs; namely, the cro
 And all wide-stretched honours that perta
 By custom and the ordinance of times, Unto the crown of France. That you may
 'Tis no sinister, nor no awkward claim,
 Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish
 Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
 He sends you this most memorable line,
 [Gives]

In every branch truly demonstrative;
 Willing you, overlook this pedigree:
 And, when you find him evenly deriv'd
 From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
 Edward the third, he bids you then resign
 Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
 From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you bids
 Even in your hearts, there will he rake for
 And therefore in fierce tempest is he comin
 In thunder, and in earthquake, like a Jove
 (That, if requiring fail, he will compel);
 And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
 Deliver up the crown; and to take mercy
 On the poor souls, for whom this hungry
 Opens his vasty jaws: and on your head
 Turns he the widow's tears, the orphan's
 The dead men's blood, the pining maidens
 For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lover
 That shall be swallow'd in this controversy
 This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,

om expressly I bring greeting too.
King. For us, we will consider of this further :
 row shall you bear our full intent
 o our brother of England.

For the Dauphin,
 here for him ; What to him from England ?
 Scorn, and defiance : slight regard, contempt,
 y thing, that may not misbecome ighty sender, doth he prize you at.
 ays my king : and, if your father's highness
 , in grant of all demands at large,
 a the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
 all you to so hot an answer for it,
 ares and womy vaultages of France hide your trespass, and return your mock ad accent of his ordnance.

Say, if my father render fair reply, ainst my will : for I desire
 ; but odds with England ; to that end,

As matching to his youth and vanity,
 I did present him with those Paris balls.

Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
 Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe :
 And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference,
 (As we, his subjects, have in wonder found,)
 Between the promise of his greener days,
 And these he masters now ; now he weighs time,
 Even to the utmost grain ; which you shall read
 In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full.

Exe. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our king
 Come here himself to question our delay ;
 For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair conditions :

A night is but small breath, and little pause,
 To answer matters of this consequence. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE THIRD.

Enter CHORUS.

Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene ies,
 an of no less celerity
 at of thought. Suppose, that you have seen l-appointed king at Hampton pier his royalty ; and his brave fleet leen streamers the young Phoebus fanning.
 th your fancies ; and in them behold,
 e hempen tackle, ship-boys climbing ;
 e shrill whistle, which doth order give ds confus'd : behold the thredden sails, ith the invisible and creeping wind,
 e huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,
 g the lofty surge : O, do but think,
 od upon the rivage, and behold
 n the inconstant billows dancing ;
 ppears this fleet majestical,

ne course to Harfleur. Follow, follow !
 your minds to sternage of this navy ;
 ve your England, as dead midnight, still,
 with grandsires, babies, and old women,
 ast, or not arriv'd to, pith and puissance :
 is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
 e appearing hair, that will not follow l'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France ?
 ork, your thoughts, and therein see a siege :
 he ordnance on their carriages,
 al months gaping on girded Harfleur.
 the ambassador from the French comes sk ;

rry—that the king doth offer him
 e his daughter ; and with her, to dowry, ry and unprofitable dukedoms.
 likes not : and the nimble gunner stock now the devilish cannon touches, [Alarum ; and chambers go off.]
 n goes all before them. Still be kind, out our performance with your mind.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.

The same. Before Harfleur.

Enter King HENRY, EXETER, BED-GLOSTER, and Soldiers, with scaling

. Once more unto the breach, dear friends,
 e more ;
 e wall up with our English dead !
 there's nothing so becomes a man,
 t stillness and humility :
 t the blast of war blows in our ears,
 ate the action of the tiger ;
 e sinews, summon up the blood,
 air nature with hard-favour'd rage :
 l the eye a terrible aspect ;
 through the portage of the head,
 rass cannon ; let the brow o'erwhelm it,
 ly, as doth a galled rock and jutty his confounded base, ith the wild and wasteful ocean.

Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide :
 Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
 To his full height !—On, on, you noblest English,
 Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof !
 Fathers, that, like so many Alexanders,
 Have, in these parts, from morn till even fought,
 And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
 Dishonour not your mothers ; now attest,
 That those, whom you call'd fathers, did beget you !
 Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
 And teach them how to war !—And you, good yeomen,

Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
 The mettle of your pasture ; let us swear
 That you are worth your breeding : which I doubt
 not ;

For there is none of you so mean and base,
 That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
 I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
 Straining upon the start. The game's afoot ;
 Follow your spirit ; and, upon this charge,
 Cry—God for Harry ! England ! and Saint George, [Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.]

SCENE II.

The same.

Forces pass over : then enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on ! to the breach, to the breach !

Nym. 'Pray thee, corporal, stay ; the knocks are too hot ; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives : the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just ; for humours do abound ;

Knocks go and come ; God's vassals drop and die ;
 And sword and shield,
 In bloody field,
 Doth win immortal fame.

Boy. 'Would I were in an alehouse in London ! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, and safety.

Pist. And I :
 If wishes would prevail with me,
 My purpose should not fail with me,
 But thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Got's blood !—Up to the preaches, you rascals !
 will you not up to the preaches !

[Driving them forward.]

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould !
 Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage !

Abate thy rage, great duke !

Good lawcock, bate thy rage ! use lenity, sweet chuck !

Nym. These be good humours !—your honour wins bad humours.

[Exeunt Nym, Pistol, and Bardolph,

followed by Fluellen.

H h 2

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed, three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph,—he is white-livered, and red-faced; by the means whereof, 'a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol,—he hath a killing tongue, and a quiet sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym,—he hath heard, that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest 'a should be thought a coward: but his few had words are match'd with as few good deeds; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own; and that was against a post, when he was drunk. They will steal any thing, and call it,—purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case; bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph ate sworn brothers in filching; and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew, by that piece of service, the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets, as their gloves or their handkerchiefs: which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up.

[Exit Boy.]

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the duke of Gloster would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines: For, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' adversary (you may discuss unto the duke, look you,) is dight himself four yards under the counter-mines; by Cheshu, I think, 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The duke of Gloster, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman; a very valiant gentleman, 'a'faith.

Flu. It is captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think, it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: I will verify as much in his beard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance.

Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain, captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition, and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say, gud-day, captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, goot captain Jamy.

Gow. How now, captain Macmorris? have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish la, tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and by my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la, in an hour. O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline; that is the point.

SCENE V.

The same. Another room in the same.

Enter the French King, the Dauphin, Duke of BOUR-BON, the Constable of France, and Others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,
 Let us not live in France; let us quit all,
 And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us,—
 The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
 Our scions, put in wild and savage stock,
 Spirit up so suddenly into the clouds,
 And overlook their grafters?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!

Mort de ma vie! if they march along
 Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom,
 To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm
 In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull?
 On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
 Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley broth,
 Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
 And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,
 Seem frosty? O, for honour of our Land,
 Let us not hang like roping icicles
 Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields;
 Poor—we may call them, in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour,

Our madams mock at us; and plainly say,
 Our mettle is bred out; and they will give
 Their bodies to the lust of English youth,
 To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us,—to the English dancing-schools,

And teach lavoltas high, and swift corantos:
 Saying, our grace is only in our heels,
 And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjôy, the herald? speed him hence;

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.—
 Up, princes; and, with spirit of honour edg'd.
 More sharper than your swords, hie to the field:
 Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
 You dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry,
 Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
 Jaques Chatillion, Rambours, Vandemont,
 Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg,
 Foix, Lestrade, Bouciquant, and Charolois; High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,

For your great seats, now quit you of great shames.
 Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land
 With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur:
 Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
 Upon the vallies: whose low vassal seat
 The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon:
 Go down upon him,—you have power enough,—
 And in a captive chariot, into Rouen
 Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.

Sorry am I, his numbers are so few,
 His soldiers sick, and famish'd in their march;
 For, I am sure, when he shall see our army,
 He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
 And, for achievement, offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjôy;

And let him say to England, that we send
 To know what willing ransom he will give.—
 Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.—

Now, forth, lord constable, and princes all;

And quickly bring us word of England's fall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

The English camp in Picardy.Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Gow. How now, captain Fluellen? come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent service committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my livings, and my uttermost powers: he is not, (God be praised, and blessed!) any hurt in the world; but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ensign there at the bridge,—I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world: but I did see him do gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called—ancient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Do you not know him? Here comes the man. Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours: The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of heart, Of buxom valour, bath,—by cruel fate, And giddy fortune's furious fickle wheel, That goddess blind, That stands upon the rolling restless stone.—

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler before her eyes, to signify to you, that fortune is blind: And she is painted also with a wheel; to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and variations, and mutabilities: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls;—In good truth, the poet is make a most excellent description of fortune: fortune, look you, is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him; For he hath stol'n a pix, and hanged must 'a be. A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free, And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate: But Exeter hath given the doom of death, For pix of little price.

Therefore, go speak, the duke will hear thy voice; And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach: Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to executions; for disciplines ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd; and figo for thy friendship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain!

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal; I remember him now; a bawd; a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utter'd as brave words at the bridge, as you shall see in a summer's day: But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in great commanders' names: and they will learn you by rote, where services were done;—at such and such a scone, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths: And what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, do among foaming bottles, and ale-washer is wonderful to be thought on! but you must know such slanders of the age, or else you are marvellous mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, captain Gower;—I perceive, he is not the man, that he would make show to the world he is; if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum.] Hark you, the king is coming; and I must with him from the bridge.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, and Soldiers.

Flu. Got pless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen? earnest thou the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the French is gone off, look you; and there are the most brave passages: Marry, the French was have possession of the bridge; but he was forced to retire, and the duke of Exeter is of the bridge: I can tell your majesty, the duke is a brave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th'adversary hath very great, very reasonable great: marry, part, I think the duke hath lost never a man one that is like to be executed for robbing a man: Bardolph, if your majesty knows the man, face is all bubukles, and wheels, and knoiflames of fire; and his lips plows at his neck: it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plow sometimes red; but his nose is executed, fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offered off:—and we give express charge, that marches through the country, there be nothing taken from the villages, nothing taken for; none of the French upbraided, or all disdainful language; For when lenity and play for a kingdom, the gentlest gamester soonest winner.

Tucket sounds. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then, I know thee; What I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—Say thou to of England, Though we seemed dead, we sleep: Advantage is a better soldier, than ravel; Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Hainault; but that we thought not good to brise an till it were full ripe:—now we speak upon and our voice is imperial: England shall his folly, see his weakness, and admire our ance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ravel, which must proportion the losses we have the subjects we have lost, the disgrace digested; which, in weight, to re-answer, less would bow under. For our losses, his quer is too poor; for the effusion of our bluster of his kingdom too faint a number; our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at but a weak and worthless satisfaction.—To—defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, betrayed his followers, whose condemnation nounced. So far my king and master; my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy name. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Thou back,

And tell thy king,—I do not seek him now. But could be willing to march on to Calais Without impeachment: for, to say the sooth (Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much) Unto an enemy of craft and vantage, My people are with sickness much enfeebled. My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French; Who when they were in health, I tell thee I thought, upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen.—Yet, forgive me

we are, we say, we will not shun it;

I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit Montjoy.]

then, belike, she was old and gentle;

and you rode, like a kerne of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait trossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.
Dau. Be warned by me then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs; I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears her own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourne a son propre vomisse-ment, et la truie lavee au boubrier: thou makest use of any thing.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress:
or any such proverb, so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour, that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars, or suns, upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many super-fluously; and 'twere more honour, some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. 'Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: But I would it were morning, for
I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight, I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is, simply, the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity: and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow; he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one, that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said, he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it, but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. It will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with—There is flattery in friendship.

Orl. And I will take up that with—Give the devil his due.

Con. Well placed; there stands your friend for the devil, have at the very eye of that proverb, with —A pox of the devil.

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much—A fool's bolt is soon shot.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tent.

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.—
Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England!

he longs not for the dawning, as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatched courage.

Orl. Foolish cars! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples: You may as well say, —that's a valiant flea, that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize the mastiffs, in robustious and rough colour, leaving their wits with their wives: and them great meals of beef, and iron and steel will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly on Con. Then we shall find to-morrow — only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. time to arm: Come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see, We shall have each a hundred Englishmen

ACT THE FOURTH.

Enter CHORUS.

Cho. Now entertain conjecture of a time,
When creeping murmur, and the poring dark,
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,
The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire; and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other's umber'd face:
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents,
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.
Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night,
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,
Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and idly ruminate
The morning's danger; and their gesture sad,
Investing lank-lean cheeks, and war-worn coats,
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will behold
The royal captain of this ruin'd band,
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry—Praise and glory on his head!
For forth he goes and visits all his host;
Bids them good-morrow, with a modest smile;
And calls them—brothers, friends, and countrymen.
Upon his royal face there is no note,
How dread an army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watched night:
But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint,
With cheerful semblance, and sweet majesty;
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks;
A largess universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear. Then, mean and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night:
And so our scene must to the battle fly;
Where, (O for pity!) we shall much disgrace—
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill dispos'd, in brawl ridiculous,—
The name of Agincourt: Yet, sit and see;
Minding true things, by what their mockeries be.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.

The English camp at Agincourt.

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOSTER.

K. Hen. Gloster, 'tis true, that we are in great danger;

The greater therefore should our courage be.—
Good morrow, brother Bedford.—God Almighty!
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful, and good husbandry:
Besides, they are our outward consciences,

And preachers to us all; admonishing,
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old sir Thomas Erpingham!
A good soft pillow for that good white hair
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege; this lodging is better,
Since I may say—now lie I like a king.

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love the pains,

Upon example; so the spirit is eased:
And, when the mind is quicken'd, out o'
The organs, though defunct and dead, break Break up their drowsy grave, and newly
With casted slough and fresh legerity,
Lend me thy cloak, sir Thomas.—Brother,
Commend me to the princes in our camp.
Do my good morrow to them; and, and,
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloster and Erp.]
Erp. Shall I attend your grace?
K. Hen. No, my good

Go with my brothers to my lords of France,
I and my bosom must debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thy Harry!

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart, thou cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va la?
K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me; Art thou officer
Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.
Pist. Trailest thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so: What are you?
Pist. As good a gentleman as the emy.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than I.
Pist. The king's a bawcock, and a head

A lad of life, an imp of fame;
Of parents good, of fist most valiant:

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart
I love the lovely bully. What's thy name?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.
Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: a Cornish crew?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.
Pist. Knowest thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.
Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about Upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger cap that day, lest he knock that about you.

Pist. Art thou his friend?
K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee then!
K. Hen. I thank you: God be with you.

Pist. My name is Pistol called.
K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierce

Enter FLEUELLEN and GOWER,
Gow. Captain Fluellen!

So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak
It is the greatest admiration in the un-world, when the true and auccient prerogatives of the wars is not kept: if you would pains but to examine the wars of Pompey at, you shall find, I warrant you, that there idle taddle, or pibble pabble, in Pompey's,
I warrant you, you shall find the ceremony of the war, and the cares of it, and the forms of the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, herwise.

Why, the enemy is loud; you heard him
t.

If the enemy is an ass and a fool, and a coccumb, is it meet, think you, that we also, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a coccumb; in your own conscience now?
I will speak lower.

I pray you, and beseech you, that you will.

[Exeunt Gower and Fluellen.]

Brother John Bates, is not that the y, which breaks yonder?

I think it be: but we have no great cause of the approach of day.

We see yonder the beginning of the day, think, we shall never see the end of it.—
es there?

t. A friend.

Under what captain serve you?

Under sir Thomas Erpingham.
A good old commander, and a most kind a: I pray you, what thinks he of our

u. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that e washed off the next tide.

He hath not told his thought to the king?

t. No; nor it is not meet he should. For, speak it to you, I think, the king is but as I am: the violet smells to him, as it se; the element shows to him, as it doth all his senses have but human conditions:
sonies laid by, in his nakedness he apt a man; and though his affections are ounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, p with the like wing; therefore, when he on of fears, as we do, his fears, out of
of the same relish as ours are: Yet, in o man should possess him with any ap-of fear, lest he, by showing it, should a his army.

He may show what outward courage he e, I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he h himself in the Thames up to the neck;
would he were, and I by him, at all ad-
so we were quit here.

By my troth, I will speak my conscience
g; I think, he would not wish himself
s but where he is.

Then, 'would he were here alone! so e: be sure to be ransomed, and a many s lives saved.

I dare say, you love him not so ill, to here alone; howsoever you speak this, er men's minds: Methinks, I could not here so contented, as in the king's com-cause being just, and his quarrel ho-

that's more than we know.

Ay, or more than we should seek after;
sw enough, if we know we are the king's if his cause be wrong, our obedience to ripes the crime of it out of us.

But, if the cause be not good, the king ath a heavy reckoning to make; when egs and arms, and heads, chopped off in hall joint together at the latter day, and Ve died at such a place; some, swearing;
ng for a surgeon; some, upon their wives hind them; some, upon the debts they e, upon their children rawly left. I am re are few die well, that die in battle;

for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king, that led them to it; whom to disobey, were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandise, do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father, that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation:—But this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of the soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law, and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished, for before-breach of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and, where they would be safe, they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation, than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience: and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained;
and in him, that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him out-live that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill is upon his own head, the king is not to answer
for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me;
and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say, he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully: but, when our throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. 'Mass, you'll pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder gun, that a poor and private displeasure can do against a monarch! you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice, with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round;
I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove; give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, This is my glove, by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends; we have French quarrels enough, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: But it is no English treason, to cut French crowns; and, to-morrow, the king himself will be a clipper.

[Exeunt Soldiers.]

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives, our children, and
Our sins, lay on the king;—we must bear all.
O hard condition! twin-born with greatness,
Subjected to the breath of every fool,
Whose sense no more can feel but his own wringing!
What infinite heart's ease must kings neglect,
That private men enjoy!

And what have kings, that privates have not too,
Save ceremony, save general ceremony?
And what art thou, thou idol ceremony?
What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs, than do thy worshippers?
What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in?
O ceremony, show me but thy worth!
What is the soul of adoration?
Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd,
Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet,
But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness,
And bid thy ceremony give thee cure!

Think'st thou, the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?

Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,
That play'st so subtly with a king's repose;

I am a king, that find thee; and I know,
'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The enter-tissued robe of gold and pearl,
The farced tide running 'fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world,
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave;

Who, with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread;
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell;
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set,
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn,
Doth rise, and help Hyperion to his horse;
And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labour, to his grave:

And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it; but in gross brain little wots,
What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

[Enter ERPINGHAM.]

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,
Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent:
I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts!
Possess them not with fear; take from them now
The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them!—Not to-day, O Lord,
O not to-day, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown!
I Richard's body have interred new;
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears,
Than from it issued forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built
Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests

Sing still for Richard's soul. More will Though all, that I can do, is nothing worth:
Since that my penitence comes after all,
Imploping pardon.

[Enter GLOSTER.]

Glo. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice
I know thy errand, I will go with thee:
The day, my friends, and all things stay!

The English camp.

the English Host; GLOSTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, SALISBURY, and WESTMORELAND.

Where is the king?
The king himself is rode to view their battle.
Of fighting men they have full threescore thousand.

There's five to one; besides, they are all fresh.
God's arm strike with us! 'Tis a fearful odds.
We wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge:

my lord Gloster,—and my good lord Exeter,— my kind kinsman,—warriors all, adieu.

Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Farewell, kind lord; fight valiantly to-day:

peace! I would not lose so great an honour, man more, methinks, would share from me, best hope I have. O, do not wish one more:
proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,
s, which hath no stomach to this fight,
I depart; my passport shall be made,

and a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,

ght with us upon Saint Crispian's day.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed;
The French are bravely in their battles set,
And will with all expedience charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.
West. Perish the man, whose mind is backward now!

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, cousin?

West. God's will, my liege, 'would you and I alone,
Without more help, might fight this battle out!

K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men;

Which likes me better, than to wish us one.—
You know your places: God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee, king Harry,

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured overthrow:
For, certainly, thou art so near the gulf,
Thou needs must be engulged. Besides, in mercy,
The Constable desires thee—thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance; that their souls
May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
From off these fields, where (wretches) their poor hodies

Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?
Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back;
Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones.
Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus?
The man, that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
And many of our bodies shall, no doubt,
Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,
Shall witness live in brass of this day's work:
And those, that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet
them,

And draw their honours reeking up to heaven;
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime.
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.
Mark then a bounding valour in our English;
That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality.

Let me speak proudly;—Tell the Constable,
We are but warriors for the working-day:
Our gayness, and our gilt, are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field;
There's not a piece of feather in our host,
(Good argument, I hope, we shall not fly),
And time hath worn us into slovenry:
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;
And my poor soldiers tell me—yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes; or they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads,
And turn them out of service. If they do this,
(As, if God please, they shall,) my ransom then
Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour;
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald;
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints:
Which if they have as I will leave 'em to them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.

Mont. I shall, king Harry. And so fare thee well:
Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.]

K. Hen. I fear, thou'lt once more come again for ransom.

Enter the Duke of YORK.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York.—Now, soldiers, march away:—

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The field of battle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter French Soldier, PISTOL, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur.

Fr. Sol. Je pense, que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualite.

Pist. Quality, call you me?—Construe me, art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O, signieur Dew should be a gentleman:—Perpend my words, O signieur Dew, and mark;—O signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox, Except, O signieur, thou do give to me Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde! ayez pitie de moy!

Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have forty moys; For I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat, In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!

Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moy!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of moys?—Come hither, boy; Ask me this slave in French, What is his name.

Boy. Escoutez: Comment estes vous appelle?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says, his name is—master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firik him, and ferret him:—discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firik.

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prest; car ce soldat icy est disposé tout a cette heure de couper vostre gorge.

Pist. Ouy, couper gorge, par mafoy, pesant, Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns; Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison; gardez ma vie, & je vous donneray deux cents escus.

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransom, he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him,—my fury shall abate, and I The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement, de pardonner aucun prisonnier; neanmoins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner in liberte, le franchisement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerciemens; & je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, & tres distingue signeur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks: and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.—Follow me, cur. [Exit Pistol.]

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine.

[Exit French Soldier.]

I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true,—The empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph, and Nym, had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i'the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it, but boys. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the field of battle.

Alarums. Enter Dauphin, ORLEANS, BOURBON, Constable, RAMBURES, and Others.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O seigneur!—le jour est perdu, tout est perdu!

Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all!

Reproach and everlasting shame Sits mocking in our plumes.—O meschante fortune! Do not run away. [A short alarm.]

And he, that will not follow Bourbon now,

Like a base pandar, hold the chamber-door,

Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog,

His fairest daughter is contaminate.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend

Let us, in heaps, go offer up our lives

Unto these English, or else die with fame.

Orl. We are enough, yet living in the field

To smother up the English in our throngs,

If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now! I'll to the field

Let life be short; else, shame will be too long. [Exit.]

a. I tell you, captain,—If you look in the of the 'orld, I warrant, you shall find, in the asons between Macedon and Monmouth, that nations, look you, is both alike. There is a a Macedon; and there is also moreover a river amouth: it is called Wye, at Monmouth; but out of my brains, what is the name of the river; but 'tis all one, 'tis so like as my fin-to my fingers, and there is salmons in both.
mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Mon-re is come after it indifferently well; re is figures in all things. Alexander (God and you know,) in his rages, and his furies,
a his ales and his cups, so also Harry Mon-
being in his right wits and his goot judgis turn away the fat knight with the great outlet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and es, and mocks; I am forget his name.

Sir John Falstaff.
Our king is not like him in that; he never any of his friends.

It is not well done, mark you now, to take of my mouth, ere it is made an end and
I. I speak but in the figures and compa-if it: As Alexander is kill his friend Clytus,
a his ales and his cups, so also Harry Mon-
being in his right wits and his goot judg-
is turn away the fat knight with the great outlet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and es, and mocks; I am forget his name.

Sir John Falstaff.
That is he: I can tell you, there is goot men Monmouth.

Here comes his majesty.

Enter King HENRY, with a part of the ark forces; WARWICK, GLOSTER, EX-
R, and Others.

I was not angry, since I came to France, is instant.—Take a trumpet, herald;
ou unto the horsemen on yon hill;
will fight with us, bid them come down,
the field; they do offend our sight:
ll do neither, we will come to them;
ke them skirr away, as swift as stones
d from the old Assyrian slings:
, we'll cut the throats of those we have;
t a man of them, that we shall take,
ste our mercy:—Go, and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.
His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.
a. How now! what means this, herald?
ow'st thou not,
have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?
thou again for ransom?

No, great king:

to thee for charitable licence,
y may wander o'er this bloody field,
our dead, and then to bury them;
our nobles from our common men!
ty of our princes (woe the while!)
v'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
ur vulgar drench their peasant limbs of princes;) and their wounded steeds ock deep in gore, and, with wild rage,
t their armed heels at their dead masters,
them twice. O, give us leave, great king, the field in safety, and dispose dead bodies.

I tell thee truly, herald,
ot, if the day be ours, or no;

For yet a many of your horsemen peer,
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength,
for it!—

What is this castle call'd, that stands hard by?
Mont. They call it—Agin-court.

K. Hen. Then call we this—the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the plack prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: If your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did goot service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which, your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable padge of the service; and, I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour:
For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that: Got pless it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the 'orld: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go with him;
Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to Williams. Exeunt Montjoy and Others.

Exc. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one, that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal, that swaggered with me last night: who, if 'a live, and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o'the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear, if alive,) I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be, his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as goot a gentleman as the tevil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain, and a Jack-sauce, as ever his plack shoe trod upon Got's ground and his earth, in my conscience, I a.

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a goot captain; and is good knowledge and literature in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap: When Alençon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost love me.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honours, as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all;
but I would fain see it once; an please Got of his grace, that I might see it.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.
K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit.
K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloster,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels :
The glove, which I have given him for a favour,
May, haply, purchase him a box o' the ear ;
It is the soldier's ; I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick :
If that the soldier strike him, (as, I judge
By his blunt bearing, he will keep his word,)
Some sudden mischief may arise of it ;
For I do know Fluellen valiant,
And, touch'd with cholera, hot as gunpowder.
And quickly will return an injury :
Follow, and see there be no harm between them.—
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.

Before King Henry's pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant, it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Got's will and bis pleasure, captain, I peesech you now, come apace to the king: there is more goot toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove? I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it.

Flu. 'Sblud, an arrant traitor, as any's in the universal 'orld, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now, sir? you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into ploys, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him; he's a friend of the duke Alençon's.

Enter WARWICK and GLOSTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My lord of Warwick, here is (praised be Got for it!) a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter King HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain, and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it: and he, that I gave it to in change, promised to wear it in his cap; I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, (saving your majesty's manhood,) what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is: I hope, your majesty is pear me testimony, and witness, and avouchments, that this is the glove of Alençon, that your majesty is give me, in your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier; Look, here is the fellow of it. 'Twas I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; and thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the 'orld.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my liege, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you, take it for your own fault, and not mine had you been as I took you for, I made no otherfore, I beseech your highness, pardon

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,

And give it to this fellow.—Keep it, fellow And wear it for an honour in thy cap,
Till I do challenge it.—Give him the crown:
And, captain, you must needs be friends with

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow mettle enough in his pelly:—Hold, there is pence for you, and I pray you to serve G keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and qu and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is th for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a goot will; I can tell will serve you to mend your shoes: Come, fore should you be so pashful? your shoe so goot: 'tis a goot silling, I warrant you will change it.

or. Vouchsafe to those, that have not read the story,

I may prompt them : and of such as have, I may pray them to admit the excuse of me, of numbers, and due course of things, which cannot in their huge and proper life be presented. Now we bear the king and Calais : grant him there ; there seen, we him away upon your winged thoughts, part the sea : Behold, the English beach in the flood with men, with wives, and boys, whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea.

Behold, like a mighty whiffler 'fore the king, to prepare his way : so let him land ; and solemnly, see him set on to London. Lift a pace hath thought, that even now may imagine him upon Blackheath : where that his lords desire him, to have borne crested helmet, and his bended sword, to him, through the city : he forbids it, free from vainness and self-glorious pride ; a full trophy, signal, and ostent, from himself, to God. But now behold, the quick forge and working house of thought, London doth pour out her citizens ! Mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort,—in the senators of antique Rome, the plebeians swarming at their heels,—to fetch their conquering Cæsar in : yet a lower but by loving likelihood, now the general of our gracious empress in a good time, he may, from Ireland coming, of rebellion broached on his sword, many would the peaceful city quit, to come him ? much more, and much more cause, say this Harry. Now in London place him ; to the lamentation of the French the king of England's stay at home : the emperor's coming in behalf of France, for peace between them ; and omit occurrences, whatever chance'd, Harry's back-return again to France ; must we bring him ; and myself have play'd the traitor, by remembering you—'tis past. Look abridgment : and your eyes advance your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit.]

SCENE I.

France. An English court of guard.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Nay, that's right ; but why wear you your day ? Saint Davy's day is past. There is occasions and causes why and where in all things : I will tell you, as my captain Gower ; The rascally, scald, beggarly, pragging knave, Pistol,—which you yourself, and all the world, know to be no better fellow, look you now, of no merits,—he is come, and brings me pread and salt yesterday you, and bid me eat my leek : it was in where I could not breed no contentions with you I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap, to him once again, and then I will tell him piece of my desires.

Enter PISTOL.

Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his leeks.—Got pless you, ancient Pistol ! you lousy knave, Got pless you ! Ha ! art thou Bedlam ? Dost thou thirst, as Trojan, me fold up Parca's fatal web ? I am qualmish at the smell of leek. I preech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, sires, and my requests, and my petitions, look you, this leek ; because, look you, you do not love it ; nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader, and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it ?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when God's will is : I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals ; come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday, mountain-squire ; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to ; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain ; you have astonished him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days :—Pite, I pray you ; it is good for your green wound, and bloody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite ?

Flu. Yes, certainly ; and out of doubt, and out of questions too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge ; I eat, and eke I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you : Will you have some more sauce to your leek ? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel ; thou dost see, I eat.

Flu. Much good do you, scald knave ; heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away ; the skiu is good for your proken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at them ; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good :—Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat !

Flu. Yes, verily, and in truth, you shall take it ; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat, in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in cudgels ; you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go ; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition,—begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour,—and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words ? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel : you find it otherwise ; and, henceforth, let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.]

Pist. Doth fortune play the huswife with me now ? News have I, that my Nell is dead ! 'tis the spital Of malady of France ;

And there my rendezvous is quite cut off. Old I do wax ; and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgell'd. Well, bawd will I turn, And something lean to pursue of quick hand. To England will I steal, and there I'll steal : And patches will I get unto these scars, And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Troyes in Champagne. An apartment in the French King's palace.

Enter, at one door, King HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords ; at another, the French King, Queen ISABEL, the Princess KATHARINE, Lords, Ladies, &c. the Duke of BURGUNDY, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met !

Unto our brother France,—and to our sister,

Health and fair time of day :—joy and good wishes
To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine ;
And (as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,)
We do salute you, duke of Burgundy ;—
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all !
Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,
Most worthy brother England ; fairly met :—
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes ;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent,
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks :
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality ; and that this day
Shall change all griefs, and quarrels, into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.
Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great kings of France and England ! That I have labour'd

With all my wis, my pains, and strong endeavours,
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.
Since then my office hath so far prevail'd,
That, face to face, and royal eye to eye,
You have congregated ; let it not disgrace me,
If I demand, before this royal view,
What rub, or what impediment, there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled peace,
Dear curse of arts, plenties, and joyful births,
Should not, in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage !
Alas ! she hath from France too long been chas'd ;
And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility.

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies : her hedges even-pleached,—
Like prisoners wildly over-grown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs : her fallow leas
The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Doth root upon ; while that the coulter rusts,
That should decarinate such savagery :
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceives by idleness ; and nothing teems,
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,
Losing both beauty and utility.

And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildness ;
Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children,
Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country ;
But grow, like savages,—as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood,—
To swearing, and stern looks, diffus'd attire,
And every thing, that seems unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former favour,
You are assembled : and my speech entreats,
That I may know the let, why gentle peace
Should not expel these inconveniences,
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,
Whose want gives growth to the imperfections,
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands ;
Whose tenours and particular effects
You have, enshedul'd briefly, in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them ; to the which,
as yet,

There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well then, the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'erglanc'd the articles : pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will, suddenly,
Pass our accept, and preemptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle Exeter,—
And brother Clarence,—and you, brother Gloucester,—
Warwick,—and Huntingdon,—go with the king :

And take with you free power, to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageable for our dignity,
Any thing in, or out of, our demands ;
And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair s,

Go with the princes, or stay here with us ?
Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with Haply, a woman's voice may do some good,
When articles, too nicely urg'd, be stood on K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine

with us ;
She is our capital demand, compris'd
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but Henry, Katharine, and her Gentlewoman.]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear,
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart ?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me ; I speak your England.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will soudly with your French heart, I will be to hear you confess it brokenly with your tongue. Do you like me, Kate ?

Kath. Pardon me, I cannot tell what is—
K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate ; a

K. Hen. What says she, fair one ?
tongues of men are full of deceits ?

Alice. Ouy ; dat de tongues of de ma
full of deceits : dat is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better woman. Ifaith, Kate, my wooing is fit understanding : I am glad thou can'st better English ; for, if thou couldst, thou find me such a plain king, that thou woul
I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I ways to mince it in love, but directly to sa you : then, if you urge me further than to you in faith ? I wear out my suit. Give answer ; ifaith, do ; and so clap hands at gain : How say you, lady ?

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, me underst
K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me or to dance for your sake, Kate, why y me : for the one, I have neither words nor and for the other, I have no strength in yet a reasonable measure in strength. I win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting saddle with my armour on my back, t correction of bragging be it spoken, I shou leap into a wife. Or, if I might buffet fo or bound my horse for her favours, I on like a huteher, and sit like a jack-an-a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy ;

force must do thee right, because he hat

th. Is it possible dat I should love de enemy France?

Hen. No; it is not possible you should love enemy of France, Kate: but, in loving me, you did love the friend of France; for I love France well, that I will not part with a village of it; ill have it all mine: and, Kate, when France dies, and I am yours, then yours is France, and are mine.

th. I cannot tell vat is dat.

Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; but, I am sure, will hang upon my tongue like ew-married wife about her husband's neck, (ly to be shook off. Quand j'ay la possession de ce, & quand vous avez la possession de moi, me see, what then? Saint Dennis be my speed! ce nostre est France, & vous estes mienne. It is say for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as weak so much more French: I shall never move in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

th. Sauf vostre honneur, le Francois que vous est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

Hen. No, i'faith, is't not, Kate: but thy king of my tongue, and I thine, most truly ly, must needs be granted to be much at one. Kate, dost thou understand thus much English? or thou love me?

th. I cannot tell.

Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? ask them. Come, I know, thou lovest me: at night, when you come into your closet, I question this gentlewoman about me; and I, Kate, you will, to her, praise those parts, that you love with your heart: but, good mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle prince, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st Kate, (as I have a saving faith within me, me,—thou shalt,) I get thee with scrambling, thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier: Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half th, half English, that shall go to Constantinople, and take the Turk by the beard? shall we what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce? th. I do not know dat.

Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to be: do but now promise, Kate, you will enquire for your French part of such a boy; and, y English moiety, take the word of a king and a belor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine monde, mon tres chere & divine deesse?

th. Your majesty 'ave fussee French enough to be de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

Hen. Now, lie upon my false French! By honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate: such honour I dare not swear, thou lovest me; y blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, upstanding the poor and untempering effect of sage. Now beshrew my father's ambition! he binking of civil wars when he got me; thereas I created with a stubborn outside, with feet of iron, that when I come, to woo ladies, it them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, ster I shall appear: my comfort is, that old hat ill layer up of beauty, can do no more upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear thee; and better; And therefore tell me, most adarine, will you have me? Put off your a blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart he looks of an empress; take me by the hand, y—Harry of England, I am thine: which thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, will tell thee aloud—England is thine, Iren—thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantaine is thine; who, though I speak it before his be be not fellow with the best king, thou and the best king of good fellows. Come, your in broken musick; for thy voice is musick, y English broken: therefore, queen of all,

Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English, Wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is, as it shall please de roy mon pere.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it shall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I will kiss your hand, and I call you—my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez: ma foy, je ne veur point que vous abaissez vostre grandeur, en baisant la main d'une vostre indigne serviteure; eaeusez moy, je vous supplie, mon tres puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, & damoiselles, pour estre baisees devant leur nopces, il n'est pas le coutume de France.

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell what is, baiser, en English.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moy.

K. Hen. It is not the fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Ouy, vrayment.

K. Hen. O, Kate, nice customs curt'sy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places, stops the mouths of all find-faults; as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country, in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently, and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England, than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French King and Queen, BURGUNDY, BEDFORD, GLÖSTER, EXETER, WESTMORLAND, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! my royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her, and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz: and my condition is not smooth: so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her you must make a circle: if you conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked, and blind: Can you blame her then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink, and yield; as love is blind, and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, god my lord, teach your cousin to consent to winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time, and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness: who cannot see many a fair French city, for one fair French maid, that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls, that war hath never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid, that stood in the way of my wish, shall show me the way to my will.

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter, first; and then, in sequel, all, According to their firm proposed natures.

Exc. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this:—Where your majesty demands,—That the king of France having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French,—Notre tres cher filz Henry roy d'Angleterre, heretier de France; and thus in Latin,—Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, rex Angliæ, & hæres Franciæ.

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied, But your request shall make me let it pass.

K. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance, Let that one article rank with the rest: And, thereupon, give me your daughter.

F. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up

Issue to me: that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale With envy of each other's happiness, May cease their hatred; and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Now welcome, Kate:—and bear me witness all,

That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, ^[Flourish.] Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one! As man and wife, being two, are one in love, So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal, That never may ill office, or fell jealousy, Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage, Thrust in between the pactions of these kingdoms, To make divorce of their incorporate league; That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receive each other!—God speak this Amen!

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage:—on which day,

My lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers', for surety of our leagues.— Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me; And may our oaths well kept and prosp'rous be!

[Exeunt.]

Enter CHORUS.

Thus far, with rough and all unable pen,
Our bending author hath pursu'd the story;
In little room confining mighty men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory,
Small time, but, in that small, most greatly liv'd
This star of England: fortune made his sword;
By which the world's best garden he achiev'd,
And of it left his son imperial lord.

Henry the sixth, in infant bands crown'd king,
Of France and England did this king succeed;
Whose state so many had the manag'ing,
That they lost France, and made his England bleed:

Which oft our stage hath shown; and, for their sake,
In your fair minds let this acceptance take. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Westminster Abbey.

Lord Marshal. Corpse of King HENRY the Fifth discovered, lying in state; attended on by the Dukes of BEDFORD, GLOSTER, and EXETER; the Earl of WARWICK, the Bishop of WINCHESTER, Heralds, &c.

And. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
Bemurder your crystal tresses in the sky;
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars,
That have consented unto Henry's death!

Henry the fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glo. England ne'er had a king, until his time.
Venus he had, deserving to command:

His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;
His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;

His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies,

Than mid-day sun, fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:

He ne'er lift up his hand, but conquered.
Re. We mourn in black; Why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead, and never shall revive:
Upon a wooden coffin we attend;

And death's dishonourable victory
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.

What! shall we curse the planets of mishap,
That plow'd thus our glory's overthrow?

Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings.
When the French the dreadful judgment day
In dreadful will not be, as was his sight.

The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:

The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:

None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.

Win. Gloster, whate'er we like, thou art protector;

And lookest to command the prince and realm.

Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
More than God, or religious churchmen, may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh;

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minds in peace!

Let's to the altar:—Heralds, wait on us:—

Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms;

Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.—

Posterity, await for wretched years,
When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck;

Our isle be made a nourish of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.—

Henry the fifth! thy ghost I invoke;

Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!

Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!

A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Cæsar, or bright—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,

Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:

Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guaysors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?

Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead, and rise from death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? is Rouen yielded up?

If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Eae. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.

Among the soldiers this is muttered,—

That here you maintain several factions;

And, whilst a field should be despatch'd and fought,

You are disputing of your generals.

One would have ling'ring wars with little cost;

Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;

A third man thinks, without expense at all,

By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.

Awake, awake, English nobility!

Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot:

Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;

Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Eae. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,

These tidings would call forth her flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; request I am of France.—

Give me my steeled coat, I'll fight for France.—

Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!

Wounds I will lend the French, instead of eyes,

To wipe their intermissive miseries.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad
mischance,

France is revolted from the English quite;

Except some petty towns of no import:

The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;

The bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;

Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;

The duke of Alençon fieth to his side.

Eae. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him!

O, whether shall we fly from this reproach?

Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats:—

Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forward-

ness?

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,

Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords,—to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew king Henry's hearse,—

I must inform you of a dismal fight,

Betwix the stout lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? is't so?

3 Mess. O, no; wherein lord Talbot was o'er-thrown:

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.

The tenth of August last, this dreadful lord,

Retiring from the siege of Orleans,

Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,

By three and twenty thousand of the French

Was round encompassed and set upon:

No leisure had he to enrank his men;

He wanted pikes to set before his archers;

Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges,

They pitched in the ground confusedly,

To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.

More than three hours the fight continued;

Where valiant Talbot, above human thought,

Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.

Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him;

Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he slew;

The French exclaim'd, The devil was in arms;

All the whole army stood amaz'd on him:

His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,

A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out amain,

And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.

Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,

If sir John Fastolf had not play'd the coward;

He, being in the vaward, (plac'd behind,

With purpose to relieve and follow them,) cowardly fled,

Not having struck one stroke.

Hence grew the general wreck and massacre;

Enclosed were they with their enemies:

A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,

Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;

Whom all France, with their chief assembled

strength,

Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself,

For living idly here, in pomp and ease,

Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd.

3 Mess. O no, he lives; but is took prisoner

And lord Scales with him, and lord Hunge

Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took, likewise

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall

I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne

His crown shall be the ransom of my friend

Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours

Farewell, my masters; to my task will I;

Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,

To keep our great Saint George's feast with

Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,

Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe

3 Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is betray'd

The English army is grown weak and faint

The earl of Salisbury craveth supply,

And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,

Since they, so few, watch such a multitude

Eae. Remember, lords, your oaths to me sworn;

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,

Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take I

To go about my preparation.

Glo. I'll to the Tower, with all the best

To view the artillery and munition;

And then I will proclaim young Henry king

Eae. To Eltham will I, where the young

Being ordain'd his special governor;

And for his safety there I'll best provide.

Win. Each hath his place and function to

I am left out; for me nothing remains.

But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office;

The king from Eltham I intend to send,

And sit at chiefest stern of publick weal.

[Exit. See

France. Before Orleans.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide

He fighteth as one weary of his life.

The other lords, like lions wanting food,

Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

More truly now may this be verified;

For none but Samsons, and Goliasses,

It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!

Lean raw-hon'd rascals! who would e'er

They had such courage and audacity!

Let's leave 'this town; for they are hairrain'd slaves,
nger will enforce them to be more eager:
I know them; rather with their teeth

I think, by some odd gimmals or device, rms are set, like clocks, still to strike on;
'er could they hold out so, as they do.

Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Where's the prince Dauphin? I have news of him.

Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.
Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer
spall'd;

a late overthrow wrought this offence?
dismay'd, for succour is at hand:

maid hither with me I bring,
by a vision sent to her from heaven,

re the English forth the bounds of France.

past, and what's to come, she can descry.

'are certain and unfallible.

Go, call her in: [Exit Bastard.] But,
st, to try her skill,

'stand thou as Dauphin in my place:
her proudly, let thy looks be stern:—

means shall we sound what skill she hath.
[Retires.]

A PUCELLE, Bastard of Orleans, and Others.

Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wond'rous
uts?

Seignior, is't thou that thinkest to beguile
me?

the Dauphin?—come, come from behind;
hee well, though never seen before.

mas'd, there's nothing hid from me:
e will I talk with thee apart;

ck, you lords, and give us leave a while,
she takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,

entrain'd in any kind of art.
and our Lady gracious, hath it pleas'd on my contemptible estate:

it I waited on my tender lambs,

in's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
ther deigned to appear to me;

a vision full of majesty,
e to leave my base vocation,

my country from calamity:
he promis'd, and assur'd success:

the glory she reveal'd herself;
reas I was black and swart before,

se clear rays, which she infus'd on me,
ity am I bless'd with, which you see.

that question thou canst possible,

ge try by combat, if thou dar'st, shalt find, that I exceed my sex.

o this: Thou shalt be fortunate,
eeve me for thy warlike mate.

ou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms;
proof I'll of thy valour make,

combat thou shalt buckle with me;
ou vanquishest, thy words are true;

o, I renounce all confidence.
m prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd sword,

ith five flower-de-luces on each side;
h at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's

rechyrd,
reat deal of old iron I chose forth.

hen come o'God's name, I fear no woman.
ad, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[They fight.]
ay, stay thy hands; thou art an Amazon,

eat with the sword of Deborah.
hrist's mother helps me, else I were too k.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou, that must help me:

Impatiently I burn with thy desire;
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant, and not sovereign, be;

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus.
Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred from above:
When I have chased all thy foes from hence,

Then will I think upon a recompense.
Char. Mean time, look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.
Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know:

These women are 'shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on?
Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!
Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says, I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.
This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,
Since I have entered into these wars.

Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,

Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.
With Henry's death, the English circle ends;

Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship,

Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.
Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired then.
Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters, were like thee.
Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,

How may I reverently worship thee enough?
Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;

Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd.
Char. Presently we'll try;—Come, let's away about it:

No prophet will I trust, if she prove false. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

London. Hill before the Tower.

Enter, at the gates, the Duke of GLOSTER, with his Serving-men, in blue coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day:
Since Henry's death, I fear there is conveyance.—
Where be these warders, that they wait not here?
Open the gates; Gloster it is, that calls.

[Servants knock.]
1 Ward. [Within.] Who is there, that knocks so imperiously?

1 Serv. It is the noble duke of Gloster.

2 Ward. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you may not let him in.

1 Serv. Villains, answer you so the lord protector?

1 Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him:

We do no otherwise than we are will'd.
Glo. Who willed you? or whose will stands,
but mine?

There's none protector of the realm, but I.—
Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize:
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

Servants rush at the Tower gates. Enter, to the gates, WOODVILLE, the Lieutenant.

Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you, whose voice I hear?
Open the gates; here's Gloster that would enter.

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble duke; I may not open;

The cardinal of Winchester forbids:
From him I have express commandment,
That thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in.
Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him 'fore me?
Arrogant Winchester? that haughty prelate,
Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook?
Thou art no friend to God, or to the king;
Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.
I Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector;
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by a train of Servants in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphry, what means this?

Glo. Piel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor,
And not protector of the king or realm.

Glo. Staud back, thou manifest conspirator;
Thou, that contriv'dst to murder our dead lord;
Thou, that giv'st whores indulgences to sin;
I'll canvas thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot;

This he Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back:
Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing-cloth
I'll use, to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I heard thee to thy face

Glo. What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?—
Draw, men, for all this privileged place;
Blue-coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard;

[Gloster and his men attack the Bishop.

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly:
Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat;

In spite of pope or dignities of church,
Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloster, thou'lt answer this before the pope.

Glo. Winchester goose, I cry—a rope! a rope!

Now beat them hence, why do you let them stay?—

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.—
Out, tawny coats!—out, scarlet hypocrite!

Here a great tumult. In the midst of it, enter the Mayor of London, and Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glo. Peace, mayor; thou know'st little of my wrongs:

Here's Beaufort, that regards not God nor king,
Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloster too, a foe to citizens;

One, that still motions war, and never peace;

O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;

That seeks to overthrow religion,

Because he is protector of the realm;

And would have armour here out of the Tower,
To crown himself king, and suppress the prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again.

May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife,
But to make open proclamation:—

Come, officer; as loud as e'er thou canst.

Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness's name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger,

henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law;

But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloster, we'll meet; to thy dear cost, be sure:

Thy heart-blood I will have, for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not away:

This cardinal is more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou may'st.

Win. Abominable Gloster! guard thy head:
For I intend to have it, ere long.

May. See the east clear'd, and then depart.—

Good God! that nobles should such stomach
I myself fight not once in forty year.

 word did ne'er leave striking in the field.—

 ched shall France be only in my name.

[Thunder heard; afterwards an alarm.]
 stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?
 see cometh this alarm, and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

x. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head:
 Jauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,— y prophethess, new risen up,— oc with a great power to raise the siege.
 [Salisbury groans.]
 Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!
 his heart, he cannot be reveng'd.—
 Amen, I'll be a Salisbury to you:—
 le or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish, hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels, take a quagmire of your mingled brains.—
 y me Salisbury into his tent, hen we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare. [Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.]

SCENE V.

The same. Before one of the gates.

n. Skirmishings. TALBOT pursueth the phin, and driveth him in: then enter JOAN PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her.
 enter TALBOT.

Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
 English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
 man, clad in armour, chaseth them.

Enter LA PUCELLE.

here she comes:—I'll have a bout with thee;
 or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
 will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
 straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.
 Come, come, 'tis only I, that must disgrace thee. [They fight.]

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?
 My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
 And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
 But I will chāstise this high-minded strumpet.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:
 I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
 O'ertake me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
 Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
 Help Salisbury to make his testament:
 This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[Pucelle enters the town, with soldiers.]

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;
 I know not where I am, nor what I do:
 A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal,
 Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
 So hees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,
 Are from their hives, and houses, driven away.
 They call'd us, for our fierceness, English dogs;
 Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short alarm.]

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
 Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
 Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
 Sheep run not half so timorous from the wolf,
 Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard,
 As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarm. Another skirmish.]

It will not be:—Retire into your trenches:
 You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
 For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.—
 Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
 In spite of us, or aught that we could do.
 O, would I were to die with Salisbury!
 The shame hereof will make me hide my head.

[Alarm. Retreat. Exeunt Talbot and his forces, &c.]

SCENE VI.

The same.

Enter, on the walls, PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENCON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;
 Rescu'd is Orleans from the English wolves:—
 Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, bright Astrac's daughter,
 How shall I honour thee for this success?
 Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
 That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.—
 France, triumph in thy glorious prophethess!—
 Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
 More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,
 And feast and banquet in the open streets,
 To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,
 When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;
 For which, I will divide my crown with her:
 And all the priests and friars in my realm
 Shall, in procession, sing her endless praise.
 A stately pyramid to her I'll rear,
 Than Rhodope's, or Memphis', ever was:
 In memory of her, when she is dead,
 Her ashes, in an urn, more precious
 Than the rich-jewel'd coffer of Darius,
 Transported shall be at high festivals
 Before the kings and queens of France.
 No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
 But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
 Come in; and let us banquet royally,
 After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The same.

At the gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
 noise, or soldier, you perceive,

Near to the walls, by some apparent sign,
 Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors
 (When others sleep upon their quiet beds,
 Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

K k

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and forces, with scaling ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent,—and redoubted Burgundy,—By whose approach the regions of Artois, Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us, This happy night the Frenchmen are secure, Having all day carous'd and banqueted: Embrace we then this opportunity; As fitting best to quittance their deceit, Contriv'd by art, and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs his fame,

Despairing of his own arm's fortitude, To join with witches, and the help of hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.—But what's that Pucelle, whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial!

Bur. Pray God, she prove not masculine ere long; If underneath the standard of the French, She carry armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:

God is our fortress; in whose conquering name, Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,

That we do make our entrance several ways;

That, if it chance the one of us do fail,

The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed; I'll to yon corner.

Bur. And I to this. Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.—

Now, Salisbury! for thee, and for the right

Of English Henry, shall this night appear

How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls, crying St. George! a Talbot! and all enter by the town.]

Sent. [Within.] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the walls in their shirts. Enter, several ways, BUSTARD, ALENCON, REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords? what, all unready so?

Bast. Unready? ay, and glad we 'scap'd so well.

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarums at our chamber doors.

Alen. Of all exploits, since first I follow'd arms,

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprize

More venturous, or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles; I marvel how he sped.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,

Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?

Sleeping, or waking, must I still prevail,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?

Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default;

That, being captain of the watch to-night,

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept,

As that whereof I had the government,

We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter, and mine own precinct,

I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels:

Then how, or which way, should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,

How, or which way; 'tis sure, they found place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was. And now there rests no other shift but this.—To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd, And lay new platforms to endanger them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying, a Talbot! a Talbot! They fly, leaving their behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have. The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword; For I have loaden me with many spoils, Using no other weapon but his name.

SCENE II.

Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, Captain, and Others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth. Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury. And here advance it in the market-place, The middle centre of this cursed town.— Now have I paid my vow unto his soul; For every drop of blood was drawn from him There hath at least five Frenchmen died to— And, that hereafter ages may behold What ruin happen'd in revenge of him, Within their chiefest temple I'll erect A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd Upon the which, that every one may read, Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans; The treacherous manner of his mournful death. And what a terror he had been to France. But, lords, in all our bloody massacre, I muse, we met not with the Dauphin's good. His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc. Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord Talbot, when they Rons'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds They did, amongst the troops of armed men Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself (as far as I could well discern) For smoke, and dusky vapours of the night Am sure, I scard'd the Dauphin, and his train. When arm in arm they both came swiftly— Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves, That could not live asunder day or night. After that things are set in order here, We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! which of this train

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts

So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak to him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, countess of Auvergne

With modesty admiring thy renown,

By me entreats, good lord, thou wouldst visit

To visit her poor castle, where she lies;

That she may boast, she hath beheld the

Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see, it

Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport,

When ladies crave to be encounter'd with. You may not, my lord, despise her gentle

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for, when a man

Could not prevail with all their oratory,

Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ruled:—

And therefore tell her, I return great thanks

And in submission will attend on her.—

Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners

And I have heard it said,—Unbidden guests

Are often welcomest, when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.

hither, captain. [Whispers.—You perceive my mind.

t. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

Enter the Countess, and her Porter.

nt. Porter, remember what I gave in charge; when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

t. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

nt. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right, I as famous be by this exploit, ythan Thomyris by Cyrus' death, is the rumour of this dreadful night, is achievements of no less account: would mine eyes be witness with mine ears, e their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

r. Madam, ting as your ladyship desir'd, message crav'd, so is lord Talbot come.

nt. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?

r. Madam, it is.

nt. Is this the scourge of France?

t. The Talbot so much fear'd abroad, with his name the mothers still their babes?

report is fabulous and false:

ght I should have seen some Hercules, and Hector, for his grim aspect,

urge proportion of his strong-knit limbs,

this is a child, a silly dwarf:

set be, this weak and writhled shrimp

I strike such terror to his enemies.

Madam, I have been bold to trouble you:

nce your ladyship is not at leisure,

rt some other time to visit you.

nt. What means he now?—Go ask him, whither he goes.

t. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady craves ow the cause of your abrupt departure.

Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief, certify her, Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with keys.

nt. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Prisoner! to whom?

nt. To me, blood-thirsty lord;

re that cause I train'd thee to my house,

ime thy shadow hath been thrall to me,

my gallery thy picture hangs:

ow the substance shall endure the like;

will chain these legs and arms of thine,

ast by tyranny, these many years,

d our country, slain our citizens,

nt our sons and husbands captivate.

Ha, ha, ha!

nt. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall urn to moan.

I laugh to see your ladyship so fond,

nk, that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,

on to practise your severity.

nt. Why, art not thou the man?

I am indeed.

nt. Then have I substance too.

No, no, I am but shadow of myself;

e deceiv'd, my substance is not here;

ast you see, is but the smallest part

ast proportion of humanity:

oo, madam, were the whole frame here,

such a spacious lofty pitch,

oof were not sufficient to contain it.

t. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;

I be here, and yet he is not here:

an these contraries agree?

That I will show you presently.

nds a horn. Drums heard; then a peal of nce. The gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

ty you, madam? are you now persuaded,

albot is but shadow of himself?

re his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,

which he yoketh your rebellious necks;

Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns, And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse: I find, thou art no less than fame hath brutted, And more than may be gather'd by thy shape. Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath; For I am sorry, that with reverence I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake The outward composition of his body.

What you have done, hath not offended me: No other satisfaction do I crave, But only (with your patience,) that we may Taste of your wine, and see what cates you have; For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart; and think me honoured To feast so great a warrior in my house. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earls of SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a ease of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud; The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the truth; Or, else, was wrangling Somerset in error?

Suf. 'Faith, I have been a taut in the law; And never yet could frame my will to it;

And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch,

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth, Between two blades, which bears the better temper,

Between two horses, which doth bear him best, Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,

I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment: But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance: The truth appears so naked on my side,

That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd, So clear, so shining, and so evident,

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loath to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts: Let him, that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth, If he suppose, that I have pleaded truth,

From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him, that is no coward, nor no flatterer, But dare maintain the party of the truth,

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all colour Of base insinuating flattery,

I pluck this white rose, with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose, with young Somerset; And say withal, I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords, and gentlemen; and pluck no more,

Till you conclude—that he, upon whose side The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good master Vernon, it is well objected; If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case, I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,

Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off; Least, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,

And fall on my side so against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed, Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,

And keep me on the side, where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on: Who else?

Law. Unless my study, and my books be false,

The argument you held, was wrong in you;
[To Somerset.]

In sign whereof, I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here, in my scabbard; meditating that,
Shall die your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Mean time, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet,
'Tis not for fear; but anger,—that thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our roses;
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding
roses,

That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish boy.

Suf. Turn not thy scorn thus way, Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William De-la-Poole;

And we grace the yeoman, by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him,
Somerset;

His grandfather was Lionel, duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward king of England;

Springcrestless yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By him, that made me, I'll maintain my words

On any plot of ground in Christendom:

Was not thy father, Richard, earl of Cambridge,
For treason executed in our late king's days?

And, by his treason, stand'st not thou attainted,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?

His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not attainted;

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.

For your partaker Poole, and you yourself,
I'll note you in my book of memory,

To scourge you for this apprehension:

Look to it well; and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ay, thou shalt find us ready for thee still:

And know us, by these colours, for thy foes;

For these my friends, in spite of thee, shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,
As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,

Will I for ever, and my faction, wear;

Until it wither with me to my grave,
Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition!

And so farewell, until I meet thee next. [Exit.]

Som. Have with thee, Poole.—Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.]

Plan. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it!

War. This blot, that they object against your house,
Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament,
Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloster:

And, if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.

Mean time, in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset, and William Poole,

Will I upon thy party wear this rose:

And here I prophesy,—This brawl to-day,
Grown to this faction, in the Temple garden,
Shall send, between the red rose and the white,
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That thou on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Vern. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.
Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say,
This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

The same. A room in the Tower.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair by Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.—

Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment:

And these grey locks, the pursuivants of de
Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

These eyes,—like lamps, whose wasting spent,—

Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent:
Weak shoulders, overborne with burd'ning
And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine
That droops his sapless branches to the gro

Yet are these feet—whose strengthless stay I
Unable to support this lump of clay,—

Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have.—

Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort:—
And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,—
I doubt not, but with honour to redress:
And therefore haste I to the parliament;
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill the advantage of my good. [Exit.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. The Parliament-House.

Enter King HENRY, EXETER, GLOSWARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the Bishop of WINCHESTER, RICHARD STAGENET, and Others. Gloster offers to a bill; Winchester snatches it, and tears it.

Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines, written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
sirey of Gloster; if thou caust accuse,
thou intend'st to lay unto my charge,
without invention suddenly;
with sudden and extemporal speech to answer what thou canst object.
Presumptuous priest! this place commands
thy patience.
I should'st find thou hast dishonour'd me.
not, although in writing I prefer'd number of thy vile outrageous crimes, wherefore I have forg'd, or am not able to rehearse the method of my pen:
date; such is thy audacious wickedness,
r'd, pestiferous, and dissentional pranks,
infants prattle of thy pride.
rt a most pernicious usurer;
d by nature, enemy to peace;
ous, wanton, more than well beseems of thy profession, and degree;
thy treachery, What's more manifest?
thou laid'st a trap to take my life,
at London bridge, as at the Tower?
I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
g, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt
vious malice of thy swalling heart.
Gloster, I do defy thee.—Lords, vouchsafe me hearing what I shall reply.
e covetous, ambitious, or perverse, ill have me, How am I so poor!

myself, but keep my wanted calling?

an I do,—except I be provok'd?
good lords, it is not that offends;
that, that hath incens'd the duke:
cause no one should sway but he;
but he, should be about the king;
it engenders thunder in his breast,
kes him roar these accusations forth.
shall know, I am as good—

As good!

Thou bastard of my grandfather!

Win. Ay, lordly sir; For what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in another's throne?

Glo. Am I not the protector, saucy priest?

Win. And am I not a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,
And useth it to patronage his theft.

Win. Unreverent Gloster!

Glo. Thou art reverent
Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.

Win. This Rome shall remedy.

War. Roam thither then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks, my lord should be religious,
And know the office, that belongs to such.

War. Methinks, his lordship should be humbler;
It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy, or unhallow'd, what of that?
Is not his grace protector to the king?

Plan. Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue;
Lest it be said, Speuk, sirrah, when you should;
Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?

Else would I have a fling at Winchester. [Aside.

K. Hen. Uncles of Gloster, and of Winchester,
The special watchmen of our English weal;
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amity.
O, what a scandal is it to our crown,
That two such noble peers as ye should jar!
Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell,
Civil dissention is a viperous worm,
That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.—
[A noise within; Down with the tawny coats!
What tumult's this!

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the bishop's men.
[A noise again; Stones! Stones!

Enter the Mayor of London, attended.

May. O, my good lords,—and virtuous Henry,— Pity the city of London, pity us!
The bishop and the duke of Gloster's men,
Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble-stones;
And, banding themselves in contrary parts,
Do pelt so fast at one another's pate,
That many have their giddy brains knock'd out;
Our windows are broke down in every street,
And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our shops.

K l 2

Enter, skirmishing, the retainers of Gloster and Winchester, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself, To hold your slaughter'd hands, and keep the peace. Pray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.

1 Serv. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.
2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil, And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

3 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man Just and upright; and, for your royal birth, Inferior to none, but to his majesty: And, ere that we will suffer such a prince, So kind a father of the commonweal, To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate, We, and our wives, and children, all will fight, And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails Shall pitch a field, when we are dead.

Glo. [Skirmish again.] Stay, stay, I say!

And, if you love me, as you say you do, Let me persuade you to forbear a while.

K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!— Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold My sighs and tears, and will not once relent? Who should be pitiful, if you be not? Or who should study to prefer a peace, If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. My lord protector, yield;—yield, Winchester;—

Except you mean, with obstinate repulse, To slay your sovereign, and destroy the realm. You see what mischief, and what murder too, Hath been enacted through your enmity; Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop; Or, I would see his heart out, ere the priest Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke Hath banish'd moody discontented fury, As by his smoothed brows it doth appear: Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,

That malice was a great and grievous sin: And will not you maintain the thing, you teach, But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly gird.—

For shame, my lord of Winchester! relent; What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee; Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

Glo. Ay; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.— See here, my friends, and loving countrymen;

This token serveth for a flag of truce,

Betwixt ourselves, and all our followers:

So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. So help me God, as I intend it not? [Aside.]

K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind duke of Gloster,

How joyful am I made by this contract!—

Away, my masters! trouble us no more;

But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1 Serv. Content; I'll to the surgeon's.

2 Serv. And so will I.

3 Serv. And I will see what physick the tavern affords. [Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c.]

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign; Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my lord of Warwick;—for, sweet prince,

An if your grace mark every circumstance,

You have great reason to do Richard right:

Especially, for those occasions

At Eltham-place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is,

That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;

So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, so willetth Winche

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that; But all the whole inheritance I give, That doth belong unto the house of York, From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plant. Thy humble servant vows obedience And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knee to my foot;

And, in requerdon of that duty done, I girt thee with the valiant sword of York:

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet;

And rise created princely duke of York.

 Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold

 [Talbot, and the rest, consult together.]

eed the parliament! who will be the speaker?
 Dare ye come forth, and meet us in the field?

Belike, your lordship takes us then for fools,
 if that our own be ours, or no.

I speak not to that railing Hecate,

, like soldiers, come and fight it out?
 Signior, no.

Signior, hang!—base muleteers of France!
 assant foot-boys do they keep the walls,

[Exeunt La Pucelle, &c. from the walls.]

And there will we be too, ere it be long, reproach be Talbot's greatest fame!

Burgandy, by honour of thy house, d on by publick wrongs, sustain'd in France,

to get the town again, or die:
 —as sure as English Henry lives,

his father here was conqueror;
 as in this late-betrayed town

Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried;
 I swear, to get the town, or die.

My vows are equal partners with thy vows.
 Bot, ere we go, regard this dying prince,

liant duke of Bedford:—Come, my lord,
 ll bestow you in some better place,

or sickness, and for crazy age.
 Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:

ill I sit before the walls of Rouen,
 ll be partner of your weal, or woe.

Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.
 Not to be gone from hence; for once I read,
 out Pendragon, in his litter, sick,

Came to the field, and vanquished his foes:
 Methinks, I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
 Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!—
 Then be it so:—Heavens keep old Bedford safe!—

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
 But gather we our forces out of hand,
 And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt Burgundy, Talbot, and Forces, leaving Bedford, and Others.]

Alarm: Excursions. Enter Sir JOHN FAS-

TOLFE, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?
 Fast. Whither away? to save myself by flight;

We are like to have the overthrow again.
 Cap. What! will you fly, and leave lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay.

All the Talbots in the world, to save my life. [Exit.]

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee!
 [Exit.]

Retreat: Excursions. Enter, from the town, LA

PUCELLE, ALENCON, CHARLES, &c. and Exeunt, flying.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please;
 For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.

What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
 They, that of late were daring with their scoffs,
 Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried off in his chair.]

Alarm: Enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and Others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again!
 This is a double honour, Burgundy:

Yet, heavens have glory for this victory!
 Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy

Enshrines thee in his heart; and there erects
 Thy noble deeds, as valour's monument.

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But, where is Pucelle
 now?

I think her old familiar is asleep:
 Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What, all a-mort? Rouen hangs her head for grief,
 That such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the town,
 Placing therein some expert officers;

And then depart to Paris, to the king;
 For there young Harry, with his nobles, lies.

Bur. What wills lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgundy.
 Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget

The noble duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
 But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen;

A braver soldier never couched lance,
 A gentler heart did never sway in court:

But kings, and mightiest potentates, must die;
 For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. The plains near the city.

Enter CHARLES, the Bastard, ALENCON,
 LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
 Nor grieve, that Rouen is so recovered:

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
 For things, that are not to be remedied.

Let frankick Talbot triumph for a while,
 And like a peacock sweep along his tail;

We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train,
 If Dauphin, and the rest, will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
 And of thy cunning had no diffidence;

One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.
 Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,

And we will make thee famous through the world.
 Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,

And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint;
 Employ thee then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise:
 By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,

We will entice the duke of Burgundy
 To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expul'd from France,

And not have title to an earldom here.

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work,
To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drums heard.
Hark! by the sound of drum, you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

An English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of BURGUNDY and Forces.

Now, in the rearward, comes the duke, and his;
Fortune, in favour, makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley, we will talk with him.

[A parley sounded.
Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle; and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!
Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,
And see the cities and the towns defac'd
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe!

As looks the mother on her lowly babe,
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see, the pining malady of France;

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woful breast!

O, turn thy edged sword another way;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help!

One drop of blood, drawn from thy country's bosom,
Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore;

Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots!

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,
Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee,

Doubting thy birth, and lawful progeny,
Who join'st thou with, but with a lordly nation,
That will not trust thee, but for profit's sake?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,

Who then, but English Henry, will be lord,
And thou be thrust out, like a fugitive?

Call we to mind,—and mark but this, for proof;—
Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe?

And was he not in England prisoner?
But, when they heard he was thine enemy,

They set him free, without his ransom paid,
In spite of Burgundy, and all his friends.

See then! thou fight'st against thy countrymen,
And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men.

Come, come, return; return, thou wand'ring lord;
Charles, and the rest, will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquish'd; these haughty words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees—
Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace
My forces and my power of men are yours;
So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust the base knight, when I did meet thee next,

the garter from thy craven's leg.

[Plucking it off.]

I have done) because unworthily ast installed in that high degree.—
me, princely Henry, and the rest:
stard, at the battle of Patay, ut in all I was six thousand strong,
t the French were almost ten to one,—
we met, or that a stroke was given,
a trusty esquire, did run away;
a assault we lost twelve hundred men;
and divers gentlemen beside,
ere surpris'd, and taken prisoners.
dge, great lords, if I have done amiss;
her that such cowards ought to wear ament of knighthood, yea, or no.
o say the truth, this fact was infamous,
beseming any common man;
ore a knight, a captain, and a leader.
When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,
of the garter were of noble birth;
and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
were grown to credit by the wars;
ing death, ner shrinking for distress,
ays resolute in most extremes.
, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
t usurp the sacred name of knight,
g this most honourable order;
ald (if I were worthy to be judge,) degraded, like a hedge-born swain,
h presume to boast of gentle blood.
i. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hear'st
y doom:
ng therefore, thou that wast a knight;
th we hainish thee, on pain of death.—

[Exit Fastolf.]

my lord protector, view the letter,
our uncle duke of Burgundy.
hat means his grace, that he hath chang'd style? [Reading the superscription.]
but plain and bluntly,—To the king?
forget, he is his sovereign?
this churlish superscription some alteration in good will?
ere!—I have, upon especial cause,—

[Reads.]

*With compassion of my country's wreck,
t with the pitiful complaints
i as your oppression feeds upon,— n your pernicious faction, d'n'd with Charles, the rightful king of nce.*
ous treachery! can this be so;
lliance, amity, and oaths,
uld be found such false dissembling guile?
What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?
e doth, my lord, and is become your foe.
Is that the worst this letter doth contain?
is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.
Why then, lord Talbot there shall talk
h him,
him chastisement for this abuse:—
how say you? are you not content?
ontent, my liege? Yes; but that I am vented,
have begg'd I might have been employ'd.
Then gather strength, and march unto a straight:
erceive, how ill we brook his treason;
t offence it is, to flout his friends.
So, my lord; in heart desiring still, behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]
nter VERNON and BASSET.

Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!
d me, my lord, grant me the combat too!
his is my servant; Hear him, noble prince.
od this is mine; Sweet Henry, favour!

Be patient, lords; and give them leave peak.—

emen, What makes you thus exclaim?
fore crave you combat? or with whom?

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong, whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,
This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose, I wear;
Saying—the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth,
About a certain question in the law,
Argu'd betwixt the duke of York and him;
With other vile and ignominious terms:
In confutation of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms.

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:
For though he seem, with forged quaint conceit,
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;
And he first took exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing—that the paleness of this flower
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my lord of York, will out,
Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.

K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brainsick men;

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause,
Such factious emulations shall arise!
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissention first be tried by fight,
And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.

Ver. Nay, let it rest, where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so! Confounded be your strifa!
And perish ye, with your audacious prate!

Presumptuous vassals! are you not asham'd,
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?
And you, my lords,—methinks, you do not well,
To bear with their perverse objections;

Much less, to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves;

Let me persuade you, take a better course.

Exc. It grieves his highness;—Good, my lords, be friends.

K. Hen. Come hither, you, that would be cem-hatants:

Henceforth, I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel, and the cause.—

And you, my lords,—remember where we are;
In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:

If they perceive dissention in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel!

Beside, What infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified,
That, for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers, and chief nobility,
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France;

O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years; and let us not forego
That for a trifle, that was bought with blood?
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.

I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

[Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset, than York:

Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both:
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.

But your discretions better can persuade,
Than I am able to instruct or teach:

And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.—

Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France:—

And good my lord of Somerset, unite

Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot;—
And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Your angry choler on your enemies.
Ourselves, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite, will return to Calais;
From thence to England; where I hope ere long
To be presented, by your victories,
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.
[Flourish. Exeunt King Henry, Glo. Som.
Win. Suff. and Basset.

War. My lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.

York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush! that was but his fancy, blame him not;
I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.

York. And, if I wist, he did,—But let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed.

[Exeunt York, Warwick, and Vernon.
Eve. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice:

For, had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear, we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.
But howsoever, no simple man, that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This should'ring of each other in the court,
This factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much, when sceptres are in children's hands;
But more, when envy breeds unkind division;
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion. [Exit.

SCENE II.

France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter,
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls, the General of the French Forces, and Others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England;
And thus he would,—Open your city gates,
Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power:
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter, but by death:
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way can'st thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit:
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum afar off.
Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul;
And mine shall ring to thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c. from the walls.
Tal. He fables not, I hear the enemy;—
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.—

O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French cur
If we be English deer, be then in blood:
Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch
But rather moody-mad, and desperate stag

And they shall find dear deer of us, my fri

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them
This expedition was by York, and Talbot
Too rashly plotted; all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot

SCENE V.

The English camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son.

young John Talbot! I did send for thee, thee in stratagems of war ;
bot's name might be in these reviv'd,
pleas age, and weak unable limbs,
ing thy father to his drooping chair.
malignant and ill-boding stars !—
art come unto a feast of death, and unavoided danger :

dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse ;
direct thee how thou shalt escape
n flight : come, dally not, begone.
s my name Talbot? and am I your son ?
I fly? O, if you love my mother,
r not her honourable name,
a bastard, and a slave of me :
I will say—He is not Talbot's blood,
ly fled, when noble Talbot stood.
y, to revenge my death, if I be slain.
le, that flies so, will ne'er return again.
we both stay, we both are sure to die.
hen let me stay, and, father, do you fly :
is great, so your regard should be ;
unknown, no loss is known in me.
death the French can little boast ;
they will, in you all hopes are lost.
not stain the honour you have won :

it will, that no exploit have done :
or vantage, every one will swear ;
ow, they'll say—it was for fear.
o hope, that ever I will stay,
st hour, I shrink, and run away.
ny knee, I beg mortality,
in life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb ?
John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him, but will be shame in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned name ; Shall flight abuse it ?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here, to fight, and die ?
My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side,

Than can yourself yourself in twain divide ;

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I ;

For live I will not, if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.

Come, side by side together live and die ;

And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

A field of battle.

Alorum: Excursions, wherein TALBOT's Son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,

And left us to the rage of France his sword.

Where is John Talbot?—pause, and take thy breath ;

I gave thee life, and rescu'd thee from death.

John. O twice my father! twice am I thy son :

The life, thou gav'st me first, was lost and done ;

Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,

To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire

Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age,

Quicken'd with youthful spleen, and warlike rage,

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,

And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.

The ireful bastard Orleans—that drew blood

From thee, my boy ; and had the maidenhood

Of thy first fight—I soon encountered ;

And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed

Some of his bastard blood ; and, in disgrace,

Bespoke him thus : Contaminated, base,

And misbegotten blood I spill of thine.

Mean and right poor ; for that pure blood of mine,

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy :—

Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,

Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care ;

Art not thou weary, John? How dost thou fare ?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,

Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry ?

Fly, to revenge my death, when I am dead ;

The help of one stands me in little stead.

O, too much folly is it, well I wot,

To hazard all our lives in one small boat.

If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,

To-morrow I shall die with mickle age :

By me they nothing gain, an if I stay,

'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day :

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,

My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame :

All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay ;

All these are sav'd, if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart,

These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart:

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,

(To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame,)

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,

The coward horse, that bears me, fall and die !

And like me to the peasant boys of France ;

To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance !

Surely, by all the glory you have won,

As if I fly, I am not Talbot's son :

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,
Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;
And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

Another part of the same.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter TALBOT wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life?—mine own is gone;—
O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?—
Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity!
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee:—
When he perceiv'd me shriek, and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,
And, like a hungry lion, did commence
Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience;
But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tend'ring my ruin, and assail'd of none,
Dizzy-ey'd fury, and great rage of heart,
Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clust'ring battle of the French:
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench
His overmounting spirit; and there died
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of JOHN TALBOT.

Serv. O my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!
Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite, shall 'scape mortality.—
O thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd death,
Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath:
Brave death by speaking, whether he will, or no;
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe —
Poor boy? he smiles, methinks; as who should say—
Had death been French, then death had died to-day.
Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms;
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

[Dies.]

Alarums: Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALENCON, BURGUNDY, Bastard, LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Chor. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood,

Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said,
Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid:
But—with a proud, majestic high scorn,—
He answer'd thus; *Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglot wench:
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,*

He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

They humbly sue unto your excellence,

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,

France. Plains in Anjou.

CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENCON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.

o. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

aid, the stout Parisians do revolt, turn again unto the warlike French.

o. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France, keep not back your powers in dalliance.

r. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us; ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Messenger.

o. Success unto our valiant general, happiness to his accomplices!

r. What tidings send our scouts? I pry'thee speak.

o. The English army, that divided was into two parts, is now conjoin'd in one; means to give you battle presently.

r. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is; we will presently provide for them.

o. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there; he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

r. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd:—and the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine; envy fret, and all the world repine.

o. Then on, my lords; And France be fortunate! [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. Before Angiers.

o. Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

The regent conquerors, and the Frenchmen fly.— help, ye charming spells, and periapts; ye choice spirits, that admonish me, we-me signs of future accidents! [Thunder.]

o. speedy helpers, that are substitutes of the lordly monarch of the north, ye, and aid me in this enterprize!

Enter Fiends.

This speedy quick appearance argues proof Of your accustom'd diligence to me. Now, ye familiar spirits, that are cull'd Out of the powerful regions under earth, Help me this once, that France may get the field. [They walk about, and speak not.]

o. hold me not with silence over-long! Where I was wont to feed you with my blood, I'll lop a member off, and give it you, In earnest of a further benefit; So you do condescend to help me now.— [They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress?—My body shall. Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit. [They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice, Entreat you to your wonted furtherance? Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all, Before that England give the French the foil. [They depart.]

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come, That France must veil her lofty-plumed crest, And let her head fall into England's lap. My ancient incantations are too weak, And hell too strong for me to buckle with: Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting. LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand. LA PUCELLE is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think, I have you fast: Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms, And try if they can gain your liberty.— A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace! See, how the ugly witch doth bend her brows, As if, with Circe, she would change my shape.

Puc. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be. York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper man; No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles, and thee! And may ye both be suddenly surpriz'd By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell, banning hag! enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Puc. I pry'thee, give me leave to curse a while. York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter SUFFOLK, leading in Lady MARGARET.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty, do not fear, nor fly; For I will touch thee but with reverent hands, And lay them gently on thy tender side. I kiss these fingers [Kissing her hand.] for eternal peace:

Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee. Marg. Margaret my name; and daughter to a king, The king of Naples, whose'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd. Be not offended, nature's miracle, Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings. Yet, if this servile usage once offend, Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.] O, stay!—I have no power to let her pass; My hand would free her, but my heart says—no. As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, Twinkling another counterfeited beam, So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak: I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind: Fie, De la Poole! disable not thyself; Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight? Ay; beauty's princely majesty is such, Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses rough.

Marg. Say, earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be so,— What ransom must I pay before I pass? For, I perceive, I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell, she will deny thy suit, L 1

Before thou make a trial of her love? [Aside.]

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful; and therefore to be woo'd: She is a woman; and therefore to be won. [Aside.]

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea, or no?

Suf. Fond man! remember, that thou hast a wife;

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour? [Aside.]

Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king: Tush! that's a wooden thing.

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,

And peace established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too:

For though her father be the king of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet he is poor,

And our nobility will scorn the match. [Aside.]

Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:

Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.—

Madam, I have a secret to reveal.

Mar. What though I be enthrall'd? he seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me. [Aside.]

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps, I shall be rescu'd by the French;

And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Aside.]

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush! women have been captivate ere now. [Aside.]

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid pro quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose

Your bondage happy to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage, is more vile,

Than is a slave in base servility;

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,

If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen?

To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,

And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What?

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,

And have no portion in the choice myself.

How say you, madam; are you so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains, and our colours, forth:

And, madam, at your father's castle walls

We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward.]

A parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER, on the walls.

Suf. See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner.

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?

I am a soldier; and unapt to weep,

Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:

Consent, (and for thy honour, give consent,)

Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king;

Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment

Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows,

That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend,

To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit from the walls.]

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sounded. Enter REIGNIER, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories;

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a Fit to be made companion with a king:

What answer makes your grace unto my suit?

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little

To be the princely bride of such a lord;

Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the county Maine, and Anjou

Free from oppression, or the stroke of war,

My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom, I deliver her;

And those two counties, I will undertake,

Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again,—in Henry's royal name

As deputy unto that gracious king,

Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly

Because this is in traffick of a king:

And yet, methinks, I could be well content

To be mine own attorney in this case.

I'll over then to England with this news,

And make this marriage to be solemniz'd;

So, farewell, Reignier! set this diamond seal

In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace

The Christian prince, king Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord! Good wishes, and prayers,

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret.

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! But hark

Margaret;

No princely commendations to my king!

Mar. Such commendations as become a

A virgin, and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly

But, madam, I must trouble you again,—

No loving token to his majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord; a pure unspotted

Never yet taint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal. [Exit]

Mar. That for thyself;—I will not so pre-

To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reignier and Mar.]

Suf. O, wert thou for myself!—But, Suffolk

Thou may'st not wander in that labyrinth;

There Minotours, and ugly treasons, lurk.

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:

Bethink thee on her virtues, that surmount

Mad, natural graces, that extinguish art:

Repeat their semblance often on the seas,

That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's

Thou may'st bereave him of his wits with

SCENE IV.

Camp of the Duke of York, in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Sheriff.

Sherp. Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's right!

Have I sought every country far and near,

And, now it is my chance to find thee out,

Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?

Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die wretched

Puc. Deceitful miser! base ignoble wretch!

I am descended of a gentler blood;

Thou art no father, nor no friend, of mine.

Sherp. Out, out!—My lords, an please you not so;

I did beget her, all the parish knows:

Her mother liveth yet, can testify

She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parent?

York. This argues what her kind of life hath

Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes

Sherp. Fie, Joan! that thou wilt be so

God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh;

And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:

Deny me not, I pry'thee, gentle Joan.

Puc. Peasant, avaunt!—You have suborn'd

man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Sherp. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest born, that I was wedded to her mother.—

down and take my blessing, good my girl.
how not stoop? Now cursed be the time nativity! I would the milk other gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast, een a little ratsbane for thy sake!
e, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
how deny thy father, cursed drab?
a her, burn her; hanging is too good. [Exit.]
Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long,
the world with vicious qualities.

First, let me tell you, whom you have condemn'd:

piration of celestial grace,
rk exceeding miracles on earth.

in from her tender infancy,

and immaculate in very thought;

Ay, ay;—away with her to execution.

And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,

for no faggots, let there be enough:

barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
her torture may be shortened.

Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?—

Joan, discover thine infirmity;

arranteth by law to be thy privilege.—

rich child, ye bloody homicides:

not then the fruit within my womb,

gh ye hale me to a violent death.

Now, heaven forefend! the holy maid with child?

The greatest miracle, that e'er ye wrought:

our strict preciseness come to this?

She and the Dauphin have been juggling:

agine what would be her refuge.

Well, go to; we will have no bastards live;

dly, since Charles must father it.

You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his;

Alençon, that enjoy'd my love.

Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!

an if it had a thousand lives.

O, give me leave, I have deluded you;

neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd, igquier, king of Naples, that prevail'd.

A married man! that's most intolerable.

Why, here's a girl! I think, she knows at well,

were so many, whom she may accuse.

It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

And, yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.—

et, thy words condemn thy brat, and thee:

entreaty, for it is in vain.

Then lead me hence;—with whom I leave
ry curse:

lness and the gloomy shade of death

l you; till mischief, and despair,

oo to break your necks, or hang yourselves!

[Exit, guarded.]

Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes, mal accursed minister of hell!

ster Cardinal BEAUFORT, attended.

Lord regent, I do greet your excellence

sters of commission from the king.

rw, my lords, the states of Christendom,

with remorse of these outrageous broils,

urately implor'd a general peace

our nation, and the aspiring French;

re at hand, the Dauphin, and his train,

meth, to confer about some matter.

Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?

After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrow'n,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquer'd?—
O, Warwick, Warwick, I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace,
It shall be with such strict and severe covenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENCON, Bastard, REIGNIER, and Others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes
The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our hateful enemies.

Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That—in regard king Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion, and of lenity,

To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,—
You shall become true liegemen to his crown:

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet;
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man?

This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known, already that I am possess'd

With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king:

Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?

No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep
That, which I have, than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means Used intercession to obtain a league;
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king,
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract:

If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy,
To save your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility:

And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it, when your pleasure serves.

[Aside, to Charles.]

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char. It shall:

Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey,
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of France.—

[Charles, and the rest, give tokens of fealty.]

So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

London. A room in the palace.

Enter King HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK;
GLOSTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your word'rous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me :
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart :
And like as rigour in tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide ;
So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush ! my good lord ! this superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worldly praise :
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them,)
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.

And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But, with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command ;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.
Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem ;
How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach ?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths ;
Or one, that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds :
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that ?

Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
The king of Naples, and Jerusalem ;
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the earl of Armagnac may do,
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exc. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower ;

While Reignier sooner will receive, than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords ! disgrace not so your king,
That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.
Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen, to make him rich :
So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,

Than to be dealt in by attorneyship ;
Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed :
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
It most of all these reasons bindeth us,
In our opinions she should be preferred.
For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife ?
Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a king ?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a king :
Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(More than in women commonly is seen,)
Will answer our hope in issue of a king ;
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve,
As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.
Then yield, my lords ; and here conclude with me,
That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
My noble lord of Suffolk ; or for that
My tender youth was never yet attain'd
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell ; but this I am assur'd,
I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take, therefore, shipping ; post, my lord, to France,
Agree to any covenants : and procure
That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd
King Henry's faithful and anointed queen :
For your expenses and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say ; for, till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.—
And you, good uncle, banish all offence :
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.
And so conduct me, where from company,
I may revolve and ruminate my grief.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.
[Exit Gloster and Essex.]

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd : and thus he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece ;
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king ;
But I will rule both her, the king, and realm.
[Exit]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. A room of state in the palace.

French of trumpets: then hautboys. Enter, on one side, King HENRY, Duke of GLOSTER, SA-LISBURY, WARWICK, and Cardinal BEAU-FORT; on the other, Queen MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET,
 BUCKINGHAM, and Others, following.

King. As by your high imperial majesty
 I had in charge at my depart for France,
 As procurator to your excellence,
 To marry princess Margaret for your grace;
 So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,—
 In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
 The dukes of Orleans, Calabre, Bretaigne, and Alençon,

Seven earls, twelve barons, twenty reverend bishops,—
 I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
 And humbly now upon my bended knee,
 In sight of England and her lordly peers,
 Deliver up my title in the queen
 To your most gracious hands, that are the substance
 Of that great shadow I did represent;
 The happiest gift, that ever marquess gave,
 The surest queen, that ever king receiv'd.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen Margaret:

I can express no kinder sign of love,
 Than this kind kiss.—O Lord, that lends me life,
 Lend me a heart, replete with thankfulness!
 For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
 A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
 If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious
 lord;

The mutual conference, that my mind hath had—
 By day, by night; waking, and in my dreams;
 In security company, or at my beads,—
 Wish you mine alder-liestef sovereign,
 Make me the bolder to salute my king
 With ruder terms; such as my wit affords,

And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish: but her grace in speech,

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
 Makes me, from wondering, fall to weeping joys;
 Such is the fulness of my heart's content.—
 Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.]

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
 Here are the articles of contracted peace,
 Between our sovereign and the French king Charles,
 For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. [Reads.] Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William de la Poole, marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry king of England,—that the said Henry shall espouse the lady
 Margaret, daughter unto Reignier king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her queen of England, ere the thirteenth of May next ensuing.— Item,—That the dutchy of Anjou and the county of Maine, shall be released and delivered to the king her father—

K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
 Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
 And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Win. Item,—It is further agreed between them,— that the dutchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the king of England's own proper cost and charges, without having dowry.

K. Hen. They please us well.—Lord marquess,
 kneel down;

We here create thee the first duke of Suffolk,
 And girt thee with the sword.—

Cousin of York, we here discharge your grace
 From being regent in the parts of France,
 Till term of eighteen months be full expir'd.—
 Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloster, York, and Buckingham,

L. Stothard RA.

HENRY VI PART 2.

Act. 3. Sc. 2.

Published by W. Pickering, 57 Chancery Lane, 1824.

Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.
Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath my uncle Beaufort, and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house,
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours and these honours die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel die?
O peers of England, shameful is this league!
Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame:
Blotting your names from books of memory:
Razing the characters of your renown;
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France;
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?

This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should:
Suffolk, the new-made duke, that rules the roast,
Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine
Unto the poor king Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now by the death of him, that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy:—
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief, that they are past recovery:
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities, that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?
Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke—may he be suffocate,
That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:
And our king Henry gives away his own,
To match with her, that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have staid in France, and starv'd in France,

Before—

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot;
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind:
'Tis not my speeches, that you do mislike;
But 'tis my presence, that doth trouble you.
Rancour will out: Proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury: if I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.—
Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied—France will be lost ere long. [Exit.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you, he is mine enemy:
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all:
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown;

Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords; let not his smooching word
Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him—Humphrey, the good duke of Glouster,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice
Jesu maintain your royal excellence!

With—God preserve the good duke Humphrey!
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?—
Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,
And all together—with the duke of Suffolk,—
We'll quickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay:
I'll to the duke of Suffolk presently.

Son. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride,

And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal;
His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside;
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector.
Despight duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset.
Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows!
While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey duke of Gloster
Did bear him like a noble gentleman.—
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal—

More like a soldier, than a man o' the church
As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all
Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself
Unlike the ruler of a common-weal.—

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age!
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy household
Hath won the greatest favour of the commonwealth
Excepting none but good duke Humphrey.—
And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil discipline;

Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France
When thou wert regent for our sovereign,
Have made thee fear'd, and honour'd, of the people.
Join we together, for the public good;

In what we can to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk, and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition.
And, as we may, cherish duke Humphrey:
While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the
And common profit of his country!

York. And so says York, for he hath greater Sal. Then let's make haste away, and let the main.

War. Unto the main! O father! Maine is
That Maine, which by main force Warwick
And would have kept, so long as breath
Main chance, father, you meant; but I mean
Which I will win from France, or else be [Exeunt Warwick and Somerset.

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the Paris is lost; the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone.
Suffolk concluded on the articles;

The peers agreed; and Henry was well pleased
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair dower.
I cannot blame them all; what is't to them
'Tis time they give away, and not their oaths.
Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their
And purchase friends, and give to courtiers
Still revelling, like lords, till all be gone:
While as the silly owner of the goods

Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless
And shakes his head, and trembling stands
While all is shar'd, and all is borne away
Ready to starve, and dare not touch his oath.
So York must sit, and fret, and bite his nails
While his own lands are bargain'd for, an Methinks, the realms of England, France,

Ireland,
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood

d the fatal brand Althea burn'd,
the prince's heart of Calydon.
and Maine, both given unto the French!
news for me; for I had hope of France,
as I have of fertile England's soil.

will come, when York shall claim his own;
therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,
make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey,
when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
hat's the golden mark I seek to hit:
shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
hold his sceptre in his childish fist,
wear the diadem upon his head,
se church-like humours fit not for a crown.

York, be still awhile, till time do serve;
thou, and wake, when others be asleep,
y into the secrets of the state;
leury, surfeiting in joys of love,
his new bride, and England's dear bought
queen,

Humphrey, with the peers be fall'n at jars:
will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd;
in my standard bear the arms of York,
apple with the house of Lancaster;
force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
se bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

SCENE II.

same. A room in the Duke of Gloucester's house.

Enter GLOSTER and the Duchess.

Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn,
ing the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows, owning at the favours of the world?
are thine eyes fix'd on the sullen earth,
g on that, which seems to dim thy sight?
see'st thou there? King Henry's diadem, us'd with all the honours of the world?
gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
thy head be circled with the same.

With thy hand, reach at the glorious gold—is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine:
having both together heav'd it up,
both together lift our heads to heaven;
ever more abase our sight so low,
vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,
the canker of ambitious thoughts:
say that thought, when I imagine ill
st my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
y last breathing in this mortal world!
obolous dream this night doth make me sad.
What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it

sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.
Methought, this staff, mine office-hedge in court,
roke in twain; by whom, I have forgot,
s I think, it was by the cardinal;

u pieces of the broken wand
plac'd the heads of Edmond duke of Somerset, William de la Poole first duke of Suffolk.

ras my dream; what it doth bode, God knows.
Tut, this was nothing but an argument,
he, that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove,
lose his head for his presumption.

st to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
ight, I sat in seat of majesty, cathedral church of Westminster, n that chair, where kings and queens are crown'd:

s Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel'd to me,
u my head did set the diadem.

Nay, Eleanor, then I must chide outright:
mptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!
ou not second woman in the realm;
se protector's wife, belov'd of him?

hou not worldly pleasure at command,
the reach or compass of thy thought?
ilt thou still be hammering treachery,
able down thy husband, and thyself,
top of honour to disgrace's feet?

from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord, are you so choleric
With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?
Next time, I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure,
You do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans,
Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go.—Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, good my lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exit Gloucester and Messenger.

Follow I must, I cannot go before,
While Gloucester bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks,
And smooth my way upon their headless necks:
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in fortune's pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not, man,
We are alone; here's none but thee, and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesu preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou, majesty! I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,
Your grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet couferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch;
And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?
And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised,—to show your highness

A spirit, raised from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions,
As by your grace shall he propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:

When from Saint Albans we do make return,
We'll see these things effected to the full.
Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit Duchess.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess'
gold;

Marry, and shall. But how now, sir John Hume?
Seal up your lips, and give no words but—mum!
The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold, to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
Yet have I gold, flies from another coast:
I dare not say, from the rich cardinal,

And from the great and new-made duke of Suffolk:
Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,
Have hired me to undermine the duchess,

And buz these conjurations in her brain.
They say, A crafty knave does need no broker;
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
Well, so it stands: And thus, I fear, at last,
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck;

And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall:
Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

SCENE III.

The same. A room in the palace.

Enter PETER and Others, with petitions.

I Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and Queen MARGARET.

I Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him: I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool; this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow? would'st any thing with me?

I Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me! I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Reading the superscription.] To my lord protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too? that is some wrong, indeed.—What's yours?—What's here! [Reads.] Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Aitford.—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said, That he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently:—we'll hear more of your matter before the king.

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the petitions. Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All Coms. let's be gone. [Exit Petitioners. Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise, Is this the fashion in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle, And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What, shall king Henry be a pupil still, Under the surly Gloster's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style, And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And stol'st away the ladies hearts of France; I thought king Henry had resembled thee,

In courage, courtship, and proportion: But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads: His champions are—the prophets and apostles;

His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ; His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints. I would the college of cardinals

Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome, And set the triple crown upon his head;

That were a state fit for his holiness. Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause

Your highness came to England, so will I In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, have we Beaufort,

The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham, And grumbling York: and not the least of these,

But can do more in England than the king. Suf. And he of these, that can do most of all,

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils: Salisbury, and Warwick, are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much,

As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife. She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,

More like an empress than duke Humphrey's wife; Strangers in court do take her for the queen;

She bears a duke's revenues on her back, And in her heart she scorns our poverty:

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her? Contemptuous base-born callat as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day, The very train of her worst wearing-gown

Was better worth than all my father's lands, Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her: And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,

That she will light to listen to their lays, And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest: And, madam, list to me; For I am bold to counsel you in this.

Although we fancy not the cardinal, Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,

Till we have brought duke Humphrey in dis As for the duke of York,—this late complain Will make but little for his benefit:

So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last, And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King HENRY, YORK, and SOMEWHAT, conversing with him; Duke and Duchess of GLOSTER, Cardinal BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not for Somerset, or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in I Then let him be deny'd the regentship.

To show some reason of no little force, That York is most unmeet of any man.

I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet,
 I cannot flatter thee in pride:

 So, I dane'd attendance on his will,

 Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Because here is a man accus'd of treason:
 O, the duke of York excuse himself!
 Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?
 O. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me:
 What are these?
 Please it your majesty, this is the man that accuse his master of high treason:
 As were these;—that Richard, duke of York,
 put his heir unto the English crown;
 For your majesty was an usurper.
 O. Say, man, were these thy words?
 An't shall please your majesty, I never said aught any such matter: God is my witness, sely accused by the villain.

 his hand*] he did speak them to me in the garret
 as we were scouring my lord of York's

O. Unale, what shall we say to this in law?
 'Tis doom, my lord, if I may judge.

 in York this breeds suspicion:
 these have a day appointed them to combat in convenient place;
 with witness of his servant's malice:
 he be law, and this duke Humphrey's doom.
 O. Then be it so. My lord of Somerset, give your grace lord regent o'er the French.
 I humbly thank your royal majesty.
 And I accept the combat willingly.
 O. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's my case! the spite of man prevaileth on me. O, Lord have mercy upon me! I shall not be able to fight a blow: O Lord, my heart is numb, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.
 O. Away with them to prison: and the day that shall be the last of the next month.—
 Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Enter the Duke of Gloucester's garden.

MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME,
 THWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell us, expects performance of your promises.
 Master Hume, we are therefore provided:
 ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?
 Ay; What else? fear you not her courage?
 I have heard her reported to be a woman of a noble spirit: But it shall be convenient,
 I think, that you be by her aloft, while we are below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, I leave us. [Exit Hume.] Mother Jourdain,
 I beseech you, ostrate, and grovel on the earth:—John Thwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess, above.

Well said, my masters; and welcome all.
 The sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their
 times:

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
 The time of night when Troy was set on fire;
 The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,
 And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,
 That time best fits the work we have in hand.

Madam, sit you, fear not; whom we raise,
 We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining, and make the circle; Bolingbroke, or South-well, reads, Conjure te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.]

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath,

By the eternal God, whose name and power
 Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
 For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt:—That I had said and done!

Boling. First, of the king. What shall of him become? [Reading out of a paper.]

Spir. The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
 But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.]

Boling. What fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the duke of Somerset?

Spir. Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
 Than where castles mounted stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness, and the burning laker False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM, hastily, with their Guards, and Others.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash.
 Beldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch.—
 What, madam, are you there? the king and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains;
 My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
 See you well guarden'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so had as thine to England's king,
 Injurious duke; that threat'st where is no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this? [Shewing her the papers.]

Away with them; let them be clapp'd up close,
 And kept asunder:—You, madam, shall with us:—
 Stafford, take her to thee.—

[Exit Duchess from above.]

We'll see your trinkets here all forth-coming;
 All.—Away! [Exeunt Guards, with South. Boling. &c.]

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch'd her well:

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!
 Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.
 What have we here? [Reads.]

*The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
 But him outlive, and die a violent death.*

Why, this is just,
Aio te, Ecceida, Romanos vincere posse.

Well, to the rest:

Tell me, what fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?

By water shall he die, and take his end.—

What shall befall the duke of Somerset?—

Let him shun castles;

*Safer shall he be on the sandy plains,
 Than where castles mounted stand.*

Come, come, my lords;

These oracles are hardly attain'd,
 And hardly understood.

The king is now in progress towards Saint Albans,
 With him the husband of this lovely lady:
 Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them;
 A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.

Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my lord
 of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good lord.—Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servant.

Invite my lords of Salisbury, and Warwick,
 To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away! [Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Saint Albans.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, GLOSTER, Cardinal, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers hollaing.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,
I saw not better sport these seven years' day:
Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made,

And what a pitch she flew above the rest!—
To see how God in all his creatures works!
Yea, man and birds, are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty,
My lord protector's hawks do tower so well;
They know their master loves to be aloft,
And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.
Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind,
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much; he'd be above the clouds.
Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal; How think you by that?
Were it not good, your grace could fly to heaven?

K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!
Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart;
Pernicious protector, dangerous peer,
That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal!

Glo. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantane animis caelestibus ira?
Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice;
With such holiness can you do it?

Suf. No malice, sir: no more than well becomes
So good a quarrel, and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord?
Suf. Why, as you, my lord;
An't like your lordly lord-protectorship.

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.
Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

K. Hen. I pry'thee, peace,
Good queen; and what not on these furious peers,
For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make,
Against this proud protector, with my sword!

Glo. 'Faith, holy uncle, 'would 'twere come to
that!

Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside to Glo.]

Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter,
In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside.]

Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the grove. [Aside.]

K. Hen. How now, my lords?
Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,
We had had more sport.—Come with thy two-hand sword. [Aside to Glo.]

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Are you advis'd?—the east side of the grove?
Glo. Cardinal, I am with you. [Aside.]

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester?
Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.—
Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown for this,

Or all my fence shall fail. [Aside.]

Car. Medice teipsum; } [Aside.]
Protector, see to't well, protect yourself.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this musick to my heart!
When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter an Inhabitant of Saint Albans, crying, A Miracle!

Glo. What means this noise?
Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

Inhab. A miracle! a miracle!
Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle.

Inhab. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint shrine,

Within this half hour, hath receiv'd his sight,
A man, that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd! that to souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans, and his and SIMPCOX, borne between two per-chair; his Wife and a great Multitude following.

Car. Here come the townsmen on process,
To present your highness with the man.

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this cart,
Although by his sight his sin be multiple.

Glo. Stand by, my masters, bring him kings,

His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.
K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstances that we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What hast thou been long blind, and now thou art seen?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.

Glo. Had'st thou been his mother; thou hast better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?
Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't
please your grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness great to thee:

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass
But still remember what the Lord hath done for thee.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?
Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; believe me, a hundred times, and oftener, in my sle by good Saint Alban; who said,—Simpcox Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thine.

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many times.

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame?
Simp. Ay, God Almighty

Suf. How cam'st thou so?
Simp. A fall off

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been lame?

Simp. O, born so, master.

Glo. What, and would'st clin
thyself?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was young.

Wife. Too true; and bought his cling.

Glo. 'Mass, thou lov'st plums well, the venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife deceiv'd me.

And made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not let me see thine eyes:—wink now
to me.

In my opinion yet thou see'st not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I and Saint Alban.

Glo. Say'st thou me so? what color cloak of?

Simp. Red, master; red, as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said: What color gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black, as black as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st well what thou say'st.

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

No, nor his!

No, indeed, master.

What's thine own name?

Saander Simpcox, an if it please you, master. I have seen Saander, sit thou there, the lyingest knave in the stendom. If thou had'st been born blind, thou might'st have known our names, as thus are the several colours we do wear. I say distinguish colours; but suddenly I cannot name them all, 's impossible.—

Yes, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; could ye not think that cunning to be great, could ye restore this cripple to his legs again?

O, master, that you could!

My masters of Saint Albans, have you not in your town, and things called whips? Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.

I then send for one presently.

Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool, away.

Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone: about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Beadle.

Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. I will, my lord. — Come on, sirrah; off with the stool, and whip him till he leap over that same.

I will, my lord. — Come on, sirrah; off with the stool, and whip him till he leap over that same.

Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand alone.

After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away; and the People follow, and cry, A Miracle!

O God, see'st thou this, and bear'st so long?

It made me laugh, to see the villain run. I will allow the knave; and take this drab away.

Alas, sir, we did it for pure need. Let them be whipped through every market.

When they come to Berwick, whence they [Exit Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.]

Uke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day. I made the lame to leap, and fly away.

It you have done more miracles than I; e, in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

What tidings with our cousin Buckingham? Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

Naughty persons, lewdly bent,—

A countenance and confederacy

Eleanor the protector's wife,

Leader and head of all this rout,—

Actis'd dangerously against your state,

With witches, and with conjurers;

They have apprehended in the fact;

Upwicked spirits from under ground,

Of king Henry's life and death,

Of your highness' privy council,

At large your grace shall understand.

So do so, my lord protector, by this means

It is forthcoming yet at London.

I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;

My lord, you will not keep your hour.

[Aside to Gloucester.]

Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my

And grief have vanquish'd all my powers:

Quish'd as I am, I yield to thee,

Lowest meaneest groom.

O God, what mischiefs work the wicked

Confusion on their own heads thereby!

Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest;

Thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Adam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,

For my lord's my king, and commonweal:

My wife, I know not how it stands;

And to hear what I have heard:

Is; but if she have forgot

And virtue, and convers'd with such

As, like to pitch, defile nobility,

I banish her my bed, and company;

And give her, as a prey, to law, and shame,

That have dishonour'd Gloucester's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us

here:

To-morrow, toward London, back again,

To look into this business thoroughly,

And call these foul offenders to their answers;

And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,

Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exit.]

SCENE II.

London. The duke of York's garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave,

In this close walk, to satisfy myself,

In craving your opinion of my title,

Which is infallible, to England's crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

York. Then thus:—

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons:

The first, Edward the Black Prince, prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,

Lionel, duke of Clarence; next to whom,

Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster:

The fifth was Edmund Langley, duke of York;

The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloucester;

William of Windsor was the seventh, and last.

Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father;

And left behind him Richard, his only son,

Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as

king;

Till Henry Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster,

The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,

Seiz'd on the realm; and depos'd the rightful king;

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came,

And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,

Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the truth;

Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,

The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, duke of Clarence, (from whose line

I claim the crown,) had issue—Phillippe, a daughter,

Who married Edmund Mortimer, earl of March;

Edmund had issue—Roger, earl of March:

Roger had issue—Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;

And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king,

Who kept him in captivity, till he died.

But, to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,

My mother, being heir unto the crown,

Married Richard, earl of Cambridge; who was son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the third's fifth son.

By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir

To Roger, earl of March; who was son

Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Phillippe,

Sole daughter unto Lionel, duke of Clarence:

So, if the issue of the elder son

Succeed before the younger, I am king.

War. What plain proceedings are more plain than this?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,

The fourth son; York claims it from the third.

Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign:

It fails not yet; but flourishes in thee,

And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.—

Then, father Salisbury, kneel we both together;

And in this private plot, be we the first,

That shall salute our rightful sovereign

With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king Till I be crown'd; and that my sword be stain'd With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster: And that's not suddenly to be perform'd; But with advice, and silent secrecy. Do you, as I do, in these dangerous days, Wink at the duke of Suffolk's insolence, At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition, At Buckingham, and all the crew of them, Till they have suar'd the shepherd of the flock, That virtuous prince, the good duke Humphrey: 'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that, Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me, that the earl of Warwick

Shall one day make the duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself,— Richard shall live to make the earl of Warwick The greatest man in England, but the king.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A hall of justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, GLOSTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY; the Duchess of GLOSTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife:

In sight of God, and us, your guilt is great; Receive the sentence of the law, for sins Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death.— You four, from hence to prison back again;

[To Jourd. &c.]

From thence, unto the place of execution: The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes, And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.— You, madam, for you are more nobly born,

[To the Duchess.]

Despoiled of your honour in your life, Shall, after three days' open penance done, Live in your country here, in banishment, With sir John Stanley, in the isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment, welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judg'd thee; I cannot justify whom the law condemns.—

[Exeunt the Duchess, and the other prisoners, guarded.]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief. Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!— I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go; Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey duke of Gloucester: ere thou go,

Give up thy staff; Henry will to himself Protector be: and God shall be my hope, My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet; And go in peace, Humphrey; no less belov'd, Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason, why a king of years Should be to be protected like a child.—

God and king Henry govern England's helm: Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff?—here, noble Henry, is my staff: As willingly do I the same resign,

As e'er thy father Henry made it mine; And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it, As others would ambitiously receive it.

Farewell, good king! When I am dead and gone, May honourable peace attend thy throne! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;

And Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, scarce himself, That bears so shrewd a maim; two pulls at once,— His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off; This staff of honour rought:—There let it stand, Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and sprays;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest York. Lords, let him go.—Please it your

This is the day appointed for the combat

And ready are the appellants and defendants

The armourer and his man, to enter the list

So please your highness to behold the fight

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the list of things fit;

Here let them end it, and God defend the right

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested

Or more afraid to fight, than is the appeller

The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his Neighbour drinking to him so much that he is drunk

he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag to it; a drum before him: at the other side, with a drum and a similar staff; according to Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink in a cup of sack; And fear not, neighbour, shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's cbarneco.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good drink neighbour: drink, and fear not your

Hor. Let it come, I'faith, and I'll all; And a fig for Peter!

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and

2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not ter; fight for credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and

I pray you; for, I think, I have draught in this world.—Here, Robin, a

I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all that I have.—O Lord, bless me, I am never able to deal with my learn't so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking; it blows.—Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, upon my man's instigation, to prove his and myself an honest man: and touch of York,—will take my death, I never any ill, nor the king, nor the queen:

fore, Peter, have at thee with a down

as Bevis of Southampton—fell upon

York. Despatch:—this knave's tongue double.

Sound trumpets, alarum to the combat

[Alarum. They fight, and down his master.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess treason.

York. Take away his weapon:—For

God, and the good wine in thy master

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine

this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor

For, by his death, we do perceive his

And God, in justice, hath reveal'd to

The truth and innocence of this poor

Which he had thought to have murder'd fully.—

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward

SCENE IV.

The same. A street.

Enter GLOSTER and Servants, in mourning

Glo. Thus, sometimes, hath the bright cloud;

And, after summer, evermore succeeds

Barren winter, with his wrathful nipp:

So cares and joys abound, as seasons

Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Ten is the hour, that was appointed me,
 To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
 She may she endure the flinty streets,
 And tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
 O Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
 To see such object people, gazing on thy face,
 And envious looks still laughing at thy shame;
 How erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels,
 And thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
 How soft I think, she comes; and I'll prepare
 To stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

*the Duchess of GLOSTER, in a white sheet, papers pin'd upon her back, her feet bare,
 a taper burning in her hand; Sir JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers.*

So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.
 Come you, my lord, to see my open
 shame?

How dost penance too. Look, how thy gase!

How the giddy multitude do point,
 And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee!
 How Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks;
 In thy closet pent up, rue my shame,
 And thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Ah, Gloster, teach me to forget myself:

Whilst I think I am thy married wife,

How thou a prince, protector of this land,

How I should not thus be led along,

How I up in shame, with papers on my back;

How I should with a rabble, that rejoice

At my tears, and hear my deep-fet groans.

How I should flint doth cut my tender feet;

When I start, the envious people laugh,

How I should be advised how I tread.

How Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?

How I should see thee, that e'er I'll look upon the world;

How I should see thee, that enjoy the sun?

How I should see thee, that ark shall be my light, and night my day;

How I should see thee, that upon my pomp, shall be my hell.

How I should see thee, that I'll say, I am duke Humphrey's wife;

How I should see thee, a prince, and ruler of the land:

How I should see thee, 'ere I should see thee, that Should be rul'd, and such a prince he was,

How I should see thee, stood by, whilst I, his forlorn duchess,

How I should see thee, made a wonder, and a pointing-stock

At my idle rascal follower.

How I should see thee, thou mild, and blush not at my shame;

How I should see thee, that is at nothing, till the axe of death

Over thee, as, sure, it shortly will

Descend, and he, that can do all in all

How I should see thee, her, that hateth thee, and hates us all,—

How I should see thee, that work,—and impious Beaufort, that false priest,

How I should see thee, that all him'd bushes to betray thy wings,

How I should see thee, that thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee:

How I should see thee, that not thou, until thy foot be snar'd,

How I should see thee, that ver seek prevention of thy foes.

How I should see thee, Ah, Nell, forbear; thou almost all awry;

How I should see thee, offend, before I be attainted:

And had I twenty times so many foes,
 And each of them had twenty times their power,
 All these could not procure me any scathe,
 So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
 Would'st have me rescue thee from this reproach?
 Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
 But I in danger for the breach of law.
 Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
 I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
 These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before!
 This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there.

[Exit Herald.]

My Nell, I take my leave:—and, master sheriff,
 Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Sher. An't please your grace, here my commission stays:

And sir John Stanley is appointed now
 To take her with him to the isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?
Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray
 You use her well: the world may laugh again;
 And I may live to do you kindness, if

You do it her. And so, sir John, farewell.

Duch. What, gone, my lord; and, bid me not farewell?

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.
[Exit Gloster and Servants.]

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee!

For none abides with me: my joy is—death;
 Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,
 Because I wish'd this world's eternity.—

Stanley, I pry'thee, go, and take me hence;
 I care not whither, for I beg no favour,

Only convey me, where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the isle of Man;
 There to be used according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
 And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's
 lady,

According to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare;
 Although thou hast been conduct of my shame!

Sher. It is my office: and, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharg'd.—
 Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,

And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:
 No, it will hang upon my richest robes,

And show itself, attire me how I can.
 Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison.

[Exit.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The Abbey at Bury.

*to the Parliament, King HENRY, Queen
 MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and Others.*

Hen. I muse, my lord of Gloster is not come:
 'Tis his wont to be the hindmost man,
 'Er occasion keeps him from us now.

Card. Can you not see? or will you not observe the consequence of his alter'd countenance?

What a majesty he bears himself;
 How insolent of late he is become,

How proud, peremptory, and unlike himself!
 How slow the time, since he was mild and affable;

How we did but glance a far-off look,
 How lately he was upon his knees,

How the court admir'd him for submission:
 How we set him now, and, be it in the morn,

When every one will give the time of day,
 He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,

And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
 Disdaining duty, that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded when they grin;
 But great men tremble when the lion roars;

And Humphrey is no little man in England.
 First, note, that he is near you in descent;

And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
 Me seemeth then, it is no policy,—

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
 And his advantage following your disease,—

That he should come about your royal person,
 Or be admitted to your highness' council;

By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts;
 And, when he please to make commotion,

'Tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.
 Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
 M m

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
The reverent care, I bear unto my lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say—I wrong'd the duke.
My lord of Suffolk,—Buckingham,—and York,— Reprove my allegation, if you can;
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;
And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think, I should have told your grace's tale.
The duchess, by his subor nation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
Or if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by reputed of his high descent,
(As next the king, he was successive heir,)
And such high vaunts of his nobility,
Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
Smooth runs the water, where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not, when he would steal the lamb.
No, no, my sovereign; Gloster is a man
Unsound'd yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm,
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof, the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth duke
Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once: The care you have of us,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise: But shall I speak my conscience?
Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person,
As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild; and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!
Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's dispos'd as the hateful raven.
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclin'd as are the ravenous wolves.
Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. What news
from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.

K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset: But God's will be done!

York. Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away:
But I will remedy this gear ere long,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave. [Aside.]

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!

Pardon, my liege, that I have staid so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloster, know, that thou art come too soon.

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me
blush,

Nor change my countenance for this arrest;
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.

The purest spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes
of France,

And, being protector, staid the soldiers' pay;
By means whereof, his highness hath lost France.

Glo. It is but thought so? What are the think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch'd the night
Ay, night by night,—in studying good for England.
That do it, that e'er I wrested from the king,
Or any great I hoarded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial day!
No! many a pound of mine own proper store
Because I would not tax the needy common
Have I disbursed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so.

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God!
York. In your protectorship, you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of
That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glo. Why, 'tis well known, that whiles protector,

Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fat
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief, that fleec'd poor passes
I never gave them condign punishment:
Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the felon, or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly and
But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.

I do arrest you in his highness' name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster, 'tis my special
That you will clear yourself from all sus-
My conscience tells me, you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dar-Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand
Foul subor nation is predominant,
And equity exil'd your highness' land.

I know, their complot is to have my life;
And, if my death might make this island
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness:

But mine is made the prologue to their plea
For thousands more, that yet suspect no plot
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.

Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's
And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hat
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The envious load, that lies upon his heart
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd by

By false accuse doth level at my life:—
And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head
And, with your best endeavour, have stirr'd
My liefest liege to be mine enemy:—
Ay, all of you have laid your heads togeth'
Myself had notice of your conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life;
I shall not want false witness to condemn
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt
The ancient proverb will be well affected,
A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable
If those, that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife, and traitors'
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your

Suf. Hath he not twist our sovereign law
With ignominious words, though clerks
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations, to o'erthrow his state?

Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave
Glo. Far truer spoke, than meant: I lose, I
Beshrew the winners, for they played me
And well such losers may have leave to say

Buck. He'll wrest the sense, and hold all day:—
Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard his legs be firm to bear his body :

is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee first.
hat my fear were false ! ah, that it were !
good king Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants, with Gloucester.]

Gen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,
I undo, as if ourself were here.

Mar. What, will your highness leave the parliament ?

Gen. Ay, Margaret ; my heart is drown'd with grief, the flood begins to flow within mine eyes ;

my round engirt with misery ;

what's more miserable than discontent ?—

Uncle Humphrey ! in thy face I see an oap of honour, truth, and loyalty ;

yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come,

ere I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.

How 'ring star now envies thy estate,

these great lords, and Margaret our queen,

an ek subversion of thy harmless life ?

never did'st them wrong, nor no man wrong :

as the butcher takes away the calf,

so finds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

so leads it to the bloody slaughter-house :

so, remorseless, have they borne him hence.

So the dam runs lowering up and down,

so the way her harmless young one went,

an do nought but wail her darling's loss ;

so myself bewails good Gloucester's case and sad unhelpful tears ; and with dimm'd eyes after him, and cannot do him good ;

mighty are his vowed enemies.

As stones I will weep ; and, 'twixt each groan,

Who's a traitor, Gloucester he is none. [Exit.]

Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

My lord is cold in great affairs,

full of foolish pity, and Gloucester's show does him, as the mournful crocodile sorrow snares relenting passengers ;

the snake, roll'd in a flowering bank,

shining chequer'd slough, doth sting a child,

for the beauty, thinks it excellent.

So me, lords, were none more wise than I,

yet, herein, I judge mine own wit good ;

Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,

as from the fear we have of him :

That he should die, is worthy policy ;

yet we want a colour for his death :

to see he be condemn'd by course of law.

But, in my mind, that were no policy ;

we will labour still to save his life,

whom none happily rise to save his life ;

as we have but trivial argument,

and haan mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

So that by this, you would not have him die.

Ah, York, no man alive so fair as I.

'Tis York, that hath more reason for his death.

My lord cardinal, and you, my lord of Suffolk,— you think, and speak it from your souls,— not all one, an empty eagle were set up to the chicken from a hungry kite,

and ce duke Humphrey for the king's protector ?

Mar. So the poor chicken should be sur'd of death.

Madam, 'tis true : And wer't not madness then,

to see the fox surveyor of the fold ?

being accus'd a crafty murderer,

it should be but idly posted over,

to see his purpose is not executed.

Let him die, in that he is a fox,

and were prov'd an enemy to the flock,

his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood ;

and Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege :

to not stand on quilllets, how to slay him :

by gins, by snares, by subtilty,

by waging, 'tis no matter how,

he be dead : for that is good deceit

that mates him first, that first intends deceit.

Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Not resolute, except so much were done ;

and ings are often spoke, and seldom meant :

that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—

Seeing the deed is meritorious,

And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—

Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my lord of Suffolk,

ere you can take due orders for a priest :

Say, you consent, and censure well the deed,

And I'll provide his executioner,

I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

O. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I : and now we three have spoke it,

It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again,

To signify—that rebels there are up,

And put the Englishmen unto the sword :

Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,

Before the wound do grow incurable ;

For being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach, that craves a quick expedient stop,

What counsel give you in this weighty cause ?

York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither :

'Tis meet, that lucky ruler be employ'd ;

Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,

Had been the regent there instead of me,

He never would have staid in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done :

I rather would have lost my life betimes,

Than bring a burden of dishonour home,

By staying there so long, till all were lost.

Show me one scar character'd on thy skin :

Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldom win.

O. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging

fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with :—

No more, good York ;—sweet Somerset, be still ;—

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there,

Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than naught ? nay, then a shame take all !

Som. And, in the number, thee, that wishest

shame !

Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kernes of Ireland are in arms,

And temper clay with blood of Englishmen :

To Ireland will you lead a band of men,

Collected choicely, from each county some,

And try your hap against the Irishmen !

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent ;

And, what we do establish, he confirms :

Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content : Provide me soldiers, lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him ; for I will deal with him,

That, henceforth, he shall trouble us no more,

And so break off ; the day is almost spent :

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,

At Bristol I expect my soldiers ;

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but York.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful

thoughts,

And change misdoubt to resolution :

Be that thou hop'st to be ; or what thou art

Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying :

Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,

And find no harbour in a royal heart.

Faster than spring-time showers, comes thought on thought ;

And not a thought, but thinks on dignity.

My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.

Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done,

To send me packing with an host of men :

I fear me, you but warm the starved snake,

Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me :

I take it kindly ; yet, be well assur'd
 You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
 Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
 I will stir up in England some black storm,
 Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven, or hell :
 And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
 Until the golden circuit on my head,
 Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
 Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.
 And, for a minister of my intent,
 I have seduc'd a head-strong Kentishman,
 John Cade of Ashford,
 To make commotion, as full well he can,
 Under the title of John Mortimer.
 In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
 Oppose himself against a troop of kernes ;
 And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
 Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porcupine :
 And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen him
 Caper upright like a wild Morisco,
 Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells.
 Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kerne,
 Hath he conversed with the enemy ;
 And undiscover'd come to me again,
 And given me notice of their villanies.
 This devil here shall be my substitute ;
 For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
 In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble :
 By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
 How they affect the house and claim of York.
 Say, he be taken, rack'd, and tortured ;
 I know, no pain, they can inflict upon him,
 Will make him say—I mov'd him to those arms.
 Say, that he thrive, (as 'tis great like he will),
 Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
 And reap the harvest, which that rascal sow'd :
 For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
 And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Bury. A room in the palace.

Enter certain Murderers hastily.

1 Mur. Run to my lord of Suffolk ; let him know,
 We have despatch'd the duke, as he commanded.
 2 Mur. O, that it were to do!—What have we done?
 Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter SUFFOLK.

1 Mur. Here comes my lord.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you Despatch'd this thing?

1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house ;

I will reward you for this ventrous deed.
 The king and all the peers are here at hand :—
 Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well,
 According as I gave directions?

1 Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.

Suf. Away, he gone! [Reuent Murderers.]

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight:
 Say, we intend to try his grace to-day,
 If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord.

K. Hen. Lords, take your places ;—And I pray
 you all,

Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster,
 Than from true evidence of good esteem,
 He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail,
 That faultless may condemn a nobleman!
 Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion!

K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret ; these words content me much.—

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now? why look'st thou pale? why tremblest
 thou?

What is our uncle? what is the matter, Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord ; Gloster is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forefend!

Car. God's secret judgment:—I did dream
 night,

The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word. [The King
 king is dead.

Q. Mar. How fares my lord?—Help, lord

Son. Rear up his body ; wring him by the neck.

Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help!—O, hear thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again ;—Madam, be patient.

K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious comfort!

K. Hen. What, doth my lord of Suffolk
 come?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note,
 Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers ;
 And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,
 By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
 Can chase away the first-conceived sound?

Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd wor-
 Lay not thy hands on me ; forbear, I say ;
 Their touch affrights me, as a serpent's stung
 Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!

Upon thy eye-balls murder's tyranny
 Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.

Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wound
 Yet do not go away ;—Come, basilisk,
 And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight :

For in the shade of death I shall find joy ;
 In life, but double death, now Gloster's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Suffo-
 Although the duke was enemy to him,

Yet he, most christian-like, laments his de-

 And when the dusky sky began to rob
 My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view
 I took a costly jewel from my neck,—

They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died ;
They say, in him they fear your highness' death :
And mere instinct of love, and loyalty,—
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,—
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That, if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge—that no man should disturb your rest,
In pain of your dislike, or pain of death ;
Yet notwithstanding such a strict edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary, you were wak'd ;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal :
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, wh'er you will, or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is ;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
my lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'Tis like, the commons, rude unpolish'd hands,
Could send such message to their sovereign :
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are :
But all the honour Salisbury hath won,
Is—that he was the lord ambassador,
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
or we'll all break in.

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care :
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat ;
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means.
And therefore,—by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,—
He shall not breathe infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk !

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk.
No more, I say ; if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word ;
But, when I swear, it is irrevocable :—
If, after three days' space, thou here be'st found
On any ground, that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.—
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me ;
I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt K. Henry, Warwick, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance, and sorrow, go along with you !
Heart's discontent, and sour affliction,
Be playfellows to keep you company !
There's two of you ; the devil make a third !
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps !

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch !

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies ?

Suf. A plague upon them ! wherefore should I curse them ?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-fac'd Envy, in her loathsome cave :
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words.
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint ;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract ;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban :
And even now my burden'd heart would break,
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink !
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste !
Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees !
Their chiefest prospect, murdering basilisks !
Their softest touch, as smart as lizard's stings !
Their musick, frightful as the serpent's hiss ;
And hoding screech-owls make the concert full !

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk ; thou tortur'
thyself ;

And these dread curses—like the sun 'gains
Or like an overcharged gun,—recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me

Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

That I may dew it with my mournful tears
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.

SCENE III.

Edon. Cardinal Beaufort's bed-chamber.

King HENRY; SALISBURY, WAR-K, and Others. The Cardinal in bed; At-nts with him.

*Ed. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort,
 o thy sovereign.*

If thou be'st Death, I'll give thee England's reasure,

*to purchase such another island,
 i wilt let me live, and feel no pain.*

Ed. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life, death's approach is seen so terrible!

Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

*Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.
 Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
 Can I make men live, wh'er they will or no?—
 O! torture me no more, I will confess.—
 Alive again? then show me where he is;
 I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.—
 He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.—
 Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands upright,
 Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul!—
 Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
 Bring the strong poison, that I bought of him.*

*K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,
 Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!
 O, beat away the busy meddling fiend,
 That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,
 And from his bosom purge this black despair!*

War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

*Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
 Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.—
 He dies, and makes no sign; O God, forgive him!*

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

*K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.—
 Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close;
 And let us all to meditation.* [Exeunt.]

 The duke of Suffolk, William de la Pale.*

Whit. The duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags!

*Suf. Ay, but these rags are na part of the duke;
 Jove sometime went disguis'd, And why not I?*

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

*Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's blood,
 The honourable blood of Lancaster,
 Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.*

*Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup?
 Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
 And thought thee happy, when I shook my head?
 How often hast thou waited at my cup,
 Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
 When I have feasted with queen Margaret?
 Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
 Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride:
 How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood,
 And duly waited for my coming forth?
 This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
 And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.*

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave! thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our longboat's side Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Poole.

Suf. Poole?

*Cap. Poole? Sir Poole? lord?
 Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt
 Troubles the silver spring, where England drinks.
 Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
 For swallowing the treasure of the realm:
 Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the
 ground;
 And thou, that smil'd'st at good duke Humphrey's
 death,
 Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
 Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again:
 And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
 For daring to affy a mighty lord
 Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
 Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
 By devilish policy art thou grown great,
 And, like ambitious Sylla, overgor'd,
 With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.*

By thee, Anjou and Maine were sold to France :
The false revolting Normans, thorough thee,
Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy
Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,— Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,—
As hating thee, are rising up in arms :
And now the house of York—thrust from the crown,
By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,—
Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours
Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ—Iuribus nubibus.
The commons here in Kent are up in arms :
And, to conclude, reproach, and beggary,
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee :—Away! convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder
Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges!
Small things make base men proud: this villain here,
Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more
Than Bargulus, the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones suck not eagle's blood, but rob bee-hives.
It is impossible, that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.
Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me :
I go of message from the queen to France ;
I charge thee, waft me safely cross the channel.

Cap. Walter.—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.
Suf. Galidus timor occupat artus :—'tis thee I fear.
Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear, before I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?
I Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,
Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it we should honour such as these
With humble suit: no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block, than these knees bow to any,
Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear :—
More can I bear, than you dare execute.—

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot!—
Great men oft die by vile hezionians :
A Roman sworder and banditto slave
Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand
Stab'd Julius Caesar; savage islanders,
Pompey the great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit Suf. with Whit. and Others.]

Cap. And as for these, whose ransom we have set,
It is our pleasure, one of them depart :—
Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the first Gentleman.]

Re-enter WHITMORE, with Suffolk's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.]

I Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king :
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends ;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.
[Exit, with the body.]

SCENE II.

Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath; they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now than.

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade, the clothier, means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well,
I say, it was never a merry world in England,
since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handy-craft's-men.

John. The nobility think scorn to go in aprons.

Geo. Nay more, the king's council are no workmen.

John. True; And yet it is said,—Labour vocation: which is as much to say, as,—let magistrates be labouring men; and therefore we be magistrates.

Geo. Thou hast hit it: for there's no bett of a brave mind, than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's son, the tanner of Wingham;—

Geo. He shall have the skins of our ene make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,—

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver:—

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come, let's fall in with the Enter MICHAEL.

Where's our general?
Here I am, thou particular fellow.
Oy, fly, fly! sir Humphrey Stafford and I are hard by, with the king's forces.

Assall them with the army of the king.

Staf. Herald, away: and, throughout every town,
Proclaim them traitors, that are up with Cade;

SCENE III.

Another part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two parties enter, and fight, and both the Staffords are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavest thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee,—The Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse' heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

London. A room in the palace.

Enter King HENRY, reading a supplication: the Duke of BUCKINGHAM, and Lord SAY with him: at a distance, Queen MARGARET, mourning over Suffolk's head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard—that grief softens the mind,

And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.

But who can cease to weep, and look on this?
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:

But where's the body, that I should embrace?
Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat:
For God forbid, so many simple souls

Should perish by the sword! And I myself,
Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,

Will parley with Jack Cade their general.—
But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face

Rul'd, like a wandering planet, over me;
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope, your highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How now, madam? Still Lamenting, and mourning for Suffolk's death?

I fear, my love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; Fly, my lord! Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer, Descended from the duke of Clarence's house; And calls your grace usurper, openly, And vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless: Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death Hath given them heart and courage to proceed: All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call—false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Kenelworth, Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah, were the duke of Suffolk now alive, These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee, Therefore away with us to Kenelworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger; The sight of me is odious in their eyes; And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge; the citizens

Fly and forsake their houses: The rascal people, thirsting after prey, Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear, To spoil the city, and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

K. Hen. Farewell, my lord; [To Lord Say.] trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. Trust I have in mine innocence, And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The same. The Tower.

Enter Lord SCALES, and Others, on the walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now? is Jack Cade slain?

1 Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those, that withstand them: The lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, you shall command; But I am troubled here with them myself, The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.

But get you to Smithfield, and gather head, And thither I will send you Matthew Gough: Fight for your king, your country, and your lives; And so farewell, for I must hence again. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

The same. Cannon Street.

Enter JACK CADE, and his followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any one that calls me other than—lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more; I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them: But, first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let

The same. Smithfield.

Alarum. Enter, on one side, CADE and party; on the other, Citizens, and the King, headed by MATTHEW GOUGH. The citizens are routed, and MATTHEW GOUGH is slain.

Cade. So, sirs:—Now, go some and put the Savoy; others to the inns of court; do them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it word.

Dick. Only, that the laws of England run out of your mouth.

John. Mass, 'twill be sore law then; for thrust in the mouth with a spear, and whole yet.

Smith. Nay, John, it will be stinking his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shal Away, burn all the records of the realm; mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to have biting unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's Say, which sold the towns in France made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and ling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the Lord

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded times.—Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou ram lord! now art thou within point-bl jurisdiction regal. What canst thou ask majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto Basimecu, the dauphin of France? Be unto thee by these presence, even the p lord Mortimer, that I am the besom, sweep the court clean of such filth as Thou hast most traitorously corrupted of the realm, in erecting a grammar-school; whereas, before, our forefathers had no other but the score and the tally, thou hast printing to be used; and, contrary to the crown, and dignity, thou hast built a parliament. It will be proved to thy face, that thou about thee, that usually talk of a not verb; and such abominable words, as near can endure to hear. Thou hast justices of peace, to call poor men be about matters they were not able to answer, thou hast put them in prison; as they could not read, thou hast hanged the indeed, only for that cause they have worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let wear a cloak, when honest men than their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, Cade. Away with him, away with him Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear you will.

Kent, in the commentaries Cæsar writ, Is term'd the civil'st place of all this island: Sweet is the country, because full of rich The people liberal, valliant, active, weak: Which makes me hope, you are not void: I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy

 With favour have I always done;
 And tears have moved me, gifts could never.
 Ere I aught exacted at your hands,
 To maintain the king, the realm, and you?
 As have I bestow'd on learned clerks,
 My book prefer'd me to the king:
 My ignorance is the curse of God,
 My wing wherewith we fly to heaven,—

 Not but forbear to murder me.
 As hath parley'd unto foreign kings

 When struck'st thou one blow in the field?
 Their hands have reaching hands: oft have

 My monstrous coward! what, to come be-

 These cheeks are pale for watching for your

 My sitting to determine poor men's causes
 Led me full of sickness and diseases.

 A hatchet.
 Why dost thou quiver, man?
 Be palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.
 Nay, he nods at us: as who should say,
 I'm with you. I'll see if his head will

 And hang him.
 Kill me, wherein I have offended most?
 I feared wealth, or honour; speak!
 My nests fill'd up with extorted gold?
 My rare sumptuous to behold?
 Have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?
 As I am free from guiltless blood-shedding,
 For harbouring foul, deceitful thoughts.
 Live!
 I feel remorse in myself with his words:
 Idle it; he shall die, and it be but for
 So well for his life. Away with him! he Shall lie under his tongue; he speaks not True. Go, take him away, I say, and His head presently; and then break into
 The lawyer's house, sir James Cromer, and His head, and bring them both upon two Trees.
 Shall be done.
 O countrymen! if when you make your Oaths,
 I'd be so obdurate as yourselves,
 I'd fare with your departed souls?
 I fore yet relent, and save my life.
 Away with him, and do as I command ye.

 My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside,
 To peddle commodities upon our bills?
 I'm sorry, presently.
 I'm brave!

Rebels, with the heads of Lord Say and his Son-in-law.

But is not this braver?—Let them kiss us, for they loved well, when they were in part them again, lest they consult giving up of some more towns in France.
 I refer the spoil of the city until night: for I'm borne before us, instead of maces, will rough the streets; and, at every corner,
 Kiss.—Away!
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.

Southwark.

Enter CADE, and all his Rabblement.
 Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames!—

 [A parley sounded, then a retreat.
 What noise is this I hear? dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?]

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and old CLIFFORD,
 with forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be, that dare and will disturb thee:
 Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king
 Unto the commons, whom thou hast misled;
 And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
 That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent,
 And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you;
 Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths?
 Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
 Fling up his cap, and say—God save his majesty!
 Who hateth him, and honours not his father,
 Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
 Shake be his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!
 Cade. What, Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye so brave?—And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom: but you are all recreants, and dastards; and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces:
 For me,—I will make shift for one; and so—God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade.

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
 That thus you do exclaim—you'll go with him?
 Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
 And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
 Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
 Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil,
 Unless by robbing of your friends, and us.
 Wer't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
 The fearful French, whom you late vanquish'd,
 Should make a start o'er seas, and vanquish you?
 Methinks, already, in this civil broil,
 I see them lording it in London streets,
 Crying—Villagers! unto all they meet.
 Better, ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
 Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.
 To France, to France, and get what you have lost;
 Spare England, for it is your native coast:
 Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;
 God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude? the name of Henry the fifth hales them to a hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together, to surprize me: my sword make way for me, for here is no staying.—In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels.
 [Exit.]

Buck. What, is he fled? go some, and follow
 him;

And he, that brings his head unto the king,
 Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.—

[Exeunt some of them.
 Follow me, soldiers; we'll devise a mean
 To reconcile you all unto the king.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.

Kenelworth Castle.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on the terrace of the castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king, that joy'd an earthly
 throne,
 And could command no more content than I?

No sooner was I crept out of my cradle,
But I was made a king, at nine months old:
Was never subject long'd to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty!
K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor, Cade, surpriz'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a great number of CADE'S Followers, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;

And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
Expect your highness' doom, of life, or death.

K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!—
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And show'd how well you love your prince and country:

Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:
And so, with thanks, and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your grace to be advertised,
The duke of York is newly come from Ireland:
And with a puissant and a mighty power,
Of Gallowglasses, and stout Kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Like to a ship, that, having scap'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd and boarded with a pirate:
But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd;
And now is York in arms to second him.—
I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him;
And ask him, what's the reason of these arms.
Tell him, I'll send duke Edmund to the Tower;—
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him.

Som. My lord,

I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms;
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord, and doubt not so to deal,
As all things shall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;
For yet may England curse my wretched reign.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.

Kent. Iden's garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself; that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods; and durst not peep out, for all the country is lay'd for me; but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick-wall have I climbed into this garden; to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And, I think, this word sallet was born to do me good: for, many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and, many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink and now the word sallet must serve me to

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

King's camp on one side. On the other, enter the King attended, with drum and colours: his Forces at some distance.

From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right,
 And suck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
 He sells, aloud; but burn, bonfires, clear and bright,
 To certain great England's lawful king.
 He sets a majestas! who would not buy these dear?
 We obey, that know not how to rule;
 And was made to handle nought but gold:
 It gives due action to my words,
 A sword, or sceptre, balance it.
 We shall it have, have I a soul;
 Which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
 A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
 To York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.
 As a messenger, or come of pleasure?
 A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
 We the reason of these arms in peace;
 For, thou—being a subject as I am,—
 Thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
 We raise so great a power without his leave,
 To bring thy force so near the court.

Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great,
 It would hew up rocks, and fight with flint,

And angry at these abject terms;
 As we, like Ajax Telamonius,
 Or oxen could I spend my fury!
 A better born than is the king;
 Like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:
 I must make fair weather yet awhile,
 And enry be more weak, and I more strong.—
 Buckingham, I pry'thee, pardon me,
 I have given no answer all this while:
 I was troubled with deep melancholy.
 I see why I have brought this army hither,
 To remove proud Somerset from the king,
 As to his grace, and to the state.

That is too much presumption on thy part:
 Thy arms be to no other end,
 To give bath yielded unto thy demand;
 The king of Somerset is in the Tower.

Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?
 Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.—
 I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
 To-morrow in Saint George's field,
 All have pay, and every thing you wish.
 My sovereign, virtuous Henry,
 And my eldest son,—nay, all my sons,
 And my fealty and love,

And them all as willing as I live;
 Goods, horse, armour, any thing I have
 To use, so Somerset may die.

York, I commend this kind submission:
 It will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King HENRY, attended.

Now, Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
 As he marcheth with thee arm in arm?
 In all submission and humility,
 He hath presented himself unto your highness.

Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?
 To heave the traitor Somerset from hence;

And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
 Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with Cade's head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
 May pass into the presence of a king,
 Lo, I present you grace a traitor's head,
 The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade!—Great God, how just art thou!

O, let me view his visage being dead,
 That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
 Tell me, my friend, art thou the man, that slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your majesty.
 K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
 A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss
 He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, kneel down; [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks;
 And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
 And never live but true unto his liege!

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen;
 Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen MARGARET, and SOMERSET.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,
 But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty?
 Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts,
 And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
 Shall I endure the sight of Somerset!—
 False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,
 Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?

King did I call thee? no, thou art not king:
 Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
 Which dar'st not, no, nor can'st not rule a traitor.
 That head of thine doth not become a crown;
 Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
 And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engrave these brows of mine;
 Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
 Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
 And with the same to act controlling laws.
 Give place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more
 O'er him, whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee, York,
 Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown:
 Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

York. Would'st have me kneel? first let me ask of these,
 If they can brook I bow a knee to man.—
 Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;

[Exit an Attendant.]

I know, ere they will have me go to ward,
 They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come again,
 [Exit Buckingham.]

To say, if that the bastard boys of York
 Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,
 Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
 The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,
 Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
 That for my surety will refuse the boys.

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, old CLIFFORD and his Son.

See, where they come; I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.
 Cliff. Health and all happiness to my lord the king!

[Kneels.]

York. I thank thee, Clifford: Say, what news with thee?

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look: We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again; For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my king, York, I do not mistake; But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do: To Bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king. Clif. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower, And chop away that factious pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey; His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so; I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.— Call hither to the stake my two brave bears, That, with the very shaking of their chains, They may astonish these fell lurking curs; Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come to me.

Drums. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with Forces.

Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,

And manacle the bear-ward in their chains, If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'er-weening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld; Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw, Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cry'd: And such a piece of service will you do, If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump, As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow!—

Old Salisbury,—shame to thy silver hair, Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!— What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian, And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?

O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty? If it be banish'd from the frosty head,

Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?— Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,

And shame thine honourable age with blood? Why art thou old, and want'st experience?

Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it? For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,

That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself The title of this most renowned duke;

And in my conscience do repute his grace The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin; But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath.

Who can be bound by any solemn vow To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,

To force a spotless virgin's chastity, To reave the orphan of his patrimony,

To wring the widow from her 'custom'd right; And have no other reason for his wrong,

But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again,

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm, Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;

And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, Might I but know thee by thy household bad

War. Now, by my father's badge, old N crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,

This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet, (As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,

That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm.) Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy And tread it under foot with all contempt,

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father, To quell the rebels, and their 'complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatick, that's more than canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup!

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some chase,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crow fight'st.—

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day, It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? wilt thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should love,

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Y. Cliff. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
 I would speak blasphemy, ere bid you fly;
 But fly you must; incurable discomfit
 Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
 Away, for your relief! and we will live
 To see their day, and them our fortune give:
 Away, my lord, away! [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum: Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;
 That winter lion, who, in rage, forgets
 Aged contusions and all brush of time;
 And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
 Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
 Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
 If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
 Three times to-day I help him to his horse,
 Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,
 Persuaded him from any further act:
 But still, where danger was, still there I met him;
 And like rich hangings in a homely house,
 So was his will in his old feeble body.
 But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;

By the mass, so did we all.—I thank you, Richard:
 God knows, how long it is I have to live;
 And it hath pleas'd him, that three times to-day
 You have defended me from imminent death.—
 Well, lords, we have not got that, which we have:
 'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
 Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know, our safety is to follow them;
 For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
 To call a present court of parliament.

Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth:—
 What says lord Warwick? shall we after them?

War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.
 Now by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
 Saint Albans' battle, won by famous York,
 Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.—
 Sound, drums and trumpets;—and to London all:
 And more such days as these to us befall! [Exit.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. The Parliament-house.

Drums. Some Soldiers of York's party break in. Then, Enter the Duke of YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK and Others, with white roses in their hats.

War. I wonder, how the king escap'd our hands. York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north, He slyly stole away, and left his men : Whereat the great lord of Northumberland, Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat, Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself, Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in, Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edo. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham, Is either slain, or wounded dangerous : I cleft his heaver with a downright blow ; That this is true, father, behold his blood.

Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wiltshire's blood, [Showing his bloody sword. To York, showing his.] Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did. [Throwing down the duke of Somerset's head.] York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—

What, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset ? Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt !

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's head. War. And so do I.—Victorious prince of York, Before I see thee seated in that throne Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, I vow by heaven, these eyes shall never close. This is the palace of the fearful king, And this the regal seat: possess it, York: For this is thine, and not king Henry's heirs.

York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will ; For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you ; he, that flies, shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk,—Stay by me, my lords ;— And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night. War. And, when the king comes, offer him violence, Unless he seek to thrust you out by force.

York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament, But little thinks we shall be of her council : By words, or blows, here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house. War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd, Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king ; And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords ; be resolute ! I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best, The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells. I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares— Resolve thee, Richard ; claim the English crown.

[Warwick leads York to the throne, who sits himself.]

Flourish. Enter King HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, Even in the chair of state ! belike, he means, (Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,) To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king.— Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father.— And thine, lord Clifford ; and you both have wrong'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens, be reveng'd on me ! Cliff. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

HENRY 8. PART 3.

Act 5. Sc. 5.

Published by W. Pickering 57 Chancery Lane 1824.

West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:

My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he;

He durst not sit there, had your father liv'd.

My gracious lord, here in the parliament

Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin; he it so.

K. Hen. Ah, know you not, the city favours them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

Exe. Bot. when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's

heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house!

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,

Shall be the war, that Henry means to use.—

[They advance to the Duke.]

Thou factions duke of York, descend my throne,

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;

I am thy sovereign.

York. Thou art deceiv'd, I am thine.

Exe. For shame, come down; he made thee duke

of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown,

In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural

king?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard, duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my

throne?

York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself.

War. Be duke of Lancaster, let him be king.

West. He is both king and duke of Lancaster;

And that the lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget,

That we are those, which chas'd you from the field,

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread

March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I'll have more lives,

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that, instead of words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger,

As shall revenge his death, before I stir.

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you, we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

Z. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, duke of York;

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March:

I am the son of Henry the fifth,

Who made the dauphin and the French to stoop,

And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I;

When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks

you lose:—

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edo. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mort. Good brother, [To York.] as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give king Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first:—hear him,

lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,

For he, that interrupts him, shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kingly throne,

Whereto my grandsire, and my father, sat?

No: first shall war unpeope this my realm;

And, and their colours—often borne in France;

And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow,—

Shall be my winding sheet.—Why faint you, lords?
My title's good, and better far than his.

War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

K. Hen. Henry the fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. I know not what to say; my title's weak.

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king:

For Richard, in the view of many lords,

Resign'd the crown to Henry the fourth;

Whose heir my father was, and I am his.

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,

Think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown,

But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter?

Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer

not?

Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.

K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,—

Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—

Can set the duke up, in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,

Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:

May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,

Where I shall kneel to him, that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown:—

What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely duke of York;

Or I will fill the house with armed men,

And, o'er the chair of state where now he sits,

Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.]

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear but one

word;—

Let me, for this my life-time, reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet, while thou liv'st.

K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,

Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?

War. What good is this to England, and himself?

West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

North. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour hides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,

And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome!

Or live in peace, abandon'd, and despis'd!

[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick, but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.

But, be it as it may:—I here entail

The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy king and sovereign;

And neither by treason, nor hostility,

To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. [Coming from the throne.]

War. Long live king Henry I!—Plantagenet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.
Exc. Accurs'd be he, that seeks to make them foes! [Senet. The Lords come forward.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London, with my soldiers.
Norfolk. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.
[Exeunt York and his Sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter Queen MARGARET and the Prince of Wales.

Exc. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:
I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.]

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah, wretched man! 'would I had died a maid,

And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I;
Or felt that pain, which I did for him once;
Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood;

Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather than made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinherited thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me:
If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret;—pardon me, sweet son;—
The earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforc'd me.

Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;

And given unto the house of York such head,
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,

What is it but to make thy sepulchre,
And creep into it far before thy time?
Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;

Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;
The duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb, environed with wolves.

Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,
Before I would have granted to that act.

But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:
And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my son is disinherited.
The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:

And spread they shall be; to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruin of the house of York.
Thus do I leave thee:—Come, son, let's away;
Our army's ready: come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.
Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with
me?
Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.

Prince. When I return with victory from the field,
I'll see your grace: till then, I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus.
[Exeunt Queen Margaret, and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me, and to her son,
Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke;

Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle,
Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son!

The loss of those three lords torments my heart:
I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair;—
Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Exc. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.
[Exeunt.]

Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarums. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to scape their hands!
tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter CLIFFORD, and Soldiers.

Wif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.
for the frat of this accursed duke,
whose father slew my father,—he shall die.

Wif. And I, my lord, will bear him company.
Soldiers, away with him.

Wif. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child, it thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Wif. How now! is he dead already? Or, is it fear, that makes him close his eyes?—I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch, as trembles under his devouring paws:
I so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;

I so he comes to rend his limbs asunder.—
gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
I dot with such a cruel threat'ning look.

See Clifford, hear me speak before I die;
I mean too mean a subject for thy wrath,
thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Wif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood
thou stopp'd the passage, where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again;
is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Wif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives, and thine, are not revenge sufficient for me;

if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,
I hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
would not slack mine ire, nor ease my heart,
a sight of any of the house of York
as a fury to torment my soul;

I till I root out their accursed line,
I leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore— [Lifting his hand.

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death:—
thee I pray; Sweet Clifford, pity me!

Wif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.
Rut. I never did thee harm; Why wilt thou slay me?

Wif. Thy father hath.
Rut. But 'twas ere I was born:
I had one son, for his sake pity me;
I, in revenge thereof,—sith, God is just,—
be as miserably slain as I.

Let me live in prison all my days;
I when I give occasion of offence,
do let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Wif. No cause?

SCENE IV.

The same.

Alarum. Enter YORK.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:
uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
I all my followers to the eager foe

Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind,
Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves.
My sons—God knows what hath bechanced them:
But this I know,—they have demean'd themselves
Like men born to renown, by life, or death.

Three times did Richard make a lane to me;
And thrice cried,—Courage, father! fight it out!
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt
In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardiest warriors did retire,
Richard cried,—Charge! and give no foot of ground!
And cried,—A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!

With this, we charg'd again: but, out, alas!
We bodg'd again; as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide,
And spend her strength with over-matching waves.

[A short Alarum within.]

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue;
And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury:
And, were I strong, I would not shun their fury:
The sands are number'd, that make up my life;
Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford,—rough Northumberland,—
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage;
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clif. Ay, to such mercy, as his ruthless arm,
With downright payment, show'd unto my father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his ear,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth
A bird, that will revenge upon you all:
And, in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning what'er you can afflict me with.
Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?

Clif. So cowards fight, when they can fly no further;

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O, Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o'er-run my former time:
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face;
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice,

Whose wrong hath made thee faint and fly ere this.
Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word;
But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one,

[Draws.]
Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand
causes,
I would prolong awhile the traitor's life:
Wrath makes him deaf; speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford; do not honour him so much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages;
And ten to one is no impeachment of valour.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles.]
Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.
North. So doth the coney struggle in the net.

[York is taken prisoner.]
York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;

So true men yield with robbers so o'ermatch'd.
North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford, and Northumberland,
Come, make him stand upon this molehill here;
That rought at mountains with out-stretched arms,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.—
What! was it you, that would be England's king?
Was't you, that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that, with his grumbling voice,

Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York; I stain'd this napkin with the blood,
That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point
Made issue from the bosom of the boy:
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state.
I pry'thee, grieve, to make me merry, York;
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thy entrails,
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad;
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see, to make me sport;
York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown.—
A crown for York!—and, lords, bow low to him.—
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on.—

[Putting a paper crown on his head.]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
Ay, this is he, that took king Henry's chair:
And this is he, was his adopted heir.—
But how is it, that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me, you should not be king,
Till our king Henry had shook hands with death.
And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem,
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, 'tis a fault too unpardonable!—
Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head;
And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves
of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!
How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes, whom fortune captivates?
But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,
Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of king of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen;
Unless the adage must be verified,—
That beggars, mounted, run their horse to death.
'Tis beauty, that doth oft make women proud;
But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small:
'Tis virtue, that doth make them most admir'd;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:

'Tis government, that makes them seem divine
The want thereof makes thee abominable:
Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion.
O, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
How could'st thou drain the life-blood of the cl
To hid the father wife his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?
Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless!
Bid'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy w
Would'st have me weep? why, now thou hast w will:

For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And, when the rage allays, the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford,—and thee, false Fr woman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passions move m
That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:

And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:

[He gives back the handkerchief.]

And, if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tear
And say,—Alas, it was a piteous deed!—
There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my
And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee

My soul to heaven, my blood upon your head.

I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter EDWARD, and RICHARD with their Forces, marching.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father 'scap'd;
Or whether he be 'scap'd away, or no,
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit;
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news;
Had he been slain, we should have heard the news;
Or, had he 'scap'd, methinks, we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape.—
How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle rage about;
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop,
As doth a lion in a herd of neat:
Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs;
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.
So far'd our father with his enemies;

So fled his enemies my warlike father;
Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.
See, how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trimmed like a yonker, prancing in his love

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfe
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to k
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet heard of.

I think, it cites us, brother, to the field;
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should, notwithstanding, join our lights to
And over-shine the earth, as this the world
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bea
Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Nay, bear three daughters;—by your leave I speak it, ve the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

hat art thou, whose heavy looks foretell dreadful story, hanging on thy tongue?
Ah, one, that was a woful locker on, as the noble duke of York was slain, princely father, and my loving lord.

O, speak no more! for I have heard too much.

Say how he died, for I will hear it all.
Enviroued he was with many foes;
ood against them as the hope of Troy
t the Greeks, that would have enter'd Troy.
reules himself must yield to odds;
any strokes, though with a little axe,
own and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.

*Enter WARWICK and MONTAGUE,
with Forces.*

How now, fair lords? What fare? what ows abroad?

Great lord of Warwick, if we should recount eful news, and, at each word's deliverance, iards in our flesh, till all were told,
rds would add more anguish than the ounds.

at lord, the duke of York is slain.
O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet, held thee dearly, as his soul's redemption,
se stern lord Clifford done to death.

Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears:
w, to add more measure to your woes,
to tell you things, since then befall'n.
e bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
, as swiftly as the posts could run,
ought me of your loss, and his depart.
n London, keeper of the flock,
d my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
y well appointed, as I thought,
towards Saint Alban's to intercept the queen,
the king in my behalf along:

For by my scouts I was advertis'd,
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament,
Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession.
Short tale to make,—we at Saint Alban's met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But, whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their hated spleen;
Or whether 'twas report of her success;
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives—blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers'—like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thrasher with a flail,—
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends:
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay, and great rewards:
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we, in them, no hope to win the day,
So that we fled; the king, unto the queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here, we heard, you were,
Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle
Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?
War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers:

And for your brother,—he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, helike, when valiant Warwick fled:
Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear:

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist;
Were he as famous and as bold in war,
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick: blame me
not;

'Tis love I bear thy glories, makes me speak.
But, in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our hodies in black mourning gowns,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our heads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say—Ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.

He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath, and what hesida
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
With all the friends, that thou, brave earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march again;
And once again bestride our flaming steeds,
And once again cry—Charge upon our foes!
But never once again turn back, and fly.

Rich. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick
speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fall'st, (as God forbid the hour!)
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend!

War. No longer earl of March, but duke of York;
The next degree is, England's royal throne:
For king of England shalt thou be proclaim'd

In every borough as we pass along ;
And he, that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, — valiant Richard, — Montague, —
Stay ye no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,

(As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,) I come to pierce it, — or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums ; — God, and Saint George, for us !

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now ? what news ?

Mess. The duke of Norfolk sends you word by me, The queen is coming with a puissant host ; And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then it sorts, brave warriors : Let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Before York.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, the Prince of Wales, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Forces.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown :
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord ?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them, that fear their wreck ; —

To see this sight, it irks my very soul. —
Withhold revenge, dear God ! 'tis not my fault,
Not wittingly have I intrin'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity, must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks ?
Not to the beast, that would usurp their den.

Whose hand is it that the forest hear doth lick ?
Not his, that spoils her young before her face.

Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting ?
Not he, that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on ;
And doves will peck, in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brows ;

He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue, like a loving sire ;

Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinheret him,

Which argued thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young :

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,

Who hath not seen them (even with those wings,
Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,)
Make war with him, that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence ?

For shame, my liege, make them your precedent !
Were it not pity, that this goodly boy

Should lose his birthright by his father's fault ;
And long hereafter say unto his child, —

*What my great-grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly gave away ?*

Ah, what a shame were this ! Look on the boy ;
And let his manly face, which promiseth

Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart,
To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator, Infering arguments of mighty force.

But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear, —
That things ill got had ever bad success ?

And happy always was it for that son,
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell ?

I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind ;
And 'would my father had left me no more !

For all the rest is held at such a rate,
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep,

Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
Ah, cousin York ! 'would thy best friends did know,

How it doth grieve me, that thy head is here !

Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no?
 And men have broke their fasts to-day,
 Or shall die, unless thou yield the crown.
 If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;
 For justice puts his armour on.

If that be right, which Warwick says is not wrong, but every thing is right.
 Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;
 I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

But thou art neither like thy sire, nor dam;
 A foul mishapen stigmatick,
 Whose destinies to be avoided,
 As toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.
 From Naples, hid with English gilt,
 Where bears the title of a king,
 Whose channel should be call'd the sea,
 Thou not, knowing whence thou art except,

Whose tongue detect thy base-born heart?
 A wisp of straw were worth a thousand
 words,

 Greece was fairer far than thou,
 Thy husband may be Menelaus;
 As Agamemnon's brother wrong'd
 his wife woman, as this king by thee.

Or revell'd in the heart of France,
 And the king, and made the Dauphin stoop;
 He match'd according to his state,
 And have kept that glory to this day:
 And he took a beggar to his bed,
 And thy poor sire with his bridal day;
 And that sunshine brew'd a shower for him,
 And his father's fortunes forth of France,
 And sedition on his crown at home.
 And hath broach'd this tumult, but thy pride?
 And thou been meek, our title still had slept;
 In pity of the gentle king,
 And our claim until another age.
 And it, when we saw our sunshine made thy shining,

Whose summer bred us no increase,
 And we axe to thy usurping root:
 Whose edge hath something hit ourselves,
 And thou, since we have begun to strike,
 And we leave, till we have hewn thee down,
 And thy growing with our heated bloods.
 And now, in this resolution, I defy thee;
 And we any longer conference,
 And I deny't the gentle king to speak.—
 And we impets!—let our bloody colours wave!
 And we for victory, or else a grave.

Stay, Edward,
 And we, wrangling woman; we'll no longer stay;
 And we whose will cost ten thousand lives to-day.

SCENE III.

Of battle between Towton and Saxton in Yorkshire.

As: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.
 Whose serpent with toil, as runners with a race,
 Whose down a little while to breathe:
 Whose receive'd, and many blows repaid,
 Whose and my strong-knit sinews of their strength,
 Whose of spite, needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running.
 Whose smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle
 thine!
 Whose cold frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.
 Whose low now, my lord! what hap! what is of good?

Enter GEORGE.
 Whose a hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;
 Whose are broke, and ruin follows us:
 Whose asel give you, whither shall we fly?
 Whose useless is flight, they follow us with wings;
 Whose we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.
 Whose, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn
 thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
 Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance:
 And, in the very pangs of death, he cried,—
 Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,— Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!
 So underneath the belly of their steeds,
 That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
 The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our
 blood:

I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
 Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
 Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
 And look upon, as if the tragedy
 Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?
 Here on my knee I vow to God above,
 I'll never pause again, never stand still,
 Till either death hath clos'd those eyes of mine,
 Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine:
 And, in this vow, do chain my soul to thine.—
 And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,
 I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
 Thou setter up and plucker down of kings!
 Beseeching thee,—if with thy will it stands,
 That to my foes this body must be prey,—
 Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may open,
 And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!
 Now, lords, take leave, until we meet again,
 Where-e'er it be, in heaven, or on earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand;—and, gentle
 Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:—
 I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
 That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,
 farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
 And give them leave to fly, that will not stay;
 And call them pillars, that will stand to us;
 And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards
 As victors wear at the Olympian games:
 This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
 For yet is hope of life, and victory.—
 Fore-slow no longer, make we hence again.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.

The same. Another part of the field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone:
 Suppose, this arm is for the duke of York,
 And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
 Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
 This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;
 And this the hand, that slew thy brother Rutland,
 And here's the heart that triumphs in their death,
 And cheers these hands, that slew thy sire and
 brother,

To execute the like upon thyself;

And so, have at thee.

[They fight. Warwick enters; Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
 For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.

SCENE V.

Another part of the field.

Alarms. Enter King HENRY.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
 When dying clouds contend with growing light;
 What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
 Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.

Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea,
 Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
 Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea,
 Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind:
 Sometime, the flood prevails; and then, the wind;
 Now, one the better; then, another best;
 Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
 Yet neither conqueror, nor conquered:
 So is the equal poise of this fell war.
 Here on this molehill will I sit me down.

To whom God will, there be the victory!
 For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
 Have chid me from the battle; swearing both,
 They prosper best of all, when I am thence.
 'Would I were dead! if God's good will were so:
 For what is in this world, but grief and woe?
 O God! methinks, it were a happy life,
 To be no better than a homely swain;
 To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
 To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
 Thereby to see the minutes how they run:
 How many make the hour full complete,
 How many hours bring about the day,
 How many days will finish up the year,
 How many years a mortal man may live.
 When this is known, then to divide the times:
 So many hours must I tend my flock;
 So many hours must I take my rest;
 So many hours must I contemplate;
 So many hours must I sport myself;
 So many days my ewes have been with young;
 So many weeks ere the poor fools will yeau;
 So many years ere I shall shear the fleece:
 So minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
 Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
 Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
 Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
 To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery?
 O, yes, it doth; a thousand fold it doth.
 And, to conclude,—the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
 His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
 All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
 Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
 His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
 His body couched in a curious bed,
 When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, dragging in the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind, that profits nobody.—
 This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
 May be possessed with some store of crowns:
 And I, that haply take them from him now,
 May yet ere night yield both my life and them
 To some man else, as this dead man doth me.—
 Who's this?—O God! it is my father's face,
 Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.
 O heavy times, begetting such events!
 From London by the king was I press'd forth;
 My father, being the earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
 And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
 Have by my hands of life bereaved him.—
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!—
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!—
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
 And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
 Whilst lions war, and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.—
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;
 And let our hearts, and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father, who has killed his Son, with the body in his arms.

Fath. Thou, that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold;
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows.—
 But let me see:—is this our foe-man's face?
 Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!—
 Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye; see, see, what showers arise,
 Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
 Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!
 O, pity, God, this miserable age!—
 What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!—
 O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than mon grief!—

O, that my death would stay these ruthless and retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, HARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and iers.

Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us pause,
 nooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.— troops pursue the bloody-minded queen;—
 ed calm Henry, though he were a king,
 h a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
 and an argosy to stem the waves.
 ink you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?
 No, 'tis impossible he should escape:
 ough before his face I speak the words,
 mother Richard mark'd him for the grave:
 wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

[Clifford groans and dies.]

Whose soul is that, which takes her heavy leave?

A deadly groan, like life and death departing.

See who it is: and, now the battle's ended,
 d, or foe, let him be gently us'd.

Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;
 not contented that he lopp'd the branch
 ing Rutland, when his leaves put forth,
 t his murdering knife unto the root,
 whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,
 our princely father, duke of York.

From off the gates of York fetch down the
 head,

ather's head, which Clifford placed there:
 l whereof, let this supply the room;
 e for measure must be answered.

Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our ouse,
 othing sung but death to us and ours:
 eath shall stop his dismal threatening sound, s ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Attendants bring the body forward.]

I think his understanding is bereft:—
 Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?—
 loudy death o'er shades his beams of life,

And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, 'would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth;
 'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
 Because he would avoid such bitter taunts,
 Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitiest Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's captain Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford! swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard,

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath:—
 I know by that, he's dead; And, by my soul,
 If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
 That I in all despite might rail at him,
 This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing
 blood

Stifle the villain, whose unshaken thirst
 York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: Off with the traitor's head,
 And rear it in the place your father's stands.—
 And now to London with triumphant march,
 There to be crowned England's royal king,
 From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,
 And ask the lady Bona for thy queen:
 So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;
 And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread
 The scatter'd foe, that hopes to rise again;
 For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
 Yet look to have them buzz, to offend thine ears.
 First, I will see the coronation;
 And then to Britany I'll cross the sea,
 To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be:
 For on thy shoulder do I build my seat;
 And never will I undertake the thing,
 Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.—
 Richard, I will create thee duke of Gloster;—
 And George, of Clarence;—Warwick, as yourself,
 Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence; George, of Gloster;

For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation;

Richard, be duke of Gloster: Now to London,
 To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.]

No, not a man comes for redress of thee;
 For how can I help them, and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer, whose skin's a keeper's fee;

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.

2 Keep. Let me embrace these sour adversities;
 For wise men say, it is the wisest course.

1 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon
 him.

2 Keep. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.

1 Keep. My queen, and son, are gone to France for aid;

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
 Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
 To wife for Edward: If this news be true,
 Poor queen, and son, your labour is but lost;
 For Warwick is a subtle orator,
 And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.
 By this account, then, Margaret may win him;
 For she's a woman to be pitied much:
 Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
 Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;
 The tiger will be mild, while she doth mourn;
 And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
 To hear, and see, her plaints, her brinish tears.
 Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:
 She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry;
 He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
 She weeps, and says—her Henry is depos'd;

He smiles, and says—his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more:
Whiles Warwick tells his tide, smooths the wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength;
And, in conclusion, wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support king Edward's place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.

2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:

A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.

2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Not deck'd with diamonds, and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd, content;

A crown it is, that seldom kings enjoy.

2 Keep. Well, if you be a king, crown'd with content,
Your crown content, and you, must be contented

To go along with us: for, as we think,
You are the king, king Edward hath depos'd;

And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?

2 Keep. No, never such an oath, nor will not now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell, when I was king of England?

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;

My father and my grandfather, were kings;

And you were sworn true subjects unto me:

And, tell me then, have you not broke your oaths?

1 Keep. No;

For we were subjects, but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind, when I do blow,
And yielding to another, when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for, of that sin
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;
And be you kings; command, and I'll obey.

1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king
Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as king Edward is.

1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd;

And what God will, that let your king perform;

And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

London. A room in the Palace.

Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, CLARENCE, and Lady GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Albans' field
This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain,
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror;

Her suit is now, to repossess those lands;

Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit;
It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. Yea! is it so? [Aside to Clarence.]

I see, the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. He knows the game; How true he keeps the wind?

Glo. Silence! [Aside.]

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;

And come some other time, to know our mind.

My. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.

My lord, this merry inclination is not with the sadness of my suit;
 you dismiss me, either with ay, or no.

My. Ay; if thou wilt say ay, to my request:
 thou dost say no, to my demand.

My. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
 The widow likes him not, she knits her rows.

He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
 [Aside.]

My. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;

And do show her wit incomparable;
 Her perfections challenge sovereignty:

My. Or other, she is for a king;
 she shall be my love, or else my queen.—

My. At king Edward take thee for his queen?
 My. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious
 lord:

subject fit to jest withal,
 unfit to be a sovereign.

My. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee, no more than what my soul intends;
 it is, to enjoy thee for my love.

My. And that is more than I will yield unto:
 I am too mean to be your queen;

My. Too good to be your concubine.

My. You caviel, widow; I did mean, my queen.

My. 'Twill grieve your grace, my sons should all you—father.

My. No more, than when my daughters call me mother.

My. A widow, and thou hast some children;
 God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,

my. Her some: why, tis a happy thing to be father unto many sons.

My. No more, for thou shalt be my queen.
 The ghostly father now hath done his office.

My. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for
 thyself.

My. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

My. The widow likes it not, for she looks sad.

My. You'd think it strange, if I should marry her.

My. To whom, my lord?

My. Why, Clarence, to myself.
 That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

My. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.
 By so much is the wonder in extremes.

My. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you nothing.

My. It is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
 brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

My. See, that he be convey'd unto the tower:—

My. We, brothers, to the man, that took him, give him his apprehension.—

My. Go you along;—Lords, use her honourable.
 [Exeunt King Edward, Lady Grey, Clarence, and Lord.]

My. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.
 He was wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
 on his loins no hopeful branch may spring,

My. From the golden time I look for!
 My. Between my soul's desire, and me.
 My. (Edward's title buried.)

My. Once, Henry, and his son young Edward, the onlook'd-for issue of their bodies,
 their rooms, ere I can place myself in meditation for my purpose!

My. Then I do but dream on sovereignty;
 My. That stands upon a promontory, as a far-off shore, where he would tread,
 his foot were equal with his eye;
 My. Des the sea, that sunders him from thence,
 he'll lade it dry to have his way:

So do I wish the crown, being so far off;
 And so I chide the means, that keep me from it;
 And so I say—I'll cut the causes off,
 Flattering me with impossibilities.—

My. My eye's too quick, my heart o'erreens too much,
 Unless my hand and strength could equal them;

My. Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
 What other pleasure can the world afford?

My. I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
 And deck my body in gay ornaments,
 And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.

My. O miserable thought! and more unlikely,
 Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!

My. Why, love foreswore me in my mother's womb:
 And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
 She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe
 To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;

My. To make an envious mountain on my back,
 Where sits deformity to mock my body;

My. To shape my legs of an unequal size;
 To disproportion me in every part,
 Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd hear-whelp,
 That carries no impression like the dam.

My. And am I then a man to be belov'd?
 O, monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!

My. Then, since this earth affords no joy to me,
 But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
 As are of better person than myself,

My. I'll make my heaven—to dream upon the crown;
 And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
 Until my misshap'd trunk, that bears this head,
 Be round impaled with a glorious crown.

My. And yet I know not how to get the crown,
 For many lives stand between me and home:

My. And I,—like one lost in a thorny wood,
 That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns;
 Seeking a way, and straying from the way;
 Not knowing how to find the open air,
 But toiling desperately to find it out,—

My. Torment myself to catch the English crown:
 And from that torment I will free myself,
 Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.

My. Why, I can smile; and murder, while I smile;
 And cry, content, to that, which grieves my heart;
 And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
 And frame my face to all occasions.

My. I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
 I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
 I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
 Deceive more sily than Ulysses could,
 And, like a Sinon, take another Troy:

My. I can add colours to the camelion;
 Change shapes, with Proteus, for advantages,
 And set the murd'rous Machiavel to school.

My. Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
 Tut! were it further off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

France. A room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, and Lady BONA, attended; the King takes his State.

Then enter Queen MARGARET, Prince EDWARD her son, and the Earl of OXFORD.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret, [Rising.]

Sit down with us; it ill befits thy state
 And birth, that thou should'st stand, while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France; now Margaret must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve,
 Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
 Great Albion's queen in former golden days:
 But now mischance hath trod my title down,
 And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
 Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
 And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears,
 And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like thyself,
 And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck
 [Seats her by him.]

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,—
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward, duke of York,
Usurps the regal title, and the seat
Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret,—
With this my son, prince Edward, Henry's heir,—
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And, if thou fail us, all our hope is done:
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
Our people and our peers are both misled,
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
And, as thou see'st, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour
thee.

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:
And see, where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q. Mar. Our earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his state. Queen Margaret rises.

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
For this is he, that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
I come,—in kindness, and unfeigned love,—
First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
And, then, to crave a league of amity;
And, lastly, to confirm that amity
With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafest to grant
That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. And, gracious madam, [To Bona.] in our king's behalf

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
To tell the passion of my sov'reign's heart;
Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis,—and lady Bona,—hear me
speak,

Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love,
But from deceit, bred by necessity;
For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?
To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice,—
That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,
Yet here prince Edward stands, king Henry's son.
Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour:
For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art prince, than she is queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France:
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth
course,

You told not, how Henry the sixth hath lost
All that, which Henry the fifth had gotten!
Methinks, these peers of France should smile at
But for the rest,—You tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak thy liege,

Whom thou obey'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?

For shame, leave Henry, and call Edward
Oxf. Call him my king, by whose injurious

Was done to death; and more than so, my

Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.

Q. Mar. Heavens grant, that Warwick's

Enter a Messenger.

My lord ambassador, these letters are for you;

from your brother, marquis Montague.

from our king unto your majesty.—

Madam, these for you; from whom I know not.

[To Margaret. They all read their letters.]

I like it well, that our fair queen and mistress at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

or Nay, mark, how Lewis stamps as he were nettled;

'tis all's for the best.

Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd oys.

Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

What! has your king married the lady Grey?

to sooth your forgery and his,

me a paper to persuade me patience?

the alliance, that he seeks with France?

or presume to scorn us in this manner?

I told your majesty as much before:

eveth Edward's love, and Warwick's honesty.

King Lewis, I here protest,—in sight of heaven,

the hope I have of heavenly bliss,— am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;

ne my king, for he dishonours me;

st himself, if he could see his shame.—

Unless thou rescue him from fool despair?

Bona. My quarrel, and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with yours.

K. Lew. And mine, with her's, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd,

You shall have aid.

O. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return in post;

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,—

That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,

To reveal it with him and his new bride:

Thou seest what's past, go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

O. Mar. Tell him, My mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on.

War. Tell him from me, That he hath done me wrong;

And therefore I'll uncrown him, ere't be long.

These's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Mess.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou,

And Oxford, with five thousand men,

Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle:

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen

And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt;—

What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:—

That if our queen and this young prince agree,

I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy,

To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

O. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion:—

Soon Edward, she is fair and virtuous,

Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,

That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to Warwick.]

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,

And thou, lord Bourbon, our high admiral,

Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.—

I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance,

For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exeunt all but Warwick.]

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,

But I return his sworn and mortal foe:

Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,

But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Had he none else to make a stale but me?

Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.

I was the chief, that rais'd him to the crown,

And I'll be chief to bring him down again:

Not that I pity Henry's misery,

But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

London. A room in the Palace.

GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET,
MONTAGUE, and Others.

Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you new marriage with the lady Grey?

or our brother made a worthy choice?

Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;

ould he stay, till Warwick made return?

My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Enter King EDWARD, attended; Lady M., as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, TINGS, and Others.

And his well-chosen bride.

I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

live;

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you

our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick?

Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,

That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose, they take offence without a cause,

They are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward,

Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king;

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glo. Not I:

No; God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd,

Whom God hath join'd together; ay, and 'twere pity,

To sunder them, that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorn, and your mislike, aside,
Tell me some reason, why the lady Grey
Should not become my wife, and England's queen:—
And you, too, Somerset, and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is my opinion,—that king Lewis Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
About the marriage of the lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By such invention as I can devise?

Mont. Yet to have joined with France in such alliance,
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth

'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.
Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?

Mont. Yes; but the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France, than trusting
France:

Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas,
Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves;
In them, and in ourselves, our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech, lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant;

And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.

Glo. And yet, methinks, your grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride;
She better would have fitted me, or Clarence:
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir
Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife,
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgment;

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And, to that end, I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be king,
And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty
To raise my state to title of a queen,

Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent,

And meaner than myself have had like fortune.

But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:

What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,

And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands:

Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.
[Aside.]

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters, or what news,
From France?

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words,
But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them.
What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters?

Mess. At my depart, these were his very words;
Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,—
That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,
To revel it with him and his new bride.

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike he think Henry.

But what said lady Bona to my marriage?
Mess. These were her words, utter'd with disdain;

Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

She had the wrong. But what said Henry's

 I know what rests, but, in night's coverture, other being carelessly encamp'd,
 I lie lurking in the towns about,
 attended by a simple guard,
 I will surprize and take him at our pleasure?
 I have found the adventure very easy:
 I, Ulysses, and stout Diomedes,
 delight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents,
 brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds;
 I will cover'd with the night's black mantle,
 my wares may beat down Edward's guard,
 I will use myself; I say not—slaughter him,
 I intend but only to surprize him.—
 I will follow me to this attempt,
 I will give the name of Henry, with your leader.

[They all cry, Henry,
 then, let's on our way in silent sort:
 Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George!

SCENE III.

Edward's camp, near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen to guard the king's tent.
 1. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;
 2. By this, is set him down to sleep.
 1. What, will he not to-bed?
 2. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn vow
 to lie and take his natural rest,
 Warwick, or himself, he quite suppress'd.
 1. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day.

2. Warwick be so near as men report.
 1. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that, with the king here resteth in his tent?
 2. 'Tis the lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.
 1. O, is it so? But why commands the
 king,
 his chief followers lodge in towns about him,
 he himself keepeth in the cold field?
 2. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.
 1. Ay; but give me worship and quietness,
 'tis better than a dangerous honour.
 Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
 he was doubted, he would waken him.
 2. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.
 1. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal tent,
 defend his person from night-foes?

WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD,
 SOMERSET, and Forces.

This is his tent; and see, where stand his guard.
 1. My masters: honour now, or never!
 I will lose me, and Edward shall be ours.
 2. Who goes there?
 1. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick, and the rest, cry all—Warwick!
 Warwick! and set upon the guard; who fly, crying—Arm! Arm! Warwick, and the rest, following them.

With beating, and trumpets sounding, re-enter
 WARWICK, and the rest, bringing the king to a gown, sitting in a chair: GLOSTER and HASTINGS fly.

What are they, that fly there?
 Richard, and Hastings: let them go, here's the duke.
 1. The duke! why, Warwick, when we parted last,
 all'dst me king?

Ay, but the case is alter'd:
 you disgrac'd me in my embassade,
 degraded you from being king,
 and now to create you duke of York.
 How should you govern any kingdom,
 how not how to use-ambassadors;

Nor how to be contented with one wife;
 Nor how to use your brothers brotherly;
 Nor how to study for the people's welfare;
 Nor how to shrowd yourself from enemies?
 K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?
 Nay, then I see, that Edward needs must down.—
 Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
 Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,
 Edward will always bear himself as king:
 Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,
 My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king: [Takes off his crown.

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,
 And be true king indeed; thou but the shadow.—
 My lord of Somerset, at my request,
 See that forthwith duke Edward be convey'd
 Unto my brother, archbishop of York.
 When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,
 I'll follow you, and tell what answer
 Lewis, and the lady Bona, send to him:—
 Now, for a while, farewell, good duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;
 It boots not to resist both wind and tide.
 [Exit King Edward, led out; Somerset with
 him.

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,
 But march to London with our soldiers.
 War. Ay, that's the first thing, that we have to do;
 To free king Henry from imprisonment,
 And see him seated in the regal throne. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

London. A room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,
 What late misfortune is befall'n king Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.
 Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;
 Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,
 Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares:

And, as I further have to understand,
 Is new committed to the bishop of York,
 Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief;
 Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may;
 Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair,
 For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
 This is it, that makes me bridle passion,
 And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
 And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
 Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
 King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd, that he comes towards London,

To set the crown once more on Henry's head:
 Guess thou the rest; king Edward's friends must down.

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,
 (For trust not him, that hath once broken faith),
 I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
 To save at least the heir of Edward's right;

There shall I rest secure from force, and fraud.
 Come therefore, let us fly, while we may fly;
 If Warwick take us, we are sure to die. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.

A park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, Sir WILLIAM
 STANLEY, and Others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and sir William
 Stanley,
 Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,

Into this chiefest thicket of the park.
Thus stands the case: You know, our king, my brother,
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty;
And often, but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to dispart himself.
I have advertis'd him by secret means,
That if about this hour, he make his way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends, with horse and men,
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King EDWARD, and a Huntsman.

Hant. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man; see where the huntsmen stand.—

Now, brother of Gloster, lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the bishop's deer?

Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste;
Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stauley, I will requite thy forwardness.

Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Hant. Better do so, than tarry and be hang'd.

Glo. Come then, away; let's have no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell; shield thee from Warwick's frown;

And pray, that I may repossess the crown.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

A room in the Tower.

Enter King HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMERSET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat;

By turn'd my captive state to liberty;

My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys;

At our enlagement what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But, if an humble prayer may prevail,

I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,

For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure:

Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds

Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,

At last, by notes of household harmony,

They quite forget their loss of liberty.—

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,

And chiefly therefore I thank God, and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument.

Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,

By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me;

And that the people of this blessed land

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars;

Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee,

For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,

By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice,

For few men rightly temper with the stars:

Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,

For choosing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,

To whom the heavens, in thy nativity,

Adjudget an olive branch, and laurel crown,

As likely to be blest in peace, and war;

And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me both your hands;

Now join your hands, and, with your hands, hearts,

That no dissension hinder government;

I make you both protectors of this land;

While I myself will lead a private life,

And in devotion spend my latter days,

To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise.

Brother, this is sir John Montgomery,

To help king Edward, in his time of storm,
loyal subject ought to do.

Thanks, good Montgomery: But we now

Then fare you well, for I will hence again;

Nay, stay, sir John, awhile; and we'll safe means the crown may be recover'd.

What talk you of debating? In few words, not here proclaim yourself our king,

you to your fortune; and be gone,

could we fight, if you pretend no title?

Thy, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

When we grow stronger, then we'll

'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Away with scrupulous wit! now arms are rule.

And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.
we will proclaim you out of hand;

thereof will bring you many friends.

Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right,

Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;
will I be Edward's champion.

Sound, trumpet; Edward shall be here

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.

By this I challenge him to single fight.

[Throws down his gauntlet.

All. Long live Edward the fourth!

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery;—and thanks unto you all.

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York:

And, when the morning sun shall raise his car
Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;

For, well I wot, that Henry is no soldier.—

Ah, forward Clarence!—how evil it becoms thee,
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother!

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.—

Come on, brave soldiers; doubt not of the day;
And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.

London. A room in the palace.

Enter King HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,
With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders,
Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,
And with his troops doth march again to London;
And many giddy people flock to him.

Oxf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out;
Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,
Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;
Those will I muster up:—and thou, son Clarence,
Shalt stir, in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,
The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:—
Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find
Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st:—
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,
In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.—
My sovereign, with the loving citizens,—
Like to his island, girt in with the ocean,
Or modest Dian, circled with her nymphs,—
Shall rest in London, till we come to him.—
Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.—
Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth I kiss your highness' hand!

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.

Mont. Comfort, my lord;—and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus [Kissing Henry's hand.] I seal
my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords; let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt War. Clar. Oxf. and Mont.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest a while.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

Metinks, the power, that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear, my meed hath got me fame.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears;

I have not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd;

Then why should they love Edward more than me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace:

And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shouts within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear him hence,
And once again proclaim us king of England.—
You are the fount, that makes small brooks to flow;
Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,
And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—

Coventry.

Enter, upon the walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others.

War. Where is the post, that came from valiant Oxford?
How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?
1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?
Where is the post, that came from Montague?
2 Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter Str JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?
And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?
Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And do expect him here some two hours hence.

[Drum heard.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.
Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies;
The drum, your honour hears, marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.
Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

Drums. Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Forces, marching.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glo. See, how the surly Warwick mans the walls.
War. O, unbud spite! is sportful Edward come?
Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could hear no news of his repair?

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,

Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee!—
Call Edward—king, and at his hands beg mercy,
And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down?—
Call Warwick—parron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remain the duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said—
the king;

Or did he make the jest against his will?
War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give;
I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'Twas I, that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why, then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:
And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;
And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:
And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this,—
What is the body, when the head is off?

Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,
But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was silly finger'd from the deck!
You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,
And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.
Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down,
kneel down:

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.
War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other fling it at thy face,
Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have w

SCENE III.

Another part of the field.

Enter King EDWARD in triumph: LARENCE, GLOSTER, and the rest.

Thus far our fortune keeps an upward
 rse,
 re grac'd with wreaths of victory.

But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
 I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud,
 That will encounter with our glorious sun,
 Ere he attain his easeful western bed:
 I mean, my lords,—those powers, that the queen
 Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast,
 And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.
 Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,
 And blow it to the source from whence it came:
 Thy very beams will dry those vapours up;
 For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,
 And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her;
 If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
 Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advèrtis'd by our loving friends,
 That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury;
 We, having now the best at Barnet field,
 Will thither straight, for willingness rids way;
 And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
 In every county as we go along.—
 Strike up the drum; cry—Courage! and away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen MARGARET, Prince EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
 What though the mast be now blown over-board,
 The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
 And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?
 Yet lives our pilot still: Is't meet, that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad,
 With tearful eyes add water to the sea,
 And give more strength to that, which hath too much;
 Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock,
 Which industry and courage might have sav'd?
 Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!
 Say, Warwick was our anchor; What of that?
 And Montague our top-mast; What of him?
 Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; What of these?
 Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
 And Somerset another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?
 And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
 For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
 We will not from the helm, to sit and weep;
 But keep our course, though the rough wind say—no,
 From shelves and rocks, that threaten us with wreck.
 As good to chide the waves, as speak them fair.
 And what is Edward, but a ruthless sea?
 What Clarence, but a quicksand of deceit?
 And Richard, but a ragged fatal rock?

All these the enemies to our poor bark.
 Say, you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while:
 Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:
 Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,
 Or else you famish, that's a threefold death.
 This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
 In case some one of you would fly from us,
 That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers,
 More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.
 Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
 'Twere childish weakness to lament, or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit
 Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,
 Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
 And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
 I speak not this, as doubting any here:
 For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
 He should have leave to go away betimes;
 Lest, in our need, he might infect another,
 And make him of like spirit to himself.

If any such be here, as God forbid!
 Let him depart, before we need his help.

Os. Women and children of so high a courage!
 And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.—
 O, brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
 Doth live again in thee; Long may'st thou live,
 To bear his image, and renew his glories!

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
 Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,

If he arise, he mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset;—sweet Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet bath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand, Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy, To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd, we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.

Oxf. Here pitch our battle, hence we will not budge.

March: Enter, at a distance, King EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your strength, Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire,

For, well I wot, ye blaze to burn them out:

Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say,

My tears gainsay: for every word I speak,

Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.

Therefore, no more but this:—Henry, your sovereign,

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,

His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain,

His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;

And yonder is the wolf, that makes this spoil.

You fight in justice: then, in God's name, lords,

Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both Armies.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the same.

Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a Retreat.

Then enter King EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces; with Queen MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle straight:

For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made,—that, who finds

Edward,

Shall have a high reward, and he his life!

Glo. It is: and, lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him

speak:

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose, that I am now my father's mouth;

Resign thy chair, and, where I stand, kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night;

His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

Suspicion ever haunts the guilty mind;

Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete, taught his son the office of a fool?
yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

Hes. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus;

Think'st thou I am an executioner?

Hes. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art;
ndering innocents be executing,
then thou art an executioner.

Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

Hes. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,
hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.

Hes. I prophesied,—that many a thousand,
h now mistrust no parcel of my fear;
any an old man's sigh, and many a widow's, any an orphan's water-standing eye,— or their sons, wives for their husbands' fate, aphans for their parents' timeless death,— rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

Hes. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this,
I forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.]

What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster idwife wonder'd; and the women cried,

: bless us, he is born with teeth!

no brother, I am like no brother:

And this word—love, which greybeards call divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me; I am myself alone.—
Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light;
But I will sort a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buz abroad such prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:
Clarence, thy turn is next; and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad, till I be best.—
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.

The same. A room in the Palace.

King EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne;
Queen ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and
Others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal
throne,
Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.

What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride?
Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions:
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son,
And two Northumberland; two bravo men
Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound:
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security.—
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy:—
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself,
Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repose the crown in peace;
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Glo. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back:—
Work thou the way,—and thou shalt execute.

[Aside.]
K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloster, love my lovely
queen;

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty, that I owe unto your majesty,
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit:—
To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master;
And cried—all hail! when as he meant—
all harm. [Aside.]

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace, and brothers' loves.

Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the king of Franca
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.

And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befit the pleasures of the court?—
Sound, drums and trumpets!—farewell, sour annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy. [Exeunt.]

Lord Mayor of London. Sheriff of Wiltshire.

ELIZABETH, queen of king Edward IV.
MARGARET, widow of king Henry VI.
Duchess of YORK, mother to king Edward IV. Clarence, and Gloster.
Lady ANNE, widow of Edward prince of Wales, son to king Henry VI.; afterwards married to the Duke of Gloster.
A young Daughter of Clarence.

Lords, and other Attendants; two Gentlemen, a Pursuivant, Scrivener, Citizens, Murderers, Messengers, Ghosts, Soldiers, &c.

Scene,—England.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. A street.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that low'r'd upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarms chang'd to merry meetings;
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now,—instead of mounting harbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,—
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I,—that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable,
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;—
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time;
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,
And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore,—since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,—
I am determin'd to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence, and the king,
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And, if king Edward be as true and just,

As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up;
About a prophecy, which says—that G.
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul! here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.
Brother, good day: What means this armed guard,
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.
Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is—George.
Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours;
He should, for that, commit your godfathers:—
O, helike, his majesty hath some intent,
That you shall be new christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for, I protest,
As yet I do not: But, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies, and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says—a wizard told him, that by G
His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought, that I am he:
These, as I learn, and such like toys as these,
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women:—
'Tis not the king, that sends you to the Tower;
My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she,
That tempers him to this extremity.
Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her brother there,
That made him send lord Hastings to the Tower;
From whence this present day he is deliver'd!
We are not safe, Clarence, we are not safe.

RICHARD III.

Act 4. Sc. 3.

Published by W. Pickering 57, Chancery Lane 1824.

Clor. By heaven, I think, there is no man secure,
But the queen's kindred, and night-walking heralds
That trudge betwixt the king and mistress Shore.
Hear'd you not, what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.
I'll tell you what,—I think, it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her men, and wear her livery:
The jealous o'er-worn widow, and herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentlewomen,
Are mighty gossips in this monarchy.

Brat. I beseech your graces both to pardon me;
His majesty hath straitly given in charge,
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with his brother.

Glo. Even so I please your worship, Brakenbury,

You may partake of any thing we say:
We speak no treason, man;—We say, the king
Is wise, and virtuous; and his noble queen
Well struck in years; fair, and not jealous:—
We say, that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip,
A honey eye, a passing pleasing tongue;
And the queen's kindred are made gentlefolks:
How say you, sir? can you deny all this?

Brat. With this, my lord, myself have nought
to do.

Glo. Naught to do with mistress Shore? I tell thee, fellow,
He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brat. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave:—Would'st thou betray me?

Brat. I beseech your grace to pardon me; and,
withal,

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clor. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen's abjects, and must obey.
Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in,—
Were it, to call king Edward's widow—sister,—
I will perform it, to enfranchise you.

Mean time, this deep disgrace in brotherhood,
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clor. I know, it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;
I will deliver you, or else lie for you:
Mean time have patience.

Clor. I must perforce; farewell.

[Exeunt Clarence, Brakenbury, and Guard.
Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return,
Simple, plain Clarence!—I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands.
But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings?

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain!
Well are you welcome to this open air.

How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must:
But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks,
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;
For they, that were your enemies, are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him, as you.

Hast. More pity, that the eagle should be mew'd,
While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at home;—
The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad indeed.
O, he hath kept an evil diet long,
And ever-much consum'd his royal person;
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit Hastings.]

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die,
Till George be pack'd with posthorse up to heaven.
I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;
And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, God take king Edward to his mercy,
And leave the world for me to bustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter:
What though I kill'd her husband, and her father?
The readiest way to make the wench amends,
Is—to become her husband, and her father:
The which will I; not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market:
Clarence still breathes; and Edward still lives, and reigns;

When they are gone, then must I count my gain.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. Another street.

Enter the corpse of King HENRY the Sixth, borne in an open coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberds, to guard it; and Lady ANNE as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,—
If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,—
Whilst I a while obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.—
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Stabb'd by the self-same hand, that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows, that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes:—
O, cursed be the hand, that made these holes!
Cursed the heart, that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood, that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be heir to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Than I am made by my young lord, and thee!—
Come, now, towards Chertsey with your holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And, still as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, while I lament king Henry's corse.
[The Bearers take up the corpse, and advance.]

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Stay you, that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,

I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

I Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I command:

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the coffin.]

Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.—
Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell!

Thou had'st but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have; therefore, begone.

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep exclams.
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries:—
O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds,
Open their congeal'd mouths, and bleed afresh!—
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 'tis thy presence, that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells;
Thy deed, inhuman, and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.—
O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death!
Either, heaven, with lightning strike the murderer
dead,

Or, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick;
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.
Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man:

No beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pity.
Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!
Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so angry.—
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Foulter than heart can think thee, thou caust make

No excuse current, but to hang thyself.
Glo. By such despair, I should accuse myself.

Anne. And, by despairing, shalt thou stand excus'd;

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo. Say, that I slew them not.
Anne. Why then, they are not dead:

But dead they are, and devilish slave, by thee.
Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.
Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne. In thy soul's throat thou liest; queen
Margaret saw

Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,
But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dreamt on aught but butcheries:
Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo. I grant ye.
Anne. Dost grant me, hedge-hog? then, God
grant me too,

Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed!
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous.

Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven that hath him.
Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him
thither;

For he was fitter for that place, than earth.
Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.

Anne. Some dungeon.
Glo. Your bed-chamber.

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
Anne. I hope so.

Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,—
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method;—
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry, and Edward,
As baneful as the executioner?

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most affect.

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect.
Your beauty, which did haunt me in my sleep
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, honest
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheek.
Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck;

You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.

Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and thy life!

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on
Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband
Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the Glo. He lives, that loves you better than his Anne. Name him.

Glo. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why, that's
Glo. The self-same name, but one of better
Anne. Where is he?

Glo. Here: [She spits at him.]
dost thou spit at me?

Anne. 'Would it were mortal poison, for thy
Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a
Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eye

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected Anne. 'Would they were basilisks, to stri-
dead!

Glo. I would they were, that I might die a
For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish
These eyes, which never shed remorseful
Not, when my father York and Edward we
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
Told the sad story of my father's death;

And twenty times made pause, to sob, and
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad
My many eyes did score an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not thence Thy beauty hath, and made them blind
weeping.

I never su'd to friend, nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet soothing
But now thy beauty is propos'd my foe,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue
speak.

[She looks scornfully.]
Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was in
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword
Which if thou please to hide in this true
And let the soul forth that adorns thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knees.

[He lays his breast open; she offers at his sword.]

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Hen
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch; 'twas I that stabb'd
Edward;— [*She again offers at his
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on*]

[She lets fall the]

Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler; though I wish thy
I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will Anne. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy Speak it again, and, even with the word,
This hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy ll, for thy love, kill a far truer love;

both their deaths shalt thou be necessary.
an. I would, I knew thy heart.

Is. 'Tis figur'd in
tongue.
an. I fear me, both are false.
Is. Then man
a never true.

an. Well, well, put up your sword.
Is. Say then, my peace is made.

an. That shall you know after.
Is. But shall I live in hope?

an. All men,
pe, live so.
Is. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
an. To take, is not to give.

[She puts on the ring.]
Is. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger, so thy breast enclareth my poor heart;
and both of them, for both of them are thine.
if thy poor devoted servant may beg one favour at thy gracious hand, most confirm his happiness for ever.

an. What is it?
Is. That it may please you leave these sad designs

an. That hath more cause to be a mourner, presently repair to Crosby-place:
re—after I have solemnly interr'd,
Chertsey monast'ry this noble king,
wet his grave with my repentant tears,—
I with all expedient duty see you:
I know unknown reasons, I beseech you,
I know this boon.

an. With all my heart; and much it joys me too,
if you are become so penitent.—
Is. And Berkley, go along with me.
an. Bid me farewell.

Is. 'Tis more than you deserve:
since you teach me how to flatter you,
as I have said farewell already.

[Exit Lady Anne, Tresselt, and Berkley.]
Take up the corpse, sirs.

Is. Towards Chertsey, noble lord?
No, to White-Friars; there attend my crowning. [Exit the rest, with the corpse.]

an. Every woman in this humour woo'd?
Every woman in this humour won?
I see her,—but I will not keep her long.

Is. I, that kill'd her husband, and his father, see her in her heart's extremest hate:
curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes, weeping witness of her hatred by;
God, her conscience, and these bars against
me,

no friends to back my suit withal,
a plain devil, and dissembling looks,
it to win her,—all the world to nothing!

an. He forgot already that brave prince,
I, her lord, whom I some three months since,
I in my angry mood at Tewksbury?

an. A lover and a gentleman,— in the prodigality of nature, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,— such a world cannot again afford:

an. Will she yet abase her eyes on me, opp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
to bid her widow to a woful bed?

an. Whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
that halt, and am mishapen thus?
an. Whom to a beggarly denier, an. I stake my person all this while:

my life, she finds, although I cannot,
to be a marvellous proper man.

an. It charges for a looking-glass;
to obtain a score or two of tailors,
my fashions to adorn my body:

an. I am crept in favour with myself, to maintain it with some little cost.
an. It, I'll turn you' fellow in his grave;
an. I return lamenting to my love.—

an. It, fair sun, till I have bought a glass, may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. A room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and Lord GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt, his majesty
Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse:

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words:
Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of
me?

Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,

To be your comforter, when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young; and his minority
Is put into the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man, that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded, he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet:
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace!
Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord of Stanley,

To your good prayer will scarcely say—amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, he you, good lord, assur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,

Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds
From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now, the duke of Buckingham, and I,
Are come from visiting his majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atonement
Between the duke of Gloster and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. 'Would all were well!—But that will never be;—

I fear, our happiness is at the height.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure
it:—

Who are they, that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such dissensions rumours.

Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.

Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple-truth must be abus'd
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor grace.
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong?—
Or thee!—or thee!—or any of your faction?

A plague upon you all! His royal grace,—
Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—
Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brether of Gloster, you mistake the matter:
The king, of his own royal disposition,

And not provok'd by any suitor else;
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself,
Against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell;—The world is grown so bad,
That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch;
Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning,
brother Gloster;

You envy my advancement, and my friends;
God grant, we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while great promotions
Are daily given, to enoble those That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him, that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd,
I never did incense his majesty
Against the duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the cause
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for—

Glo. She may, lord Rivers?—why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments;
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a king,
A bachelor, a handsome stripling too:
I wis, your grandam had a worse match.

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long borne
Your blunt upbraidings, and your bitter scoffs:
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty
Of those gross taunts I often have endur'd.
I had rather be a country servant-maid,
Than a great queen, with this condition—
To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter Queen MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech thee!

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What! threaten you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said

I will avouch in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'Tis time to speak, my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well:
Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband
king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends;
To royalize his blood, I spilt mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his,
or thine.

Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband
Grey,

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;—

And, Rivers, so were you:—Was not your husband in Margaret's battle at Saint Albans slain!

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,
What you have been ere now, and what you are;
Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murd'rous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father Warwick,
Ay, and forswore himself,—Which Jesu pardon!—

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the
And, for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd
I would to God, my heart were flint, like Edw-
Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine;
I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and this world,

Thou cacodæmon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My lord of Gloster, in those busy da-
Which here you urge, to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king.

So should we you, if you should be our kin-
Glo. If I should be?—I had rather be a Far be it from my heart, the thought there-
Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you su-
You should enjoy, were you this country's

Mar. Richard!

Ha?

Mar. I call thee not.
 I cry thee mercy then; for I did think,
 thou had'st call'd me all these bitter names.
Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.
 I me make the period to my curse.
 'Tis done by me; and ends in—Margaret.
Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself.

Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!
 strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
 so deadly web ensnareth thee about?
 fool! thou whett'st a knife to kill thyself.
 ay will come, that thou shalt wish for me to thy harm, thou move our patience.

Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty.

Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty.

me to be your queen, and you my subjects: serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.

Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.

Mar. Peace, master marquis, you are malapert:
 fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current:
 a your young nobility could judge,
 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

that stand high, have many blasts to shake them;

if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.
 Good counsel, marry;—learn it, learn it, marquis.

It touches you, my lord, as much as me.
 Ay, and much more: But I was born so high,
 ery buildeth in the cedar's top,
 allies with the wind, and scorns the sun.

Mar. And turns the sun to shade;—alas! alas!—
 as my son, now in the shade of death;

bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
 a eternal darkness folded up.

siery buildeth in our airy's nest:—
 t, that see'st it, do not suffer it;

vas won with blood, lost be it so!

t. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity.
Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me;

fitably with me have you dealt,
 amefully by you my hopes are butcher'd.

arity is outrage, life my shame,— my shame still live my sorrow's rage!

t. Have done, have done.

Mar. O princely Buckingham, I kiss thy hand, of league and amity with thee:

air befall thee, and thy noble house!
 ornaments are not spotted with our blood,
 on within the compass of my curse.

t. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
 e of those that breathe them in the air.

Mar. I'll not believe but they ascend the sky, are awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.

O Buckingham, beware of yonder dog;
 Look, when he fawns, he bites; and, when he bites,
 His venom tooth will rankle to the death:
 Have not to do with him, beware of him;
 Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks on him;
 And all their ministers attend on him.

Glo. What doth she say, my lord of Buckingham?
Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel?

And sooth the devil, that I warn thee from?
 O, but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow;
 And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess.—

Live each of you the subjects to his hate,
 And he to yours, and all of you to God's! [Exit.]

Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.
Riv. And so doth mine; I muse, why she's at liberty.

Glo. I cannot blame her, by God's holy mother;
 She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
 My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.
Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.

I was too hot to do some body good,
 That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;
 He is frank'd up to fattening for his pains;—

God pardon them, that are the cause thereof!
Riv. A virtuous and a christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done death to us.
Glo. So do I ever, being well advis'd;—

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself. [Aside.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you,—
 And for your grace,—and you, my noble lords.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come:—Lords, will you go with me?

Riv. Madam, we will attend upon your grace.
 [Exeunt all but Gloster.]

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
 The secret mischiefs, that I set abroad,
 I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have laid in darkness,—
 I do beweepe with many simple gulls;

Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
 And tell them—'tis the queen and her allies,
 That stir the king against the duke my brother.

Now they believe it; and withal whet me
 To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:

But then I sigh, and with a piece of scripture,
 Tell them—that God bids us do good for evil:

And thus I clothe my naked villany
 With old odd ends, stol'n forth of holy writ;
 And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft, here come my executioners.—
 How now, my hardy, stout, resolved mates?

Are you now going to despatch this thing?
 I Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is.
Glo. Well thought upon, I have it here about me:

[Gives the warrant.]
 When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution.
 Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,
 May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

I Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to
 prate,

Talkers are no good doers; be assur'd,
 We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.

Glo. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools'
 eyes drop tears:

I like you, lads;—about your business straight;
 Go, go, despatch.

I Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A room in the Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,
That, as I am a christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days;
So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methought, that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;
And, in my company, my brother Gloucester;
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk
Upon the hatches; thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster
That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches
Methought, that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling,
Struck me, that thought to stay him, over-board,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.

O Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought, I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
A thousand men, that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea,
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 'twere in scorn of eyes), reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death,
To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought, I had; and often did I strive
To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood
Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth
To seek the empty, vast, and wand'ring air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to heich it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?
Clar. O, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;
O, then began the tempest to my soul!

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who cry'd aloud,—*What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?*

And so he vanish'd: Then came wand'ring by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,—
*Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,—
That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;—
Seize on him, furies, take him to your torments!*—

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that with the very noise
I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,
Could not believe, but that I was in hell;
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you;
I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O, Brakenbury, I have done these things,—
That now give evidence against my soul,—
For Edward's sake; and, see, how he requites me!—
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:

O, spare my guiltless wife, and my poor children!—
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord; God give your grace good rest!— [Clarence reposes himself on a chair.]

Sorrow breaks seasons, and reposing hours;
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide night.
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho! who's here?
Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

2 Murd. O, sir, 'tis better to be brief than tedious.
Let him see our commission; talk no more.

[A paper is delivered to Brakenbury, who reads.]

Brak. I am, in this, companded to deliver
The noble duke of Clarence to your hands.—
I will not reason what is meant hereby.
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
Here are the keys; there sits the duke asleep.
I'll to the king; and signify to him,
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of view
Fare you well. [Exit Brakenbury.]

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he 1 Murd. No; he'll say, 'twas done even when he wakes.

2 Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he'll never wake until the great judgment day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say, we stabb'd sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word, judgment, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What? art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a war it; but to be damn'd for killing him, for which no warrant can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought, thou hadst been reassured
2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloucester tell him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I pry'thee, stay a little:
this holy humour of mine will change; it will hold me but while one would tell twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. 'Faith, some certain drops of coward are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when thou dost.

2 Murd. Come, he dies; I had forgot the
1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. In the duke of Gloucester's purse.

1 Murd. So, when he opens his purse to our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there or none, will entertain it.

1 Murd. What, if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it, it is a de-thing, it makes a man a coward; it is a man steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot but it checks him; a man cannot lie neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'Tis ing shame-faced spirit, that mutinies in bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it once restore a purse of gold, that by-found; it beggars any man that keeps it; turned out of all towns and cities for a de-thing; and every man, that means to live endeavours to trust to himself, and live free.

1 Murd. 'Zounds, it is even now at my persuading me not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and him not: he would insinuate with thee, make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd, he cannot
with me.

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow, that his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 Murd. Take him over the costard with of thy sword, and then throw him into the butt, in the next room.

2 Murd. O excellent device! and make
him.

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike.

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me wine.

1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

rd. A man, as you are.

But not, as I am, royal.

rd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are lamblike.

rd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak!

How dost thou menace me: Why look you pale?

What dost thou hither? Wherefore do you come?

Murd. To, to, to,—

To murder me?

Murd. Ay, ay.

You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,
therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

o, my friends, have I offended you?

d. Offended us you have not, but the king.

I shall be reconcil'd to him again.

d. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Are you call'd forth from out a world of sin,

the innocent? What is my offence?

is the evidence that doth accuse me?

awful quest have given their verdict up a frowning judge? or who pronounc'd er sentence of poor Clarence' death?

be convict by course of law,

den me with death is most unlawful.

you, as you hope for any goodness,

st's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

depart, and lay no hands on me;

d you undertake is damnable.

d. What we will do, we do upon command.

d. And he, that hath commanded, is our leg.

Erroneous vassal! the great King of kings

the table of his law commanded,

o shalt do no murder; Wilt thou then his edict, and fulfill a man's?

d; for he holds vengeance in his hand,

upon their heads that break his law.

d. And that same vengeance doth he hurl
thee,

forswearing, and for murder too;

at receive the sacrament, to fight

d of the house of Lancaster.

d. And, like a traitor to the name of God,

ak that vow; and with thy treacherous de

at the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

d. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and end.

d. How canst thou urge God's dreadful to us,

ou hast broke it in such dear degree?

alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?

rd, for my brother, for his sake;

you not to murder me for this;

at sin he is as deep as I.

ill be avenged for the deed,

you, that he doth it publicly;

the quarrel from his powerful arm;

no indirect nor lawless course,

those that have offended him.

. Who made thee then a bloody minister,

llant-springing, brave Plantagenet,

ely novice, was struck dead by thee?

y brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault, s hither now to slaughter thee.

you do love my brother, hate not me;

rother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed, go back again,
And I will send you to my brother Gloster;
Who shall reward you better for my life,
Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloster hates you.

Clar. O, no; he loves me, and he holds me dear:
Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father
York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,
He little thought of this divided friendship:
Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow in harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself;

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,
And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,
That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you
From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die,
my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul,
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,
That thou wilt war with God by murdering
me?—

Ah, sirs, consider, he, that set you on
To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish.—

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,

Being pent from liberty, as I am now,—

If two such murderers as yourselves came to
you,—

Would not entreat for life?—

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;

O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,

As you would beg, were you in my distress.

A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that; if all this will not do,

[Stabs him.

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

[Exit, with the body.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands

Of this most grievous guilty murder done!

Re-enter first Murderer.

1 Murd. How now? what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

2 Murd. I would he knew, that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;

For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.

1 Murd. So do not I; go, coward, as thou art.—

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole;

Till that the duke give order for his burial:

And when I have my meed, I will away;

For this will out, and then I must not stay. [Exit.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

the same. A room in the Palace.

Enter EDWARD, (led in sick,) Queen ELI-
H, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS,
NGHAM, GREY, and Others.

Why, so!—now have I done a good work;—

continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;

And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Rivers, and Hastings, take each other's hand;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!
K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before your king;
 Lest he, that is the supreme King of kings,
 Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
 Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!
Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!
K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt in this,— Nor your son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
 You have been factious one against the other.
 Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
 And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings;—I will never more remember

Our former hatred, So thrive I, and mine!
K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him,—Hastings, love lord marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
 Upon my part, shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces Dorset.]
K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
 And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate Upon your grace, [To the Queen.] but with all duteous love

Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me
 With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend,
 And most assured that he is a friend,
 Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
 Be he unto me! this do I beg of heaven,
 When I am cold in love, to you, or yours.

[Embracing Rivers, &c.]
K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,
 Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
 There waiteth now our brother Gloucester here,
 To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good-morrow to my sovereign king, and
 queen;

And, princely peers, a happy time of day!
K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day:—

Brother, we have done deeds of charity;
 Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
 Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign liege.—
 Among this princely heap, if any here,
 By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
 Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
 Have aught committed that is hardly borne
 By any in this presence, I desire
 To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me, to be at enmity;
 I hate it, and desire all good men's love.—
 First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
 Which I will purchase with my duteous service;—

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
 If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;—
 Of you, lord Rivers,—and lord Grey, of you,—
 That all without desert have frown'd on me;

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
 I do not know that Englishman alive,
 With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
 More than the infant that is born to-night;

I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holyday shall this be kept hereafter:—
 I would to God, all strifes were well compounded.—
 My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
 To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
 To be so flouted in this royal presence?
 Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead?

[They all start.]
 You do him injury, to scorn his corpse.

K. Edw. Who knows not, he is dead! who knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!
Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence,

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.
K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was
Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order
 And that a winged Mercury did bear;
 Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
 That came too lag to see him buried:—
 God grant, that some, less noble, and less Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood
 Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence
 And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service
K. Edw. I pry'thee, peace; my soul is full Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness
K. Edw. Then say at once, what is it thou
Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my service
 Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman,
 Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my
 death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave
 My brother kill'd no man, his fault was
 And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who sued to me for him? who, in my way
 Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advised
 Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of
 Who told me, how the poor soul did die for
 The mighty Warwick, and did fight with Poor Clarence!

[*Exit King, Queen, Hastings

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness!—M
 not,

How that the guilty kindred of the queen
 Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence
 O! they did urge it still unto the king:
 God will revenge it. Come, lords; will Buck. We wait upon your grace.

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter the Duchess of YORK, with a S Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father
Duch. No, boy.

Dough. Why do you weep so oft? and

And cry—O Clarence, my unhappy son!
Son. Why do you look on us, and shake y
 And call us—orphans, wretches, cast-aw
 If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake
 I do lament the sickness of the king,
 As loath to lose him, not your father's do the king, provok'd to't by the queen, impeachments to imprison him :

on my uncle told me so, he wept,
and me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek ;
rely on him, as on my father,
would love me dearly as his child.

Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle

Ay, boy.

cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this ?

Enter ELIZABETH, distractedly; RIVERS, and DORSET, following her.

Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and weep?

my fortune, and torment myself?
with black despair against my soul,
myself become an enemy.

What means this scene of rude impatience ?

To make an act of tragick violence :—
my lord, thy son, our king, is dead.—
we the branches, when the root is gone?
her not the leaves, that want their sap ?

Ill live, lament; if die, be brief;
swift-winged souls may catch the king's;
obedient subjects, follow him
in kingdom of perpetual rest.

Oh, so-much interest have I in thy sorrow,
title in thy noble husband!

wept a worthy husband's death,
by looking on his images :

two mirrors of his princely semblance
'd in pieces by malignant death;
comfort have but one false glass,
yes me when I see my shame in him.

a widow; yet thou art a mother,
the comfort of thy children left thee:
hath snatch'd my husband from my arms, and Edward. O, what cause have I, ag but a moiety of my grief,

thy plaints, and drown thy cries ?
sunt! you wept not for our father's death;
we aid you with our kindred tears ?

Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd,
w-dolour likewise be unwept!

Give me no help in lamentation, sareen to bring forth laments :

reduce their currents to mine eyes,
ing govern'd by the watry moon,
orth plentiful tears to drown the world!

husband, for my dear lord Edward!
for our father, for our dear lord Clarence!

las, for both, both mine, Edward and ence!

What stay had I, but Edward? and gone.

What stay had we, but Clarence? and he's gone.

What stay had I, but they? and they are gone.

Was never widow, had so dear a loss.
ere never orphans, had so dear a loss.

as never mother, had so dear a loss.
the mother of these griefs;

are parcel'd, mine are general.
Edward weeps, and so do I;

rence weep, so doth not she:
s for Clarence weep, and so do I;

dward weep, so do not they :—
three, on me, threefold distress'd, ar tears, I am your sorrow's nurse,

pamper it with lamentations.

ndort, dear mother; God is much dis-
d,

the with unthankfulness his doing :
worldly things, 'tis call'd—ungrateful,

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more, to be thus opposite with heaven,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,
Of the young prince your son : send straight for him,
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives :
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY,
HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and Others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing them.—
Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not see your grace :—Humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness in thy breast,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!
Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man!—
That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing; [Aside.
I marvel, that her grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing peers,

That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love :

Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.

The broken rancour of your high-sworn hearts,
But lately splinted, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept :

Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fetch'd
Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet un govern'd:

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,

As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope, the king made peace with all of us;
And the compact is firm, and true, in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,

Which, haply, by much company might be urg'd :
Therefore I say, with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam,—and you my mother,—will you go
To give your censures in this weighty business?

[Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloster.
Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home :

For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet!—My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.

Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The same. A street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour : Whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:
Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; the king's dead.
2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:
I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!
1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Dost the news hold of good king Edward's death?

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help, the while!

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

3 Cit. Wee to that land, that's govern'd by a child!

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government;

That, in his nonage, council under him,

And, in his full and ripen'd years, himself,

No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern well.

1 Cit. So stood the state, when Henry the sixth

Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

3 Cit. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends,

God wot;

For then this land was famously enrich'd

With politick grave counsel; then the king

Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.

1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

3 Cit. Better it were, they all came by his father;

Or, by his father, there were none at all;

For emulation now, who shall be nearest,

Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.

O, full of danger is the duke of Gloster;

And the queen's sons, and brothers, haught and proud:

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

This sickly land might solace as before.

1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand;

When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

Untimely storms make men expect a dearth:

All may be well; but, if God sort it so,

'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:

You cannot reason almost with a man

That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so:

By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust

Ensuing danger; as, by proof, we see

The water swell before a boist'rous storm.

But leave it all to God. Whither away?

2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 Cit. And so was I; I'll bear you company.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of YORK, the young Duke of YORK, Queen ELIZABETH, and the Duchess of YORK.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-Stratford;

And at Northampton they do rest to-night:

To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the prince;

I hope, he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no; they say, my son of York

Hath almost overtaken him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin? it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow

More than my brother; Ay, quoth my uncle Gloster,

Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace:

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast,

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. A street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of WALES, GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, Cardinal BOURCHIER, and Others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thou

God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

My lord, the mayor of London comes to meet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his Train.

God bless your grace with health and appy days!

My lord, I thank you, good my lord;—and thank you all.— [Exeunt Mayor, &c.

long ere this have met us on the way:—
at a slug is Hastings! that he comes not

Enter HASTINGS.

And, in good time, here comes the sweating

My lord: What, will you other come?

On what occasion, God he knows, not I, an your mother, and your brother York, ken sanctuary: The tender prince fain have come with me to meet your grace, his mother was perforce withheld.

Fie! what an indirect and peevish course of hers!—Lord cardinal, will your grace
e the queen to send the duke of York
e princely brother presently?

My lord Hastings, go with him,
in her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for

My lord Hastings, will you go with me?
I go, my lord.

Good lords, make all the speedy haste

He did, my gracious lord, begin that place;

Is it upon record? or else reported

What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long.
Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity,
I moralize two meanings in one word. [Aside.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous man;
With what his valour did enrich his wit,
His wit set down, to make his valour live:
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror;
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.—
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. Short summers lightly have a forward spring.
[Aside.

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and the Cardinal.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother; to our grief, as it is yours:
Too late he died, that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said, that idle weeds are fast in growth:
The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle?
Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then is he more beholden to you, than I.

Glo. He may command me, as my sovereign;
But you have power in me, as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, then, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift? O, that's the sword to it.

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts;
In weightier things you'll say a beggar, nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glo. How?

York. Little.

Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in talk;—

Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me:
Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me;

Because that I am little, like an ape,
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!
To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himself:
So cunning, and so young, is wonderful.

Glo. My gracious lord, will't please you pass along?

Myself, and my good cousin Buckingham,
Will to your mother; to entreat of her,
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, sir, what should you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry ghost;
My grandam told me, he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.
But come, my lord, and, with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[Exeunt Prince, York, Hastings, Cardinal,
and Attendants.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York
Was not incensed by his subtle mother,
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a parlous boy;
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable;

He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest.—
Come hither, gentle Catesby; thou art sworn
As deeply to effect what we intend,
As closely to conceal what we impart;
Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way;—
What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter
To make William lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke
In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,
That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: Go, gentle
Catesby,

And, as it were far off, sound thou lord Hastings,
Hew he doth stand affected to our purpose;
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,
To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too; and so break off the talk,
And give us notice of his inclination:
For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.

Glo. Commend me to lord William: tell him,
Catesby,

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle;
And bid my friend, for joy of this good news,
Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.
Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both.

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glo. Chop off his head, man;—somewhat we will do:—

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables
Whereof the king my brother was possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.
Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes; that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Before Lord Hastings' house.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. One from lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.

Which may make you and him to rue at the other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure,—

If presently you will take horse with him,

And with all speed post with him toward the north,

To shun the danger that bis soul divines.

Bid him not fear the separated councils:

And, at the other, is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed, that toucheth us,

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.

Tell him, his fears are shallow, wanting instance:

And for his dreams—I wonder, he's so fond
To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers:

now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?
 2. The better, that your lordship please to ask.
 3. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now, when thou met'st me last, where now we meet:
 was I going prisoner to the Tower,
 at suggestion of the queen's allies;
 now, I tell thee, (keep it to thyself,) lay those enemies are put to death, in better state than ere I was.
 4. God hold it, to your honour's good content!
 5. Gramercy, fellow: There, drink that for me.
 [Throwing him his purse.]
 7. I thank your honour. [Exit Pursuivant.]

Enter a Priest.

22. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.
 1. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my heart.
 a year debt for your last exercise;
 the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

2. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?
 friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest;
 honour hath no shriving work in hand.
 3. Good faith, and when I met this holy man, when you talk'd of came into my mind.
 4. go you toward the Tower?
 5. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there:
 return before your lordship thence.
 6. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.
 7. And supper too, although thou know'st it not. [Aside.]
 will you go?
 I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Pomfret. Before the Castle.

RATCLIFF, with a Guard, conducting RICHARDS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to execution.

Come, bring forth the prisoners.
 Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this,— shalt thou behold a subject die,
 ah, for duty, and for loyalty.
 God keep the prince from all the pack of you!
 you are of damned blood-suckers.
 You live, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.
 Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.
 O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison, and ominous to noble peers!
 the guilty closure of thy walls
 the second here was hack'd to death:
 or more slander to thy dismal seat,
 'ere thee up our guiltless blood to drink.
 Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,
 she exclaim'd on Hastings, yon, and I,
 ending by, when Richard stabb'd her son.
 Then curs'd she Hastings, then curs'd she Buckingham,
 curs'd she Richard:—O, remember, God,
 her prayers for them, as now for us!
 my sister, and her princely sons,—
 O, dear God, with our true bloods,
 'as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt!
 Make haste, the hour of death is expiate.
 Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace:
 till, until we meet again in heaven. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

London. A room in the Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the DUKE of ELY, CATESBY, LOVEL, and others, sitting at a table: Officers of the council standing.

Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met to determine of the coronation:
 whose name, speak, when is the royal day?
 Are all things ready for that royal time?
 They are; and wants but nomination.
 To-morrow then I judge a happy day.
 Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?
 most inward with the noble duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.
 Buck. We know each other's faces: for our hearts,—

He knows no more of mine, than I of yours;
 Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine:
 Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.
 Hast. I thank his grace. I know he loves me well;
 But, for his purpose in the coronation,
 I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
 His gracious pleasure any way therein:
 But you, my noble lord, may name the time;
 And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
 Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOSTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.
 Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow:
 I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
 My absence doth neglect no great design,
 Which by my presence might have been concluded.
 Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,
 William lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part,—
 I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.
 Glo. Than my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder;
 His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.—
 My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,
 I saw good strawberries in your garden there;
 I do beseech you, send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart.
 [Exit Ely.]

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.
 [Takes him aside.]

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business;
 And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
 That he will lose his head, ere give consent,
 His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,
 Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile, I'll go with you. [Exit Gloster and Buckingham.]
 Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.
 To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
 For I myself am not so well provided,
 As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter the Bishop of ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord protector? I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning;

There's some conceit or other likes him well,
 When he doth bid good morrow with such spirit.
 I think, there's ne'er a man in Christendom,
 Can lesser hide his love, or hate, than he;
 For by his face straight shall you know his heart.
 Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face,
 By any likelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;
 For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve,
 That do conspire my death with devilish plots
 Of damned witchcraft; and that have prevail'd
 Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,
 Makes me most forward in this noble presence
 To doom the offenders: Whoso'er they be,
 I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil,
 Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm
 Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up:
 And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,
 Consorted with that harlot, strumpet Shore,
 That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord,—
 Glo. If! thou protector of this damned strumpet, Talk'st thou to me of ifs?—Thou art a traitor!—
 Off with his head!—now, by Saint Paul I swear,
 I will not dine until I see the same.—
 Lovel, and Catesby, look, that it be done;
 The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me:
 [Exit Council, with Glo. and Buck.]

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me;
 For I, too fond, might have prevented this:

Stanley did dream, the boar did raise his helm;
But I disdain'd it, and did scorn to fly.
Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,
And startled, when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O, now I want the priest that spake to me:
I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,
And I myself secure in grace and favour.
O, Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse
Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head.

Cate. Despatch, my lord, the duke would be at dinner;

Make a short shrift, he longs to see your head.
Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God?
Who builds his hope in air of your fair looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, despatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.
Hast. O, bloody Richard!—miserable England!
I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee,
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.—
Come, lead me to the block, bear him my head;
They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The same. The Tower walls.

Enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rusty armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour?

Murder thy breath in middle of a word,—
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou wert distraught, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;
Sneak, and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion: 'ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices,
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Let me alone to entertain him.—Lord mayor,—

Glo. Look to the draw-bridge there.

Buck. Hark, hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.
Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent for you,—

Glo. Look back, defend thee, here are enemies.
Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with Hastings's head.

Glo. Be patient, they are friends; Ratcliff, and Lovel.
Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.
I took him for the plainest, harmless creature,
That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue,
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,—
I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,—
He liv'd from all attainer of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor

That ever lived.—Look you, my lord mayor,
Would you imagine, or almost believe,
(Were't not, that by great preservation
We live to tell it you,) the subtle traitor
This day had plotted, in the council-house,
To murder me, and my good lord of Gloster?

May. What! had he so?
Glo. What! think you we are Turks, or infidels?
Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death;

But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England, and our persons' safety
Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;
And your good graces both have well prov'd:
T'warn false traitors from the like attempt,
I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with mistress Shore.

Buck. Yet had we not determined he should die,
Until your lordship came to see his end;
Which now the loving haste of these our friends
Somewhat against our meaning, hath prevent;
Because, my lord, we would have had you
The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treason:
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who, haply, may Misconstrue us in him, and wall his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace shall serve,

As well as I had seen, and heard him speak
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens

With all your just proceedings in this case.
Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship

To avoid the censures of the carping world.
Buck. But since you came too late of us,
Yet witness what you hear we did intend
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all
There, at your meetest vantage of the time
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen
Only for saying—he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed his brother,
Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust;
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughter
Even where his raging eye, or savage heat,
Without control, list'd to make his prey.

May. For a need, thus far come near my purpose
Tell them, when that my mother went with
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
My princely father, then had wars in France
And, by just computation of the time,
Found, that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father.
Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off.
Because, my lord, you know, my mother's Buck. Doubt not, my lord; I'll play the actor

As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's castle;

Where you shall find me well accompany'd
With reverend fathers, and well-learn'd teachers.

Buck. I go; and, towards three or four
Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

[Exit Buck

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to doctor Penker
Go thou [To Cate.] to friar Penker—bid them
Meet me, within this hour, at Baynard's castle.

[Exeunt Lovel and

Now will I in, to take some privy order
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight
And to give notice, that no manner of person
Have, any time, recourse unto the princes.

SCENE VI.

A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Hastings;

Which in a set hand fairly is engrass'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together:
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby it sent me
The precedent was full as long a doing:
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.

's a good world the while!—Who is so gross, cannot see this palpable device?
who so bold, but says—he sees it not?
is the world; and all will come to nought,
a such bad dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.

The same. Court of Baynard's Castle.

GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM, meeting.

How now, how now? what say the citizens?
Oh, now by the holy mother of our Lord, citizens are mum, say not a word.

Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Oh, I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,
his contract by deputy in France:

insatiate greediness of his desires,
his enforcement of the city wives;

ranny for trifles; his own bastardy,— dag got, your father then in France;

his resemblance, being not like the duke.
Al, I did infer your lineaments,—

the right idea of your father,
in your form and nobleness of mind:

open all your victories in Scotland, discipline in war, wisdom in peace,

bounty, virtue, fair humility;
and, left nothing, fitting for your purpose,
wh'd, or slightly handled, in discourse.

When my oratory grew to an end,
and them, that did love their country's good,
God save Richard, England's royal king!

And did they so?

Oh, no, so God help me, they spake not a word;
like dumb statues, or breathless stones,
on each other, and look'd deadly pale.

When I saw, I reprehended them;
wh'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence:
answer was,—the people were not us'd spoke to, but by the recorder.

He was urg'd to tell my tale again;— with the duke, thus hath the duke inferr'd;
nothing spoke in warrant from himself.

He had done, some followers of mine own,
at the end of the hall, hur'd up their caps,
and ten voices cried, God save king Richard!

Thus I took the vantage of those few,— ye, gentle citizens, and friends, quoth I;
cheerful applause, and cheerful shout,
your wisdom, and your love to Richard:
then here brake off, and came away.

What tongueless blocks were they; Would they not speak?

Not the mayor then, and his brethren, come?
The mayor is here at hand; intend some fear;

you spake with, but by mighty suit:
ask you get a prayer-book in your hand,
and between two churchmen, good my lord;
that ground I'll make a holy descent;
not easily won to our requests;

the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.
I go; And if you plead as well for them,
an say nay to thee for myself,
but we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor
cocks. [Exit Gloucester.]

the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

me, my lord: I dance attendance here;
the duke will not be spoke withal.—

Enter, from the Castle, CATESBY.

Catesby, what says your lord to my request?

He doth entreat your grace, my noble lord,
to him to-morrow, or next day:
within, with two right reverend fathers,
is bent to meditation;

no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
to him from his holy exercise.

Return, good Catesby, to the gracious duke;
myself, the mayor and aldermen,
designs, in matter of great moment,
importing than our general good,
to have some conference with his grace.

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight. [Exit.]

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an

Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation;

Not dallying with a brace of courtizans,
But meditating with two deep divines;

Not sleeping, to exgress his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul:

Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
Take on himself the sovereignty thereof:

But, sure, I fear, we shall ne'er win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his grace should say us nay!

Buck. I fear, he will: Here Catesby comes again;—

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of citizens to come to him,
His grace not being warn'd thereof before:

He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:

By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return and tell his grace.

[Exit Catesby.]

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis hard to draw them thence;
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOSTER, in a gallery above, between two

Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a christian prince,
To stay him from the fall of vanity:

Aud, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
True ornaments to know a holy man.—
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests;

And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion, and right christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I rather do beseech you pardon me,
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Neglect the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above,
And all good men of this ungentl'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence,
That seems disgracious in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; Would it might
please your grace,

On our entreaties, to amend your fault!

Glo. Else, wherefore breathe I in a christian land?

Buck. Know, then, it is your fault, that you resign
The supreme seat, the throne majestic,
The scepter'd office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune, and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock:

Whilst, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,
(Which here we waken to our country's good,)
The noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.

Which to recreate, we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land:
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively, from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just suit come I to move your grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fitteth my degree, or your condition:

If, not to answer,—you might haply think,
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded,

To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore,—to speak, and to avoid the first;
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,— Definitively thus I answer you.
Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert,
Unmeritable, shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,—
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me;
(And much I need to help you, if need were;)
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay what you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars,—
Which, God defend, that I should wring from him!
Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace;
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say, that Edward is your brother's son;
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife:
For first he was contract to lady Lucy,
Your mother lives a witness to his vow;
And afterwards by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the king of France.
These both put by, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of all his thoughts
To base declension and loath'd bigamy:
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our manners call—the prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity:
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing time,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat
Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this prayer
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful
Glo. Alas, why would you heap those cares
I am unfit for state and majesty:—
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as in love and zeal
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred
And equally, indeed, to all estates,—
Yet know, wher' you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king
But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house
And, in this resolution, here we leave you Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Citizens.]
Glo. Call them again, sweet prince, accept them
If you deny them, all the land will rue it.

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of Well, call them again; I am not made of
But penetrable to your kind-entreaties,

[Exit Citizens.]
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM, and the Cousin of Buckingham,—and sage, grave
Since you will huckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, wher' I will, or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal, or foul-faced reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquittance
From all the impure blots and stains thereof.
For God he knows, and you may partly see
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the Buck. Then I salute you with this royal Long live king Richard, England's worthy

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be Glo. Even when you please, since you've it so.

Buck. To-morrow then we will attend you
And so, most joyfully, we take our leave
Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again.

[To the]
Farewell, good cousin;—farewell, gentle

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, Queen ELIZABETH, Duchess of YORK, and Marquis of DORSET; on the other, ANNE Duchess of Gloucester, leading Lady MARGARET PLANTAGENET, Clarence's young daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet
Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince.—
Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither away?

Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all together:

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.—
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,

How doth the prince, and my young son

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hou
And I'll salute your grace of York as mo
And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.
Come, madam, you must straight to West

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen
Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder!

That my pent heart may have some scope

e I swoon with this dead-killing news.
 Desp'ful tidings! O unpleasing news!
 Be of good cheer:—Mother, how fares your grace?

lis. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone, and destruction dog thee at the heels;
 other's name is ominous to children:
 I wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
 ve with Richmond, from the reach of hell.
 e thee, hie thee from this slaughter-house,
 ou increase the number of the dead;
 take me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,—
 other, wife, nor England's counted queen.
 Full of wise care is this your counsel,
 madam:—

 all have letters from me to my son

 ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

 accursed womb, the bed of death;
 strice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
 unavoided eye is murderous!
 Come, madam, come; in all haste was sent.

 lis. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;
 l my humour, wish thyself no harm.
 t. No! why?—When he that is my husband
 now,

o me, as I follow'd Henry's corse; scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands,
 issued from my other angel husband,
 at dead saint, which then I weeping follow'd;

 No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

SCENE II.

A room of state in the Palace.

of Trumpets. RICHARD, as King upon throne; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a
 and Others.

ch. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Bucking-am,—

Buck. My gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice,

And thy assistance, is king Richard seated:—

But shall we wear these glories for a day?

Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch,
 To try if thou be current gold, indeed:—
 Young Edward lives;—Think now what I would speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned liege.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich.

O bitter consequence,

That Edward still should live,—true, noble prince!—

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull:—

Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead;

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes:

Say, have I thy consent, that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some breath, some little pause,
 dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this:

I will resolve your grace immediately. [Exit Buck.]

Cate. The king is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

[Aside.]

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools,

[Descends from his throne.]

And unrespective boys; none are for me,

That look into me with considerate eyes;—

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.

Boy,—

Page. My lord.

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting
 gold

Would tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman,

Whose humble means match not his haughty mind:

Gold were as good as twenty orators,

And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is—Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; Go, call him hither, boy.— [Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham

No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:

Hath he so long held out with me untir'd,

And stops he now for breath?—well, be it so.—

Enter STANLEY.

How now, lord Stanley? what's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,

The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled

To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,

That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;

I will take order for her keeping close.

Enquire me out some mean-born gentleman,

Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter:—

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.—

Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out,

That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:

About it; for it stands me much upon,

To stop all hopes, whose growth may damage me.— [Exit Catesby.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter,

Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:—

Murder her brothers, and then marry her!

Uncertain way of gain! But I am in

So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin.—

Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.—

Re-enter Page with TYRREL.

Is thy name—Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it; two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers, Are they, that I would have thee deal upon: Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them. And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet musick. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel;

Go, by this token:—Rise, and lend thine ear:
[Whispers.]

There is no more but so:—Say, it is done, And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.]

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:—Well, look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise, For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd; The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables, Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the sixth Did prophesy, that Richmond should be king,

When Richmond was a little peevish boy. A king!—perhaps—

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Exeter, The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle, And call'd it—Rouge-mont: at which name I started; Because a bard of Ireland told me once, I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock? I am thus hold To put your grace in mind of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what is't o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke Of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike? K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whe'r you will or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein. [Exeunt King Richard and Train.]

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service With such contempt? made I him king for this?

O, let me think on Hastings; and he gone To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;

The most arch deed of piteous massacre, That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton, and Forrest, whom I did unborn To do this piece of ruthless butchery,

Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs, Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,

Wept like two children, in their death's sad story. O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes,—

Thus, thus, quoth Forrest, girdling one another Within their alabaster innocent arms:

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk, Which, in their summer beauty, kiss'd each other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay; Which once, quoth Forrest, almost chang'd my mind;

But, O, the devil!—there the villain stopp'd; When Dighton thus told on,—we smothered

The most repentish sweet work of nature, That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd. Hence both are gone with conscience and regret. They could not speak; and so I left them to bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Enter King RICHARD.

And here he comes:—All health, my sovereign!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel! am I happy in thy

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in Beget your happiness, be happy then, For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after! When thou shalt tell the process of their death.

Mean time, but think how I may do these good And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell, till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pen'd up. His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage.

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom. And Anne my wife hath bid the world good.

Now, for I know the Bretagne Richmond a At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter

And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown. To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. My lord,—

K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou canst so bluntly?

Cate. Bad news, my lord: Morton is dead.

Richard; And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Wel

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strag

Come,—I have learn'd, that fearful comies Is leaden servitor to dull delay;

Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary. Then fiery expedition be my wing, Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king! Go, muster men: My counsel is my shield.

We must be brief, when traitors brave the crown. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Queen MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to melt And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines slyly have I lurk'd, To watch the waning of mine enemies.

A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France; hoping, the consequence

Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical. Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret! who com

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and the Duchess YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender

My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets

If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,

And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,

Hover about me with your airy wings,

And hear your mother's lamentation!

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right fit

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and dumb.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quill Plantagenet

 ammanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,
 And left thee but a very prey to time;
 Having no more but thought of what thou wert,
 To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
 Thou didst usurp my place, And dost thou not Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?
 Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;
 From which eveo here I slip my wearied head,
 And leave the burden of it all on thee.
 Farewell, York's wife,—and queen of sad mis-chance,—

These English woes shall make me smile in France.
Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay a while,
 And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast
 the day;

Compare dead happiness with living woe;
 Think, that thy babes were fairer than they were,
 And he, that slew them, fouler than he is:
 Bettering thy loss makes the bad-causer worse;
 Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull, O, quicken them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit Q. Margaret.]

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?
Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,
 Airy successors of intestate joys,

Poor breathing orators of miseries!
 Let them have scope: though what they do impart
 Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-ty'd: go with me,
 And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
 My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

[Drum within.]

I hear his drum,—be copious in exclams.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition?
Duch. O, she, that might have intercepted thee,
 By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
 From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden
 crown,

Where should be branded, if that right were right,
 The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
 And the dire death of my poor sons, and brothers?
 Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my children?

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?
Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan,
 Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings?
K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets!—strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
 Rail on the Lord's anointed: Strike, I say.—

[Flourish. Alarums.]

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
 Or with the clamorous report of war
 Thus will I drown your exclamations:

Duch. Art thou my son?
K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and yourself.

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.
K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
 That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak.
K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.
K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have staid for thee,
 God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?
Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it well,
 Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me;
 Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;
 Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild, and furious;

Thy prime of manhood, daring, bold, and venturesome;
 Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody.

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred;
 What comfortable hour canst thou name,
 That ever grac'd me in thy company?

K. Rich. 'Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your grace
To breakfast once, forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your sight,
Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.—
Strike up the drum.

Duch. I pr'ythee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word;

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's just ordinance,
Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,
And never look upon thy face again.

Therefore, take with thee my most heavy curse;
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more,
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!
My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend.

[Exit.]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me; I say amen to her.

[Going.]

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must speak a word with
you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood,
For thee to murder: for my daughters, Richard,—
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd—Elizabeth,
Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live,
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself, as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infamy:

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood.

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say—she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were opposite.

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny:

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak, as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.

Whose hands soever lanc'd thy tender hearts,
Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,

To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys,

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;

And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise,
And dangerous success of bloody wars,

As I intend more good to you and yours,
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good?

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle
lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads!

K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of fortune,
The high-imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report of it;
Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,
Will I withhold endow a child of thine;

So in the Lethe of thy angry seal

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those Which, thou supposest, I have done to thee.

Ed. Why then, by God,—
 God's wrong is most of all.
 hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 y, the king thy brother made,
 been broken, nor my brother slain.
 hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 erial metal, circling now thy head,
 'd the tender temples of my child;
 the princes had been breathing here,
 ow, two tender bed-fellows for dust,
 ten faith hath made a prey for worms.
 hadst thou swear by now?
Ed. By the time to come.
Rich. That thou hast wronged in the time o'er-past;
 self have many tears to wash
 time, for time past, wrong'd by thee.

The children live, whose parents thou hast slaugh-
 ter'd.
 Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age:
 The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd,
 Old barren plants, to wail it in their age.
 Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast
 Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'er-past.
K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent!
 So thrive I in my dangerous attempt
 Of hostile arms! myself myself confound!
 Heaven, and fortune, bar me happy hours!
 Day, yield me not thy light; nor, night, thy rest!
 Be opposite all planets of good luck
 To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love,
 Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
 I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter!
 In her consists my happiness, and thine;
 Without her, follows to myself, and thee,
 Herself, the land, and many a christian soul,
 Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
 It cannot be avoided, but by this;
 It will not be avoided, but by this.
 Therefore, dear mother, (I must call you so),
 Be the attorney of my love to her.
 Plead what I will, be not what I have been;
 Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:
 Urge the necessity and state of times,
 And be not peevish found in great designs.
Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?
K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good.
Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself, to be myself?
K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.
Q. Eliz. But thou didst kill my children.
K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them:
 Where, in that nest of spicery, they shall breed
 Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.
Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.
Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me very shortly,
 And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell. [Kissing her. Exit Q. Elizabeth.
 Relenting fool, and shallow, changing—woman!
 How now? what news?

Enter RATCLIFF; CATESBY following.
Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
 Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore
 Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
 Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back:
 'Tis thought, that Richmond is their admiral;
 And there they hull, expecting but the aid
 Of Buckingham, to welcome them ashore.
K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk:—
 Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?
Cate. Here, my good lord.
K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.
Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.
K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither: Post to Salisbury;
 When thou com'st thither,—Dull unmindful villain,
 [To Catesby.
 Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?
Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness's pleasure,
 What from your grace I shall deliver to him.
K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby;—Bid him levy straight
 The greatest strength and power he can make,
 And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.
Cate. I go. [Exit.
Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?
K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there, before I go?
Rat. Your highness told me, I should post before.
 Enter STANLEY.
K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you?
Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;
 Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.
K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!
 What need'st thou run so many miles about,

When thou mayst tell thy tale the nearest way?
Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,

He makes for England, here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword un-sway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive, but we?

And who is England's king, but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back?

Where be thy tenants, and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,

Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: What do they in the north,

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty
king:

Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,

I'll muster up my friends; and meet your grace,

Where, and what time, your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:

I will not trust you, sir.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,

You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful;

I never was, nor never will be false.

K. Rich. Well, go, muster men. But, hear you, leave behind

Your son, George Stanley: look your heart be firm,

Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him, as I prove true to you.

[Exit Stanley.]

As I by friends am well advertised,

Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,

Is,—that, by sudden floods and fall of w.

Bosworth Field.

King RICHARD, and Forces; the Duke of DRFOLK, Earl of SURREY, and Others.

 Rich. My lord of Norfolk,—
 Here, most gracious liege.

 Rich. Up with my tent: Here will I lie to-

 And part in just proportion our small power.
 My lord of Oxford,—you, sir William Brandon,—
 And you, sir Walter Herbert, stay with me:
 The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment;—
 Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,
 And by the second hour in the morning
 Desire the earl to see me in my tent:—
 Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me:
 Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?
 Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,
 (Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done,)
 His regiment lies half a mile at least
 South from the mighty power of the king.
 Richm. If without peril it be possible,
 Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with
 him,
 And give him from me this most needful note.
 Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it:
 And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!
 Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt. Come,
 gentlemen,
 Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;
 In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.
 [They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter, to his tent, King RICHARD, NORFOLK,
 RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?
 Cate. It's supper time, my lord;
 It's nine o'clock.
 K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.—
 Give me some ink and paper,—
 What, is my heaver easier than it was?—
 And all my armour laid into my tent?
 Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.
 K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge;
 Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.
 Nor. I go, my lord.
 K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle
 Norfolk.
 Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]
 K. Rich. Ratcliff,—
 Rat. My lord?
 K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
 To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
 Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall
 Into the blind cave of eternal night.—
 Fill me a bowl of wine.—Give me a watch:—
 [To Catesby.]
 Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.—
 Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.
 Ratcliff,—
 Rat. My lord?
 K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Northumberland?
 Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself,
 Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop,
 Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.
 K. Rich. I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
 I have not that alacrity of spirit,
 Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.—
 So, set it down.—Is ink and paper ready?
 Rat. It is, my lord.
 K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
 About the mid of night, come to my tent
 And help to arm me.—Leave me, I say.
 [King Richard retires into his tent. Exeunt
 Ratcliff and Catesby.]

Richmond's tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!
 Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford,
 Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
 Tell me, how fares our loving mother?
 Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,
 Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
 So much for that.—The silent hours steal on,
 And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
 In brief, for so the season bids us be,
 Prepare thy battle early in the morning;
 And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes, and mortal-staring war :
I, as I may, (that which I would, I cannot,)
With best advantage will deceive the time,
And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms :
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy tender brother George
Be executed in his father's sight.
Farewell : the leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,
And ample interchange of sweet discourse,
Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon ;

God give us leisure for these rites of love !
Once more, adieu :—Be valiant, and speed well !
Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment :
I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap :
Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,
When I should mount with wings of victory :
Once more, good night, kind lords and gentlemen.

[Exeunt Lords, &c. with Stanley.]

O Thou ! whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye ;
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall
The usurping helmets of our adversaries !
Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory !
To thee I do commend my watchful soul,
Ere I let fall the widows of mine eyes ;
Sleeping, and waking, O, defend me still ! [Sleeps.]

The Ghost of Prince Edward, son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow !
[To King Richard.]
Think, how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth
At Tewksbury ; Despair therefore, and die !—
Be cheerful, Richmond ; for the wronged souls
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf :
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of King Henry the Sixth rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my anointed body
[To King Richard.]
By thee was punched full of deadly holes :
Think on the Tower, and me ; Despair, and die ;
Harry the sixth bids thee despair and die.—
Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror !
[To Richmond.]

Harry, that prophes'd thou shouldst be king,
Doth comfort thee in thy sleep ; Live, and flourish !

The Ghost of Clarence rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow !
[To King Richard.]
I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death !
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword ; Despair, and die !—
Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,
[To Richmond.]

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee ;
Good angels guard thy battle ! Live, and flourish !

The Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan rise.

Riv. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow,
[To King Richard.]
Rivers, that died at Pomfret ! Despair, and die !
Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair !
[To King Richard.]

Vaug. Think upon Vaughan ; and, with guilty fear, Let fall thy lance ! Despair, and die !—
[To King Richard.]

All. Awake ! and think, our wrongs in Richard's bosom [To Richmond.]
Will conquer him ;—awake, and win the day !

The Ghost of Hastings rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake ;
[To King Richard.]
And in a bloody battle end thy days !
Think on lord Hastings ; and despair, and die !—
Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake !
[To Richmond.]

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake !

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise

Ghosts. Dream on thy cousins, smother'd
Tower ;

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death ;
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die !
Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake !
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annals !
Live, and beget a happy race of kings !
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish !

The Ghost of Queen Anne rises.

Ghost. Richard, thy wife, that wretched thy wife,

That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations :
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword ; Despair, and die !
Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep !
[To Richmond.]

Dream of success and happy victory :
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

Ghost. The first was I, that help'd thee crown ; [To King Richard.]

The last was I, that felt thy tyranny :
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness !
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and Fainting, despair ; despairing, yield thy breath ;
I died for hope, ere I could lend thee aid !
[To Richmond.]

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd :
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side ;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride !
[The Ghosts vanish. King Richard out of his dream.]

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle;—Caparison my horse;—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:—

I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,

And thus my battle shall be ordered.

My forward shall be drawn out all in length,

Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst:

John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Surrey,

Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.

They thus directed, we ourself will follow

In the main battle; whose puissance on either side

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.

This, and Saint George to boot!—What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.—

This found I on my tent this morning.

[Giving a scroll.]

K. Rich. Jocky of Norfolk, he not too bold, [Reads.]

For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

A thing devised by the enemy.—

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge:

Let not our babbling dreams affront our souls;

Conscience is but a word that cowards use,

Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe;

Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to't pell-mell;

If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.—

What shall I say more than I have infer'd?

Remember whom you are to cope withal;—

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,

A scum of Bretagne, and base lackey peasants,

Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth

To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;

You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives,

They would restrain the one, disdain the other.

And who doth lead them, but a paltry fellow,

Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost?

A milk-sop, one that never in his life

Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?

Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;

Lash hence these over-weening rags of France,

These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;

Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,

For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves:

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,

And not these bastard Bretagnes; whom our fathers

Have in their own land beaten, bobbd', and thump'd,

And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.

Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?

Ravish our daughters?—Hark, I hear their drum.

[Drum afar off.]

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!

Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;

Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!—

[Exeunt.]

Enter a Messenger.

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off instantly with his son George's head.

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh;

After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my hosom:

Advance our standards, set upon our foes;

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!

Upon them! Victory sits on our helms. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Another part of the field.

Alarums; Excursions. Enter NORFOLK and

Forces; to him CATESBY.

Cate. Resene, my lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,

Daring an opposite to every danger;

His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death :
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost !

Alarum. Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die :

I think, there be six Richmonds in the field ;

Five have I slain to-day, instead of him :—

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter King RICHARD and RICHMOND ; and exeunt fighting. Retreat, and flourish. Then enter RICHMOND, STANLEY, bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais'd, victorious friends ;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!

Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty,

From the dead temples of this bloody wretch

Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal ;

Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, amen, to all!—

But, tell me first, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town ;

Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their birth.

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled,

That in submission will return to us ;

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,

We will unite the white rose and the red :—

Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,

That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!—

What traitor hears me, and says not,—amen!

England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself ;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,

The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,

The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire ;

All this divided York and Lancaster,

Divided, in their dire division.—

O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true successors of each royal house,

By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!

And let their heirs, (God, if thy will be so,)—

Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace,

With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,

That would reduce these bloody days again,

And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase,

That would with treason wound this fair land's

peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again—

That she may long live here, God say—Amen!

[Exeunt.

KING HENRY THE VIII.

Act 1 Sc. 4.

Published by W. Pickering 57 Chancery Lane 1824.

KING HENRY VIII.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

King HENRY the Eighth.
Cardinal WOLSEY. Cardinal CAMPEIUS.
CAPUCIUS, ambassador from the emperor,
 Charles V.
CRANMER, archbishop of Canterbury.
 Duke of NORFOLK. Duke of BUCKINGHAM.
 Duke of SUFFOLK. Earl of SURREY.
 Lord Chamberlain. Lord Chancellor.
GARDINER, bishop of Winchester.
 Bishop of LINCOLN. Lord ABERGAVENTY.
 Lord SANDS.
 Sir HENRY GUILDFORD. Sir THOMAS
LOVELL.
 Sir ANTHONY DENNY. Sir NICHOLAS
YAUX.
 Secretaries to Wolsey.
CROMWELL, servant to Wolsey.

GRIFFITH, gentleman-usber to queen Katharine.
 Three other Gentlemen.
 Doctor BUTTS, physician to the king.
 Garter, king at arms.
 Surveyor to the duke of Buckingham.
BRANDON, and a Sergeant at Arms.
 Door-keeper of the council-chamber. Porter, and his Man.
 Page to Gardiner. A Crier.
 Queen KATHARINE, wife to king Henry, afterwards divorced.
ANNE BULLEN, her maid of honour, afterwards queen.
 An old Lady, friend to Anne Bullen.
PATIENCE, woman to queen Katharine.

Several Lords and Ladies in the dumb shows; Women attending upon the Queen; Spirits, which appear to her; Scribes, Officers, Guards, and other Attendants.

Scene, chiefly in London and Westminster; once, at Kimbolton.

PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh; things now,
 That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
 Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
 Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
 We now present. Those that can pity, here
 May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
 The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
 May here find truth too. Those, that come to see
 Only a show or two, and so agree,
 The play may pass; if they be still, and willing,
 I'll undertake, may see away their shilling Riskily in two short hours. Only they,
 That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
 A noise of targets; or to see a fellow
 In a long motley coat, guarded with yellow,

Will be deceiv'd: for, gentle hearers, know,
 To rank our chosen truth with such a show
 As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
 Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
 (To make that only true we now intend,)
 Will leave us never an understanding friend.
 Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
 The first and happiest hearers of the town,
 Be sad, as we would make ye: Think, ye see
 The very persons of our noble story,
 As they were living; think, you see them great,
 And follow'd with the general throng, and sweat,
 Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
 How soon this mightiness meets misery!
 And, if you can be merry then, I'll say,
 A man may weep upon his wedding day.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. An ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter, the duke of NORFOLK, at one door; at the other, the duke of BUCKINGHAM, and the Lord ABERGAVENTY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,
 Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your grace:
 Readyful; and ever since a fresh admirer
 Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague
 Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
 Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. 'Twixt Gaynes and Arde:
 I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;
 Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
 In their embracement, as they grew together;
 Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd
 Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
 I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost

The view of earthly glory: Men might say,
 Till this time, pomp was single; but now married
 To one above itself. Each following day
 Became the next day's master, till the last
 Made former wonders its: To-day, the French,
 All cluquant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
 Shone down the English; and, to-morrow, they Made Britain, India: every man, that stood, Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
 As cherubins, all gilt: the madams too,
 Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
 The pride upon them, that their very labour
 Was to them as a painting: new this mask
 Was cry'd incomparable; and the ensuing night
 Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings,
 Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
 As presence did present them; him in eye,
 Still him in praise: and, being present both,
 'Twas said, they saw but one; and no discernor
 Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns,
 (For so they phrase them,) by their heralds challeng'd
 The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
 Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
 Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
 That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck.

O, you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of every thing
Would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;
To the disposing of it nought rebel'd,
Order gave each thing view; the office did
Distinctly his full function.

Buck.

Who did guide,

I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One, certes, that promises no element
In such a business.

Buck.

I pray you, who, my lord?

Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed
From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder,
That such a keech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth.

Nor.

Surely, sir,

There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends:
For, being not propp'd by ancestry, (whose grace Chalks successors their way,) nor call'd upon
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants, but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber.

I cannot tell

What heaven hath given him, let some graver eye
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him: Whence has he that?
If not from hell, the devil is a niggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck.

Why the devil,

Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privy o' the king, to appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such Too, whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
The honourable board of council out,
Must fetch him in he papers.

Aber.

I do know

Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sickened their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck.

O, many

Have broke their backs with laying manors on them
For this great journey. What did this vanity,
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor.

Grievingly I think,

The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Buck.

Every man,

After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy,—That this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, ahod'd
The sudden breach on't.

Nor.

Which is budded out;

For France hath flav'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber.

Is it therefore

The ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor.

Marry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchas'd
At a superfluous rate!

Buck.

Why, all this business

Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor.

'Like it your grace,

The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,
(And take it from a heart, that wishes towards you Honour and plenteous safety,) that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency Together: to consider further, that
What his high hatred would effect, wants not
A minister in his power: You know his nature,
'That he's revengul; and I know, his sword

Hath a sharp edge; it's long, and, it may be,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel,
You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that
That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal WOLSEY, (the Purse borne him,) certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor
Where's his examination?

I Secr.

Here, so please y

Wol.

Is he in person ready?

I Secr.

Ay, please your gra

Wol.

Well, we shall then know more;

Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt Wolsey and

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd,
Have not the power to muzzle him; and therefore Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's
Out-worths a noble's blood.

Nor.

What, are you cl

Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance,
Which your disease requires.

Buck.

I read in his

Matter against me; and his eye revil'd
Me, as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick: He's gone to the I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor.

Stay, my lo

And let your reason with your choler questio
What 'tis you go about: To climb steep hill
Requires slow pace at first: Anger is like
A full-hot horse; who being allow'd his wa
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in Engla
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck.

I'll to the kin

And from a mouth of honour quite ery down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Nor.

Be advis'd

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot,
That it do singe yourself: We may outrun,
By violent swiftness, that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not
The fire, that mounts the liquor till it run o
In seeming to augment it, wastes it? Be ad
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself;
If with the sap of reason you would quench
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck.

Sir,

I am thankful to you; and I'll go along
By your prescription:—but this top-proud fe (Whom from the flow of gall I name not, b
From sincere motions,) by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor.

Say not, treat

Buck. To the king I'll say't; and mal vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal reavenous,
As he is subtle; and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform it: his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally.)
Only to show his pomp, as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our mas
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like
Did break; the rising.

Nor.

'Faith, and so it di

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cu cardinal

The articles o'the combination drew,
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified,
As he cried, Thus let be: to as much end,
As give a crutch to the dead: But our count-ca
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy W
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follow (Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy

the old dam, treason.)—Charles the emperor, for pretence to see the queen his aunt, 'twas, indeed, his colour; but he came whisper Wolsey,) here makes visitation: fears were, that the interview, betwixt land and France, might, through their amity, do him some prejudice; for from this league 'd harms that menac'd him: He privily is with our cardinal; and, as I trow,— which I do well; for, I am sure, the emperor (ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted, it was ask'd;—but when the way was made, pay'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd;— he would please to alter the king's course, break the foresaid peace. Let the king know, soon he shall by me,) that thus the cardinal buy and sell his honour as he pleases, for his own advantage.

w. I am sorry to hear this of him; and could wish, he were something mistaken in't.

sc. No, not a syllable; pronounce him in that very shape, shall appear in proof.

r. BRANDON; a Serjeant at Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

an. Your office, serjeant; execute it.

Sir,

ord the duke of Buckingham, and earl (ereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I at thee of high treason, in the name of most sovereign king.

ct. Lo you, my lord, set has fall'n upon me; I shall perish by device and practice.

is. I am sorry to see you ta'en from liberty, to look on business present: 'Tis his highness' pleasure, shall to the Tower.

st. It will help me nothing, and mine innocence; for that die is on me, makes my whitest part black. The will of heaven me in this and all things!—I obey.—

lord Abergavenny, fare you well.
a. Nay, he must bear you company:—The king [To Abergavenny.] as'd, you shall to the Tower, till you know he determines further.

r. As the duke said, 'ill of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure obey'd.

st. Here is a warrant from me, to attach lord Montacute; and the bodies of duke's confessor, John de la Court, Hilbert Peck, his chancellor,— st. So, so; are the limbs of the plot: No more, I hope.

s. A monk o'the Chartreux.

t. O, Nicholas Hopkins?

s. He.

t. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal show'd him gold: my life is spann'd already:

he shadow of poor Buckingham;

darkning my clear sun.—My lord, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The council-chamber.

t. Enter King HENRY, Cardinal WOLSEY, the Lords of the Council, Sir THOMAS BELL, Officers, and Attendants. The King, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder.

an. My life itself, and the best heart of it, you for this great care: I stood i'the level all-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us gentleman of Buckingham's: in person or him his confessions justify; sent by point the treasons of his master shall again relate.

The King takes his state. The Lords of the Council take their several places. The Cardinal places himself under the King's feet, on his right side.

A noise within, crying, Room for the Queen. Enter the Queen, ushered by the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels. The King riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us: Half your suit

Never name to us; you have half our power:

The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;

Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank you for my majesty.

That you would love yourself; and, in that love,

Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor

The dignity of your office, is the point

Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,

And those of true condition, that your subjects

Are in great grievance: there have been commissions

Sent down among them, which hath flav'd the heart

Of all their loyalties:—wherein, although,

My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches

Most bitterly on you, as putter-on

Of these exactions, yet the king our master,

(Whose honour heaven shield from soil!) even he escapes not

Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks

The sides of loyalty, and almost appears

In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,

It doth appear: for, upon these taxations,

The clothiers all, not able to maintain

The many to them 'longing, have put off

The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,

Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger

And lack of other means, in desperate manner

Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,

And Danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation!

Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal,

You that are blam'd for it alike with us,

Know you of this taxation?

Hol. Please you, sir,

I know but of a single part, in aught

Pertains to the state; and front but in that file

Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,

You know no more than others: but you frame

Things, that are known alike; which are not wholesome

To those which would not know them, and yet must Performe be their acquaintance. These exactions,

Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are

Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear them,

The back is sacrifice to the lead. They say,

They are devis'd by you; or else you suffer

To hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction!

The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,

Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturesome

In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd

Under your promis'd pardon. The subject's grief

Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied

Without delay; and the pretence for this

Is nam'd, your wars in France: This makes bold mouths:

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze

Allegiance in them; their curses now

Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,

That tractable obedience is a slave

To each incens'd will. I would, your highness

Would give it quick consideration, for

There is no primer business.

K. Hen. By my life,

This is against our pleasure.

Hol. And for me,

I have no further gone in this, than by

A single voice; and that not pass'd me, but

By learned approbation of the judges.

If I am traduc'd by tongues, which neither know

My faculties, nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing,—let me say,
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow,
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State statutes only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not read our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take,
From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber;
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county,
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission: Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.

[To the Secretary.]

Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons
Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd,
That, through our intercession, this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry, that the duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker,
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself.

Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces,
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear,
(This was his gentleman in trust,) of him
Things to strike honour sad.—Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, That if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his: These very words
I have heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergavenny; to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note,
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown,
Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard him

At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought

By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux

His confessor; who fed him every minute

With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou

Surv. Not long before your highness

France,

The duke being at the Rose, within the par

Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand

What was the speech amongst the Londone

Concerning the French journey: I replied,

Men fear'd, the French would prove perfidi

To the king's danger. Presently the duke

Said, 'Twas the fear, indeed; and that he d

'Twould prove the verity of certain words

Spoke by a holy monk; that oft, says he,

Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit

John de la Court, my chaplain, a choice hon

To hear from him a matter of some moment;

Whom after under the confession's seal

He solemnly had sworn, that, what he spoke,

My chaplain to no creature living, but

To me, should utter, with demure confidence

This pausingly ensu'd,—Neither the king nor I (Tell you the duke,) shall prosper; bid him st

To gain the love of the commonalty; the duk

Shall govern England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,

You were the duke's surveyor, and lost yo

On the complaint o' the tenants: Take good

You charge not in your spleen a noble peer

And spoil your nobler soul! I say, take he

Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on:—

Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but t

I told my lord the duke, By the devil's ill

This monk might be deceiv'd; and the dangerous for him,

To ruminate on this so far, until

It forg'd him some design, which, being b

It was much like to do: He answer'd, Th

It can do me no damage: adding further,

That, had the king in his last sickness fail

The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's be

Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank?

There's mischief in this man:—Canst t

further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Gr

After your highness had reprov'd the duke

About sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember

Of such a time:—Being my sworn servant

The duke retain'd him his.—But on,

hence?

Surv. If, quoth he, I for this had been co

As, to the Tower, I thought,—I would have

The part, my father meant to act upon

The usurper Richard: who, being at Salisbury

Made suit to come in his presence; which, if

As he made semblance of his duty, would

Have put his knife into him.—

K. Hen. A giant trait

Wol. Now, madam, may his highness

freedom,

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend a

K. Hen. There's something more would thee; What say'st?

Surv. After—the duke his father,—with the

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his

Another spread on his breast, mounting his

Is it possible, the spells of France should oggle
 o such strange mysteries?

New customs,
 they be never so ridiculous,
 t them be unmanly, yet are follow'd.
 As far as I see, all the good our English t by the late voyage, is but merely two o'the face; but they are shrewd ones;
 in they hold them, you would swear directly,

 o, or Clotharius, they keep state so.
 They have all new legs, and lame ones;

Enter Sir THOMAS LOVELL.

'Faith, my lord,
 none, but the new proclamation
 app'd upon the court-gate.

What is't for?

No, my lord;
 not, while I have a stump.

Sir Thomas,
 here you are going?

To the cardinal's;
 hip is a guest too.

O, 'tis true:
 he makes a supper, and a great one,

No doubt, he's noble;

He had a black mouth, that said other of him.
 Sands. He may, my lord, he has wherewithal;
 in him
 Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:
 Men of his way should be most liberal,
 They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are se;
 But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
 Your lordship shall along:—Come, good sir Thomas,
 We shall be late else; which I would not be,
 For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildford,
 This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

The presence-chamber in York-palace.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the Guests. Enter at one door ANNE BULLEN, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as Guests; at another door, enter Sir HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
 Salutes you all: This night he dedicates
 To fair content, and you: none here, he hopes,
 In all this noble bevy, has brought with her
 One care abroad; he would have all as merry
 As first-good company, good wine, good welcome
 Can make good people.—O, my lord, you are tardy;

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord SANDS, and Sir
 THOMAS LOVELL.

The very thought of this fair company
 Clapp'd wings on me.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildford.
 Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
 But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running haquet ere they rested,
 I think, would better please them: By my life,
 They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O, that your lordship were but now confessor
 To one or two of these!

Sands. I would, I were;
 They should find easy penance.

Lov. 'Faith, how easy?
 Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,

Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this:
 His grace is entering.—Nay, you must not freeze;
 Two women plac'd together makes cold weather:—
 My lord Sands, you are one will keep them waking;
 Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
 And thank your lordship.—By your leave, sweet ladies:

[Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another Lady.

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
 I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
 Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too:
 But he would bite none; just as I do now,
 He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.
 Cham. Well said, my lord.—
 So now you are fairly seated:—Gentlemen,
 The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
 Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
 Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal WOLSEY, attended; and takes his state.

Wol. You are welcome, my fair guests; that noble lady,

Or gentleman, that is not freely merry,
 Is not my friend: This, to confirm my welcome;
 And to you all good health. [Drinks.

Sands. Your grace is noble:—
 Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
 And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord Sands,
 I am beholden to you; cheer your neighbours.—
 Ladies, you are not merry;—Gentlemen,
 Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have them
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing,—

Anne. You cannot show me.
Sands. I told your grace, they would talk anon.
[Drums and trumpets within: chambers discharged.]

Wol. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of you.

[Exit a Servant.]
Wol. What warlike voice?
And to what end is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not;
By all the laws of war you are privileg'd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now? what is't?
Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem: they have left their barge, and landed;
And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain,
Go, give them welcome, you can speak the French
tongue;

And, pray, receive them nobly, and conduct them,
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them:—Some attend him.—
[Exit Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and tables removed.]

You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it.
A good digestion to you all: and, once more,
I shower a welcome on you;—Welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and twelve Others, as Muskers, habited like Shepherds, with sixteen Torch-bearers; ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! What are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd

To tell your grace;—That, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no less,
Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,
Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat
An hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay them

A thousand thanks, and pray them take sures.

Till now I never knew thee. [Music]

Wol. Pray, tell them thus much

SCENE I.

A street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?

2 Gent. O,—God save you!
Even to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you
That labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Were you there?

1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray, speak, what has happen'd?

1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?

1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon it.

2 Gent. I am sorry for't.

1 Gent. So are a number more.

2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke
Came to the bar; where, to his accusations,
He pleaded still, not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
The king's attorney, on the contrary,

Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, con
Of divers witnesses; which the duke d
To him brought, viva voce, to his face:

At which appear'd against him, his sur
Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and J
Confessor to him; with that devil-mon
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That fed him with his prophecies?

1 Gent. The

All these accus'd him strongly; which Would have flung from him, but, indee
not:

And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason.

He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but
Was either pitied in him, or forgotten.

2 Gent. After all this, how did he be

1 Gent. When he was brought again t

And duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun: Yet I am richer than my bass accusers, That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it; And with that blood will make them one day groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham, Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard, Flying for succour to his servant Baunster, Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd, And without trial fell; God's peace be with him! Henry the seventh succeeding, truly pitying My father's loss, like a most royal prince, Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins, Made my name once more noble. Now his son, Henry the eighth, life, honour, name, and all, That made me happy, at one stroke has taken For ever from the world. I had my trial, And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes me A little happier than my wretched father: Yet thus far we are one in fortunes,—Both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most; A most unnatural and faithless service! Heaven has an end in all: Yet, you that hear me, This from a dying man receive as certain: Where you are liberal of your loves, and counsels, Be sure, you be not loose; for those you make friends,

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive The least rub in your fortunes, fall away Like water from ye, never found again But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour Of my long weary life is come upon me. Farewell:

And when you would say something that is sad, Speak how I fell.—I have done; and God forgive me. [Exeunt Buckingham and Train. I Gent. O, this is full of pity!—Sir, it calls, I fear, too many curses on their heads, That were the authors.

2 Gent. If the duke be guiltless, 'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you iudging Of an ensuing evil, if it fall, Greater than this.

1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us! What may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir?

2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require A strong faith to conceal it.

1 Gent. Let me have it; I do not talk much.

2 Gent. I am confident; You shall, sir: Did you not of late days hear A buzzing, of a separation Between the king and Katharine?

1 Gent. Yes, but it held not: For when the king once heard it, out of anger He sent command to the lord mayor, straight To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues, That durst disperse it.

2 Gent. But that slander, sir, Is found a truth now: for it grows again Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain, The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal, Or some about him near, have, out of malice To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple, That will undo her: To confirm this too, Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately; As all think, for this business.

1 Gent. 'Tis the cardinal; And merely to revenge him on the emperor, For not bestowing on him, at his asking, The archbishoprick of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2 Gent. I think, you have hit the mark: But is't not cruel,

That she should feel the smart of this? The cardina Will have his will, and she must fall.

1 Gent. 'Tis woful. We are too open here to argue this; Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

An ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter.

Cham. My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnish'd. They were young, and handsome; and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission, and main power, took 'em from me; with this reason,—His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king: which stopped our mouths, sir.

I fear, he will, indeed: Well, let him have them; He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my good Lord chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces. Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private, Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause? Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's wife

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so; This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal: That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune, Turns what he list. The king will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God, he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business! And with what zeal! For, now he has crack'd the league

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,

He dives into the king's soul; and there scatters Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, Fears, and despairs, and all these for his marriage: And, out of all these to restore the king, He counsels a divorce: a loss of her, That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years About his neck, yet never lost her lustre; Of her, that loves him with that excellence, That angels love good men with: even of her, That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls, Will bless the king: And is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true,

These news are every where; every tongue speaks them,

And every true heart weeps for't: All, that dare Look into these affairs, see this main end,— The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon This hold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray, And heartily, for our deliverance; Or this imperious man will work us all From princes into pages: all men's honours Lie in one lump before him, to be fashion'd into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed: As I am made without him, so I'll stand, If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they are breath I not believe in. I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him To him, that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in; And, with some other business, put the king From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him:—

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me; The king hath sent me elsewhere: besides, You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him: Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain. [Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

NORFOLK opens a folding-door. The King is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suf. How's sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted. K. Hen. Who is there? ha?

Nor. 'Pray God, he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there? I say. How thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations?

Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty, tis Is business of estate; in which, we come To know your royal pleasure.

SCENE III.

ante-chamber in the Queen's apartments.

ANNE BULLEN and an old Lady.

Not for that neither;—Here's the pang at pinches:

Richness having liv'd so long with her; and she a lady, that no tongue could ever see dishonour of her,—by my life, she knew harm-doing;—O now, after my courses of the sun enthron'd, living in a majesty and pomp,—the which is a thousand-fold more bitter, than yet at first to acquire,—after this process, her the avaunt! it is a pity to move a monster.

Hearts of most hard temper lament for her.

O, God's will! much better, had known pomp: though it be temporal, had quarrel, fortune, do divorce the bearer, 'tis a sufferance, panging and body's severing.

Alas, poor lady! stranger now again.

So much the more drop upon her. Verily,

'tis better to be lowly born, with humble livers in content, be perk'd up in a glistening grief, or a golden sorrow.

Our content is not having.

By my troth, and maidenhead, not be a queen.

Beshrew me, I would, were maidenhead for't; and so would you, his spice of your hypocrisy:

I have so fair parts of woman on you, a woman's heart; which ever yet eminence, wealth, sovereignty; or say sooth, are blessings: and which gifts our mincing) the capacity soft cheveril conscience would receive, might please to stretch it.

Nay, good troth,—Yes, troth, and troth,—You would not be queen?

No, not for all the riches under heaven. 'Tis strange; a three-pence bowed would come me, to am, to queen it: But, I pray you, think you of a duchess? have you limbs that load of title?

No, in truth.

Then you are weakly made: Pluck off a leg;

not be a young count in your way, than blushing comes to: if your back

Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!

I swear again, I would not be a queen for all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England

You'd venture an emballing: I myself

Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd No more to the crown but that. Lo, who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What wer't worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,

Not your demand; it values not your asking:

Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming

The action of good women: there is hope,

All will be well.

Anne. Now I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,

Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's

Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty

Commends his good opinion to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing

Than marchioness of Pembroke; to which title

A thousand pound a year, annual support,

Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know,

What kind of my obedience I should tender;

More than my all is nothing: nor my prayers

Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes

More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers, and wishes,

Are all I can return. 'Beseech your lordship,

Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;

Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham. Lady,

I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit,

The king hath of you.—I have perus'd her well;

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled,

That they have caught the king: and who knows yet,

But from this lady may proceed a gem,

To lighten all this isle?—I'll to the king,

And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!

I have been begging sixteen years in court,

(Am yet a courtier beggarly,) nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late,

For any suit of pounds: and you, (O fate!)

A very fresh-fish here, (see, see upon

This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd up,

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.

There was a lady once, ('tis an old story,)

That would not be a queen, that would she not,

For all the mud in Egypt:—Have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme, I could O'er mount the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year! for pure respect;

No other obligation: By my life,

That promises more thousands: Honour's train

Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,

I know, your back will bear a duchess;—Say,

Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady,

Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,

And leave me out on't. 'Would I had no being,

If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me,

To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful

In our long absence: Pray, do not deliver

What here you have heard, to her.

SCENE IV.

A hall in Black-Friars.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habits of doctors; after them, the Archbishop of CANTERBURY alone; after him, the Bishops of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the King and Queen, and their Trains. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place, at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Vol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read, Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publickly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.

Vol. Be't so:—Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry king of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry king of England, &c.

K. Hen. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katharine queen of England, come into the court.

Crier. Katharine queen of England, &c.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice; And to bestow your pity on me: for I am a most poor woman, and a stranger, Born out of your dominions; having here No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir, In what have I offended you? what cause Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure, That thus you should proceed to put me off, And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness, I have been to you a true and humble wife, At all times to your will conformable: Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, Yea, subject to your countenance; glad, or sorry, As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour, I ever contradicted your desire, Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends Have I not strove to love, although I knew He were mine enemy? what friend of mine, That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind, That I have been your wife, in this obedience, Upward of twenty years, and have been blest With many children by you: If, in the course And process of this time, you can report, And prove it too, against mine honour aught, My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty, Against your sacred person, in God's name, Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt Shut door upon me, and so give me up To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir, The king, your father, was reputed for A prince most prudent, of an excellent And unmatched wit and judgment: Ferdinand, My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many A year before: It is not to be question'd, That they had gather'd a wise council to them Of every realm, that did debate this business, Who deem'd our marriage lawful: Wherefore I humbly Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel I will implore: if not; I the name of God, Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Vol. You have here (And of your choice,) these reverend fathers Of singular integrity and learning, Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled To plead your cause: It shall be therefore by us, That longer you desire the court; as well For your own quiet, as to rectify What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace Hath spoken well, and justly: Therefore, 'tis fit this royal session do proceed; And that, without delay, their arguments Be now produc'd, and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal

To you I speak.

Vol. Your pleasure, madam.

Q. Kath. I am about to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so,) The daughter of a king, my drops of tears I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Vol. Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy; and make my challenge You shall not be my judge: for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and Which God's dew quenches!—Therefore, I say, I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth.

Vol. I do profess, You speak not like yourself; who ever yet Have stood to charity, and display'd the end Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you are wrong:

I have no spleen against you; nor injustice For you, or any: how far I have proceeded Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge That I have blown this coal: I do deny it. The king is present: If it be known to him, That I gainsay my deed, how may he woe And worthily, my falsehood? yea, as much As you have done my truth. But, if he know That I am free of your report, he knows, I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him It lies, to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: The which His highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speech And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You are meek, and ble-mouth'd; You sign your place and calling, in full seal With meekness and humility: but your heart Is cramm'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride. You have, by fortune, and his highness' favour, Gone slightly o'er low steps; and now are near Where powers are your retainers: and your domesticks to you, serve your will, as't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell You tender more your person's honour, than Your high profession spiritual: That again I do refuse you for my judge; and here, Before you all, appeal unto the pope, To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness, And to be judg'd by him.

[She curt'sies to the King, and offers to

Cam. The queen is obstinate to justice, apt to accuse it, and disdainful to be try'd by it; 'tis not well. She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.

Crier. Katharine queen of England, to the court.

Grif. Madam, you are call'd back.

Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:
you are call'd, return.—Now the Lord help, vex me past my patience!—pray you pass on: I not tarry; no, nor ever more, this business, my appearance make y of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, Griffith, and her other Attendants.]

Hen. Go thy ways, Kate: man i'the world, who shall report he has ter wife, let him in nought be trusted, making false in that: Thou art, alone, rare qualities, sweet gentleness, meekness saint-like, wife-like government,—ng in commanding,—and thy parts sign and pious else, could speak thee out; een of earthly queens:—She is noble born; like her true nobility, she has d herself towards me.

Most gracious sir, blest manner I require your highness, I shall please you to declare, in hearing these ears, (for where I am robb'd and bound, must I be unloos'd; although not there re and fully satisfied,) whether ever I roach this business to your highness; or ay scruple in your way, which might s you to the question on't! or ever so you,—but with thanks to God for such a lady,—spake one the least word, might the prejudice of her present state, ch of her good person?

My lord cardinal, excuse you; yea, upon mine honour, you from't. You are not to be taught on have many enemies, that know not hey are so, but, like to village curs, when their fellows do: by some of these een is put in anger. You are excus'd: ll you be more justified? you ever wish'd the sleeping of this business; never I it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd; oft assages made toward it!—on my honour, my good lord cardinal to this point, as far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,— be bold with time, and your attention:— sark the inducement. Thus it came;—give eed to't:—

science first receiv'd a tenderness, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador; ad been hither sent on the debating age, 'twixt the duke of Orleans and ighter Mary: I'the progress of this business, erminate resolution, he t the hishop) did require a respite; n he might the king his lord advértese r our daughter were legitimate, ing this our marriage with the dowager, oes our brother's wife. This respite shook om of my conscience, enter'd me, ab a splitting power, and made to tremble ion of my breast; which forc'd such way,

That many mar'd considerings did throng, Aud press'd in with this caution. First, methought, I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb, If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't, than

The grave does to the dead: for her male issue Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them: Hence I took a thought, This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom, Well worthy the best heir o'the world, should not Be gladd in't by me; Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger, which my realms stood in By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that's to say, I meant to rectify my conscience,—which I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,— By all the reverend fathers of the laod, And doctors learn'd.—First, I began in private With you, my lord of Lincoln; you remember How under my oppression I did reek, When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long; be pleas'd yourself to say How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness, The question did at first so stagger me,— Bearing a state of mighty moment in't, And consequence of dread, that I committed The daring'st counsel which I had, to doubt; And did entreat your highness to this course, Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you, My lord of Canterbury; and got your leave To make this present summons:—Unsolicited I left no reverend person in this court; But by particular consent proceeded; Under your hands and seals. Therefore, go on: For no dislike i'the world against the person Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward: Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life, And kingly dignity, we are contented To wear our mortal state to come, with her, Katharine our queen, before the primest creature That's paragon'd o'the world.

Cam. So please your highness, The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness That we adjourn this court till further day: Mean while must be an earnest motion Made to the queen, to call back her appeal She intends unto his blessing.

[They rise to depart.]

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside.] These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome. My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer, Pr'ythee return! with thy approach, I know, My comfort comes along. Break up the court: I say, set on. [Exeunt, in manner as they entered.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Palace at Bridewell.

A room in the Queen's apartment.

Queen, and some of her Women, at work.

Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows d with troubles; and disperse them, if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

Heas with his lute made trees,
I the mountain-tops, that freeze,
ow themselves, when he did sing:
his musick, plants, and flowers,
r sprung; as sun, and showers,
here had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet musick is such art;
Killing care, and grief of heart,
Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now?

Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals

Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour?
I do not like their coming, now I think on't.
They should be good men; their affairs are righteous:
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;

I would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: 'Would, all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!

My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number,) if my actions

Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them,
Envy and base opinion set against them,

I know my life so even: If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly; Truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange,
Suspicious:

Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank
you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake;
Believe me, she has had much wrong: Lord cardinal,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed,
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry, my integrity should breed,
(And service to his majesty and you,)
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.

We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses;
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;
You have too much, good lady: but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace;
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, (which was too far,)—
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside.
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills,
Ye speak like honest men, (pray God, ye prove so!)

But how to make you suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,
(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids: full little, God knows, looking Either for such men, or such business.

For her sake that I have been, (for I feel
The last fit of my greatness,) good your graces,
Let me have time, and counsel, for my cause;
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England,
But little for my profit; Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,
(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here;
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,
In mine own country, lords.

ante-chamber to the King's apartment.

the Duke of NORFOLK, the Duke of SUFFOLK, the Earl of SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

If you will now unite in your complaints to see them with a constancy, the cardinal stand under them: If you omit any of this time, I cannot promise, at you shall sustain more new disgraces,
 these you bear already.

I am joyful
 at the least occasion, that may give me pleasure of my father-in-law, the duke, reveng'd on him.

Which of the peers
 is contemn'd gone by him, or at least is neglected? when did he regard any of nobleness in any person, himself?

My lords, you speak your pleasures:
 he deserves of you and me, I know;
 we can do to him, (though now the time may to us,) I much fear. If you cannot access to the king, never attempt going on him; for he hath a witchcraft in the king in his tongue.

O, fear him not;
 all in that is out: the king hath found against him, that for ever mars any of his language. No, he's settled, come off, in his displeasure.

Sir,
 I be glad to hear such news as this very hour.

Believe it, this is true.
 divorce, his contrary proceedings unfolded; wherein he appears,
 and wish mine enemy.

How came
 these to light?

Most strangely.
 O, how, how?
 The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
 as to the eye o' the king: wherein was read,
 at the cardinal did entreat his holiness the judgment o' the divorce; For if to take place, I do, quoth he, perceive, that is tang'd in affection to the wife of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen.
 Has the king this?

Believe it.
 Will this work?
 The king in this perceives him, how he boasts,
 and goes, his own way. But in this point tricks founder, and he brings his physick to patient's death; the king already

Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. 'Would he had!
Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord;
 For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy
 Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!
Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
 Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
 To some ears unrecounted.—But, my lords,
 She is a gallant creature, and complete
 In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
 Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
 In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But, will the king
 Digest this letter of the cardinal's?
 The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!
Suf. No, no;

There be more wasps that buzz about his nose,
 Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
 Is stolen away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
 Has left the cause o' the king unhandled; and
 Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
 To second all his plot. I do assure you
 The king cry'd, ha! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
 And let him cry ha, louder!

Nor. But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which
 Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
 Together with all famous colleges
 Almost in Christendom: shortly, I believe,
 His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
 Her coronation. Katharine no more
 Shall be call'd, queen; but princess dowager,
 And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
 A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
 In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
 For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal—
Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.
Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king?
Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?
Crom. Presently

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,
 He did it with a serious mind; a heed
 Was in his countenance: You, he bade
 Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready

To come abroad?
Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me a while.— [Exit Cromwell.]
 It shall be to the duchess of Alençon,
 The French king's sister: he shall marry her.—

Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:
 There is more in it than fair visage.—Bullen!
 No, we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish
 To hear from Rome.—The marchioness of Pembroke!

Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be, he hears the king
 Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,

Lord, for thy justice!
Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman; a knight's daughter,

To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!—
 This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;
 Then, out it goes.—What though I know her vir-tuous,

And well-deserving? yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up
 An heretick, an arch one, Cranmer; one
 Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
 And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would, 'twere something that would fret the string,
And master-cord of his heart!

Enter the King, reading a schedule; and LOVELL.

Suf. The king, the king.
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion! and what expence by the hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,
Does he rake this together?—Now, my lords;
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him: Some strange commotion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then, lays his finger on his temple; straight,
Springs out into fast gait! then, stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon, he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; And, wot you, what I found
There; on my conscience, put unwittingly!
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing,—
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will;
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings; but, I am afraid,
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.]

Wol. Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness!

K. Hen. Good, my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind; and the which
You were now running o'er: you have scarce time
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span,
To keep your earthly audit: Sure, in that I deem you an ill husband; and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business, which I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which, perforce,
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.
Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed, to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you:
He said, he did; and with his deed did crown
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you, where high profits might come home,
But par'd my present havings, to bestow
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?

Sar. The Lord increase this business! [Aside.]

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true:
And, if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal graces, Shower'd on me daily, have been more, than could
My studied purposes requite; which went Beyond all man's endeavours:—my endeavours

It must be himself then.

Thou art a proud traitor, priest,

Proud lord, thou liest;

These forty hours Surrey durst better burnt that tongue, than said so.

Thy ambition,

All, goodness

Yes, that goodness

These articles, my lord, are in the king's

This cannot save you:

Suf. Then, that, without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sar. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will, or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sar. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,

(By what means got, I leave to your own conscience,)

To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways

You have for dignities; to the mere undoing

Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;

Which, since they are of you, and odious,

I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord,

Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:

His faults lie open to the laws; let them,

Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him

So little of his great self.

Sar. I forgive him.

Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,—

Because all those things, you have done of late

By your power legatine within this kingdom,

Fall into the compass of a præmunire,—

That therefore such a writ be su'd against you;

To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,

Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be

Out of the king's protection:—This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations

How to live better. For your stubborn answer,

About the giving back the great seal to us,

The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you.

So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

[Exeunt all but Wolsey.]

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me.

Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!

This is the state of man; To-day he puts forth

The tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;

And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a ripening,—nips his root,

And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,

Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,

This many summers in a sea of glory;

But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride

At length broke under me; and now has left me,

Weary, and old with service, to the mercy

Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.

Vain pomp, and glory of this world, I hate ye;

I feel my heart new open'd: O, how wretched

Is that poor man, that hangs on princes' favours!

There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,

That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,

More pangs and fears than wars or women have;

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,

Never to hope again.—

Enter CROMWELL, amazedly.

Why, how now, Cromwell?

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What, amaz'd

At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder,

A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,

I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well;

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.

I know myself now; and I feel within me

A peace above all earthly dignities,

A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,

I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken

A load would sink a navy, too much honour:

O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden,

Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad, your grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope, I have: I am able now, methinks,

(Out of a fortune of soul I feel,)

To endure more miseries, and greater far,
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is, that sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake, and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course, and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome,
Install'd lord archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down.

O Cromwell,
The king has gone beyond me, all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell,
I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: Seek the king;
That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him
What, and how true thou art: he will advance thee;
Some little memory of me will stir him,
(I know his noble nature,) not to let
Thy hopeful service perish too: Good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord,
Must I then leave you? must I needs forego

So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his life!
The king shall have my service; but my prayer
For ever, and for ever, shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a

Out of thy honest truth to play the woman.

thee;

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

A street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You are well met once again.

2 Gent. And so are you.

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,

The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;

This, general joy.

2 Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shewn at full their royal minds;
As, let them have their rights, they are ever forward
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?

1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day,

By custom of the coronation.

The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims

To be high steward; next, the duke of Norfolk,

He to be earl marshal; you may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,

I should have been beholden to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

Learned and reverend fathers of his order,

Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Amphyll, where the princess lay; to which

She oft was cited by them, but appear'd
And, to be short, for not appearance, and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men she was divorc'd
And the late marriage made of none effect
Since which, she was removed to Kimbolton
Where she remains now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good

The trumpets sound: stand close, the coming.

richly adorned with pearl, crowned, side of her, the bishops of London a ast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.—

I have a soul, she is an angel;

Cinque-ports.

old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.

t. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

t. Their coronets say so. These are stars, metimes, falling ones.

t. No more of that.
[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets.]

Enter a third Gentleman.

o money? You saw

That I did. How was it?

Well worth the seeing.
Good sir, speak it to us.

As well as I am able. The rich stream and ladies, having brought the queen par'd place in the choir, fell off ce from her, while her grace sat down while, some half an hour, or so, chair of state, opposing freely
ty of her person to the people.

oe, sir, she is the goodliest woman
y lay by man: which when the people full view of, such a noise arose rouds make at sea in a stiff tempest, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,
s, I think,) flew up; and had their faces
s, this day they had been lost. Such joy aw before. Great-hellied women, not half a week to go, like rams
d time of war, would shake the press, e them reel before them. No man living y, this is my wife, there; all were woven ely in one piece.

But, 'pray, what follow'd?

At length her grace rose, and with mo-
it paces

again, and bow'd her to the people:

the archbishop of Canterbury all the royal makings of a queen;

il, Edward Confessor's crown, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

ly on her: which perform'd, the choir,
the choicest musick of the kingdom, sung Te Deum. So she parted, the same full state pac'd back again place, where the feast is held.

Sir, you
nore call it York-place, that is past:

the cardinal fell, that title's lost;
the king's, and call'd—Whitehall.

I know it;
lately alter'd, that the old name

Is fresh about me.

2 Gent. What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the queen?

3 Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one, of Winchester,

(Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary.)
The other, London.

2 Gent. He of Winchester

Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Cranmer.

3 Gent. All the land knows that:
However, yet there's no great breach; when it comes,
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.

2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?

3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell;

A man in much esteem with the king, and truly

A worthy friend.—The king

Has made him master o'the jewel-house,

And one, already, of the privy-council.

2 Gent. He will deserve more.

3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt.

Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which

Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests;

Something I can command. As I walk thither,

I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir.
[Ereunt.]

SCENE II.

Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE.

Grif. How does your grace?

Kath. O, Griffith, sick to death:

My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,

Willing to leave their burden: Reach a chair:—

So,—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou ledd'st me,

That the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey,

Was dead?

Grif. Yes, madam; but, I think, your grace,

Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath. Pr'ythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died:

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,

For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:

For after the stout earl Northumberland

Arrested him at York, and brought him forward

(As a man sorely tainted) to his answer,

He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill,

He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man!

Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester,

Lodg'd in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,

With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him;

To whom he gave these words,—O father abbot,

An old man, broken with the storms of state,

Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;

Give him a little earth for charity!

So went to bed: where eagerly the sickness

Pursu'd him still; and, three nights after this,

About the hour of eight, (which he himself

Foretold, should be his last,) full of repentance

Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,

He gave his honours to the world again,

His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,

And yet with charity,—He was a man

Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking

Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion

Ty'd all the kingdom: simony was fair play;

His own opinion was his law: I' the presence

He would say untruths; and be ever double,

Both in his words and meaning: He was never,

But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:

His promises were, as he then was, mighty;

But his performance, as he is now, nothing.

Of his own body he was ill, and gave

The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues

We write in water. May it please your highness

To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;

I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour. From his cradle,
He was a scholar, and a ripe, and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading;
Lofty, and sour, to them that lov'd him not;
But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer.
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died, fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth, and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour: Peace be with him!—
Patience, he near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn musick.

Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down
quiet,

For fear we wake her;—Softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden wizards on their faces; branches of bays, or palm, in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverent court'sies: then the two that held the garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe; the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as if it were by inspiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The musick continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for: Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop?

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces

Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?

They promis'd me eternal happiness;

And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel

I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall,

Assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams

Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the musick leave,

They are harsh and heavy to me. [Musick ceases.

Pat. Do you note,

How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?

How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,

And of an earthly cold? Mark you her eyes?

Grif. She is going, wench; pray, pray,

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—

Kath. You are a saucy fellow:

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to me,
Knowing, she will not lose her wonted grace,
To use so rude behaviour: go to, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness;

My haste made me unmanerly: There is

A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: I bid

you

Let me ne'er see again.

[Exeunt Griffith and Messenger.]

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail

You should be lord ambassador from the king

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

A gallery in the Palace.

ARDINER Bishop of Winchester, a Page torch before him, met by Sir THOMAS MILL.

't's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

It hath struck.

These should be hours for necessities, delights; times to repair our nature in moforting repose, and not for us in these times.—Good bour of night, sir Thomas!

so late?
Came you from the king, my lord?
did, sir Thomas; and left him at primero
duke of Suffolk.

I must to him too,
I'll take my leave.
Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

You are in haste: an if there be offence belongs to't, give your friend ch of your late business: Affairs, that walk say, spirits do,) at midnight, have a wilder nature, than the business a despatch by day.

My lord, I love you;
I commend a secret to your ear lighter than this work. The queen's in our,

, in great extremity; and fear'd,
th the labour end.

The fruit, she goes with, heartily; that it may find s, and live: but for the stock, sir Thomas, grubb'd up now.

Methinks, I could omen; and yet my conscience says good creature, and, sweet lady, does ar better wishes.

But, sir, sir,—
sir Thomas: You are a gentleman own way; I know you wise, religious;
me tell you, it will ne'er be well,—
t, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me, mer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
heir graves.

Now, sir, you speak of two remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Crom-

),—
at of the jewel-house, he's made master s, and the king's secretary; further, sir,
the gap and trade of more preferments, ich the time will load him: The arch-top
's hand, and tongue; And who dare speak
ole against him?

Yes, yes, sir Thomas,
that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
my mind of him: and, indeed, this day, (y tell it you,) I think, I have he lords o' the council, that he is know he is, they know he is,) th heretick, a pestilence, infect the land: with which they mov'd, an with the king; who hath so far to our complaint, (of his great grace ely care; foreseeing those fell mischiefs as laid before him,) he hath commanded,
v morning to the council-board vented. He's a rank weed, sir Thomas, rust root him out. From your affairs you too long: good night, sir Thomas.
my good nights, my lord; I rest your
ant. [Exeunt Gardiner and Page.]

ELL is going out, enter the King, and the Duke of SUFFOLK.

Charles, I will play no more to-night;
' not on't, you are too hard for me.
, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play.—
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?
Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your high-

ness;
Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou? ha!

To pray for her? what, is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made

Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas, good lady!
Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladdening of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles,
Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that, which company
Will not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness

A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.—
[Exit Suffolk.]

Enter Sir ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,
As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true: Where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.

[Exit Denny.]

Lov. This is about that which the bishop spake;

I am happily come hither. [Aside.]

Re-enter DENNY with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.

[Lovell seems to stay.]

Ha!—I have said.—Be gone.

What!— [Exeunt Lovell and Denny.]

Cran. I am fearful:—Wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord? You do desire to know

Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty

To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,

My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.

Come, you and I must walk a turn together;

I have news to tell you: Come, come, give me your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,

And am right sorry to repeat what follows:

I have, and most unwillingly, of late

Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,

Grievous complaints of you; which, being consider'd,

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall

This morning come before us; where, I know,

You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,

But that, till further trial, in those charges

Which will require your answer, you must take

Your patience to you, and be well contented

To make your house our Tower: You a brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness

Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your highness;

And am right glad to catch this good occasion

Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff

And corn shall fly asunder: for, I know,

There's none stands under more calumnious tongues,

Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury;

Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted

In us, thy friend: Give me thy hand, stand up;

Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy-dame, What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you Without indurance, further.

Cran. Most dread liege, The good I stand on is my truth, and honesty; If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies, Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not, Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not how Your state stands i'the world, with the whole world? Your enemies Are many, and not small; their practices Must bear the same proportion: and not ever The justice and the truth o'the question carries The due o'the verdict with it: At what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt To swear against you? such things have been done. You are potently oppos'd; and with a malice Of as great size. When you of better luck, I mean, in perjurd witness, than your master, Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to; You take a precipice for no leap of danger, And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God, and your majesty, Protect mine innocence, or I fall into The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer; They shall no more prevail, than we give way to. Keep comfort to you; and this morning see You do appear before them: if they shall chance, In charging you with matters, to commit you, The best persuasions to the contrary Fail not to use, and with what vehemency The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties Will render you no remedy, this ring Deliver them, and your appeal to us. There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps!

He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother! I swear, he is true-hearted; and a soul None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone, And do as I have bid you.—[Exit Cranmer.] He has strangled His language in his tears.

Enter an old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back; What mean you? Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings, that I bring, Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good angels Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd? Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege; And of a lovely boy: The God of heaven Both now and ever bless her!—'Tis a girl, Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you, As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell,—

Enter LOVELL.

Lov. Sir.

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit King.]

Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll have more.

An ordinary groom is for such payment. I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this, the girl is like to him? I will have more, or else unsay't; and now While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Lobby before the council-chamber.

Enter CRANMER; Servants, Door-keeper, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope, I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,

That was sent to me from the council, pray To make great haste. All fast? what mean —Hca?

Who waits there? Sure, you know me?

D. Keep. Yes, my lord.

But yet I cannot help you. Why?

D. Keep. Your grace must wait, till call'd for.

Enter Doctor BUTTS.

Cran. This is a piece of malice. I am I came this way so happily: The king Shall understand it presently. [Exit]

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts, The king's physician; As he past along, How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me! Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For This is of purpose lay'd by some that hate (God turn their hearts!) I never sought them To quench mine honour: they would s make me Wait else at door; a fellow counsellor, Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. F pleasures Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience

Enter at a window above, the King and Butts. I'll show your grace the strangers

K. Hen. What's that day. I think, your highness saw this

K. Hen. Body o'me, where is it? Butts. There,

The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pages, and footboys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed Is this the honour they do one another?

'Tis well, there's one above them yet. I had They had parted so much honesty among (At least, good manners,) as not thus to A man of his place, and so near our favor To dance attendance on their lordships: And at the door too, like a post with pain. By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery: Let them alone, and draw the curtain off. We shall hear more anon.—

The council-chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, Duke of Suffolk, Duke of NORFOLK, Earl of SURR Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROMWELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper table on the left hand; a seat being above him, as for the Archbishop of Canterbury. The rest seat themselves in order on CROMWELL at the lower end, as see Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary. Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honor, The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who was it?

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop,

And has done half an hour, to know your

Chan. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter.

[Cranmer approaches the council.]

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am To sit here at this present, and behold That chair stand empty: But we all are In our own natures frail; and capable Of our flesh, few are angels: out of which And want of wisdom, you, that best should Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a lie Toward the king first, then his laws, in The whole realm, by your teaching chaplains,

(For so we are inform'd,) with new opinions Divers, and dangerous; which are heresies And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious

r. Which reformation must be sudden too, noble lords: for those that tame wild horses, them not in their hands to make them gentle; stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur them, they obey the manage. If we suffer of our easiness, and childish pity to man's honour) this contagious sickness, sell, all physick: And what follows then? riotous, uproars, with a general taint of whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours, upper Germany, can dearly witness, freshly pitied in our memories.

r. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress of my life and office, I have labour'd, with no little study, that my teaching, be strong course of my authority, go one way, and safely; and the end ever, to do well: nor is there living a man that with a single heart, my lords,) o, that more detests, more stirs against, in his private conscience, and his place, of a publick peace, than I do. heaven, the king may never find a heart less allegiance in it! Men, that make and crooked malice, nourishment, bite the best. I do beseech your lordships, in this case of justice, my accusers, that they will, may stand forth face to face, reely urge against me.

Nay, my lord, cannot be; you are a counsellor, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you. My lord, because we have business of more moment, will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure, our consent, for better trial of you, hence you be committed to the Tower; as, being but a private man again, shall know many dare accuse you boldly, than, I fear, you are provided for.

r. Ah, my good lord of Winchester, I thank you, re always my good friend; if your will pass, I both find your lordship judge and juror, re so merciful: I see your end, y undoing: Love, and meekness, lord, e a churchman better than ambition; praying souls with modesty again, one away. That I shall clear myself, U the weight ye can upon my patience, s as little doubt, as you do conscience ng daily wrongs. I could say more, verence to your calling makes me modest.

My lord, my lord, you are a sectary, the plain truth; your painted gloss discovers, a that understand you, words and weakness.

r. My lord of Winchester, you are a little, at good favour, too sharp; men so noble, er faulty, yet should find respect hat they have been: 'tis a cruelty, d a falling man.

Good master secretary,

our honour mercy; you may, worst this table, say so.

r. Why, my lord?

Do not I know you for a favourer of new sect? ye are not sound.

r. Not sound, I say.

'Would you were half so honest! prayers then would seek you, not their fears. I shall remember this bold language.

r. Do.

ber your bold life too.

r. This is too much; t, for shame, my lords.

r. I have done.

r. And I.

Then thus for you, my lord,—It stands agreed, is, by all voices, that forthwith convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;

to remain, till the king's further pleasure be unto us: Are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome. Let some o'the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?

Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him, And see him safe i'the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords, I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords; By virtue of that ring, I take my cause Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven: I told ye all, When we first put this dangerous stone a rolling, 'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords, The king will suffer but the little finger Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too certain: How much more is his life in value with him? 'Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me, In seeking tales, and informations, Against this man, (whose honesty the devil And his disciples only envy at), Ye blew the fire that burns ye: Now have at ye.

Enter King, frowning on them; takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince; Not only good and wise, but most religious: One that, in all obedience, makes the church The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen That holy duty, out of dear respect, His royal self in judgment comes to hear The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not To hear such flattery now, and in my presence; They are too thin and base to hide offences. To me you cannot reach, you play the spaniel, And think with wagging of your tongue to win me; But, whatsoever thou tak'st me for, I am sure, Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody.— Good man, [To Crommer.] sit down. Now let me see the proudest

He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee: By all that's holy, he had better starve, Than but once think his place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your grace,—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me. I had thought, I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom, of my council; but I find none. Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, This good man, (few of you deserve that title), This honest man, wait like a lowly footboy

At chamber door? and one as great as you are? Why, what a shame was this? Did my commission Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him,

Not as a groom; There's some of ye, I see, More out of malice than integrity, Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean; Which ye shall never have, while I live.

Chan. Thus far, My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd Concerning his imprisonment, was rather (If there be faith in men) meant for his trial, And fair purgation to the world, than malice; I am sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him; Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it. I will say thus much for him, If a prince May be beholden to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him.

F t

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;
Be friends, for shame, my lords.—My lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,
You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory
In such an honour; How may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons; you shall have

Two noble partners with you; the old duchess of Norfolk,

And lady marqu's Dorset; Will these please you?
Once more, my lord of Winchester, I charge you,
Embrace, and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart,
And brother-love, I do it.

Cran. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart.

The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus, *Do my lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.*—

Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.

As I have made ye ope, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Palace yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals:
Do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue: 'Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones; these are but switches to them.—I'll scratch your heads:
You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient; 'tis as much impossible

(Unless we sweep them from the door with cannons)
To scatter them, as 'tis to make them sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be:
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir them.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; How gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot

(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Sampson, nor sir Guy, nor Col-brand, to mow them down before me: but, if I spared any, that had a head to hit, either young or old, he or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, let me never hope to see a chine again; and that I would not for a cow, God save her.

[Within.] Do you hear, master Porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock them down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! on my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o'my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her porringer fell off her head, for kindling an combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor and hit that woman, who cried out, clubs! I might see from far some forty truncheoners to her succour, which were the hope of the S.

where she was quartered. They fell on; I good my place; at length they came to the staff with me, I defied them still; when suddenly a file of boys behind them, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to mine honour in, and let them win the work:
devil was amongst them, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunders play-house, and fight for bitten apples; the audience but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, ar-re to endure. I have some of them in Limbo Pl.
and there they are like to dance these three besides the running banquet of two beads, to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o'me, what a multitude are
They grow still too, from all parts they are
As if we kept a fair here! Where are these p-These lazy knaves?—Ye have made a fine fellows.

There's a trim rabble let in: Are all these
Your faithful friends o'the suburbs? We sh-Great store of room, no doubt, left for the
When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your
We are but men; and what so many may
Not being torn a pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule them.

Cham. As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your Clap round fines, for neglect: You are lazy!
And here ye lie baiting of bombard, when Ye should do service. Hark, the trumpets

They are come/already from the christening
Go, break among the press, and find a way
To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find A Marshalsea, shall hold you play the months.

Port. Make way there for the princess.
Man. You great fellow, stand close up, make your head ake.

Port. You i'the camblet, get up o'the re-pick you o'er the pales else.

SCENE IV.

The Palace.

*Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Al-
Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, Duke of FOLK, with his marshal's staff, Duke of FOLK, two Noblemen bearing great st-bowls for the christening gifts; then four men bearing a canopy, under which the of NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the chilhabited in a mantle, &c. Train borne by then follows the Marchioness of DORSET, godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass on the stage, and Garter speaks.*

Gar. Heaven, from thy endless goodness prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth

Flourish. Enter King and Train.

Craa. [Knelling.] And to your royal gra-
the good queen,

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray;
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy
May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord arch-
What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up,
[The King kisses the

With this kiss take my blessing: God prote-
Into whose hands I give thy life.

Cran. Amen.

Gen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal:
ik ye heartily; so shall this lady,
she has so much English.

Let me speak, sir,
heaven now bids me; and the words I utter one think flattery, for they'll find them truth.
royal infant, (heaven still move about her!)
ch in her cradle, yet now promises this land a thousand thousand blessings, h time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be ew now living can behold that goodness) tern to all princes living with her, ll that shall succeed: Sheba was never corsetous of wisdom, and fair virtue,
this pure soul shall be: all princely graces, ould up such a mighty piece as this is,
all the virtues that attend the good,
still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse her,
and heavenly thoughts still counsel her:
hall be lov'd, and fear'd: Her own shall bless her:
es shake like a field of beaten corn,
ang their heads with sorrow: Good grows
with her:
days, every man shall eat in safety
his own vine, what he plants; and sing erry songs of peace to all his neighbours:
hall be truly known; and those about her her shall read the perfect ways of honour.
y those claim their greatness, not by blood.
all this peace sleep with her: But as when rd of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix, bes new create another heir,
at in admiration as herself;
ll she leave her blessedness to one, heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness.)

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd: Peace, plenty, love, truth,
terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him;
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations: He shall flourish,
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his brauches
To all the plains about him:—Our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of Eug-
land,

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
'Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin,
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O lord archbishop,

Thou hast made me now a man; never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing:
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
That, when I am in heaven, I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.—
I thank ye all,—To you, my good lord mayor,
And your good brethren, I am much beholden;
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way,
lords;—

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye,
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
He has business at his house; for all shall stay,
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

len to one, this play can never please
t are here: Some come to take their ease, sep an act or two; but those, we fear,
ve frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear, say, 'tis naught: others, to hear the city extremely, and to cry,—that's witty!
we have not done neither: that, I fear,

All the expected good we are like to hear
For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd them; If they smile,
And say, 'twill do, I know, within a while
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap,
If they hold, when their ladies bid them clap.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
 The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
 Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
 Fraught with the ministers and instruments
 Of cruel war: Sixty and nine, that wore
 Their crowns regal, from the Athenian bay
 Put forth toward Phrygia: and their vow is made,
 To ransack Troy; within whose strong immures
 The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
 With wanton Paris sleeps; And that's the quarrel.
 To Tenedos they come;
 And the deep-drawing barks do there discharge
 Their warlike freightage: Now on Dardan plains
 The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
 Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,

Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilios, Chetas, Trojan,
 And Antenorides, with massy staples,
 And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
 Sperr up the sons of Troy.
 Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
 On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
 Sets all on hazard:—And hither am I come
 A prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
 Of author's pen, or actor's voice; but said
 In like conditions as our argument,—
 To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
 Leaps o'er the vauit and firstlings of those broils,
 'Ginning in the middle; starting thence away
 To what may be digested in a play.
 Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
 Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Troy. Before Priam's Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet, I'll unarm again:
 Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
 That find such cruel battie here within?
 Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
 Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this geer ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,

Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant:
 But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
 Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance;
 Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
 And skill-less as unpractic'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further. He, that will have a cake out of the wheat, must tarry
 the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening: but here's yet in the word—hereafter; the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; may you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
 Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.

At Priam's royal table do I sit;
 And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts—
 So, traitor!—when she comes!—When in what thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—When my heart
 As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain;
 Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
 I have (as when the sun doth light a storm)
 Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:

But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
 Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to,) there were no more comparison between the women,—But, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they it, praise her,—But I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispute your sister Cassandra's wit; but—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—

TROILUS & CRESSIDA.

Act 5. Sc. 3.

Published by W. Pickering, 57, Chancery Lane 1824.

When I do tell thee, There my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
Thy lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: Thou answer'st, She is fair;
Pur'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handless in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach; To whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense Kiss as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st
me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say—I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me,
The knife, that made it.

Pa. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pa. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; and as she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus?

Pa. I have had my labour for my travel; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what,
with me?

Pa. Because she is kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Monday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pa. I do not care whether you do or no. She's as fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me,
she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Monday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pa. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pa. Pray you, speak no more to me; I will move all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit Pandarus. An Alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Pa. On both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this argument;

It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

Tro. Pandarus—O gods, how do you plague me!

I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;

And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,

As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,

What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?

Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:

Between our Ilium, and where she resides,

There he is called the wild and wandering Hood;

The merchant; and this sailing Pandar,

With doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter AENEAS.

Aen. How now, prince Troilus? wherefore not asfield?

Tro. Because not there; This woman's answer sorts,

For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Aeneas, from the field to-day?

Aen. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Aeneas?

Aen. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;

Paris is gerd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.

Aen. Hark! what good sport is out of town to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if would I might, were may.—

Aen. To the sport abroad;—Are you bound thither?

Tro. In all swift haste.

Come, go we then together.

[Exit.

SCENE II.

The same. A street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Pa. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.

Cris. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience

Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was mov'd:

He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer;

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose, he was harness'd light,

And to the field goes he; where every flower

Did, as a prophet weep, what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath.

Cris. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: There is among the Greeks

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him, Ajax.

Cris. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,

And stands alone.

Cris. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue, that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attain, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: He hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cris. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cris. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cris. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pa. What's that? what's that?

Cris. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pa. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cris. This morning, uncle.

Pa. What were you talking of, when I came?

Was Hector arm'd, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium?

Helen was not up, was she?

Cris. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up;

Pa. E'en so; Hector was stirring early.

Cris. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pa. Was he angry?

Cris. So he says here.

Pa. True, he was so; I know the cause too;

he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that:

and there is Troilus will not come far behind him;

let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cris. What, is he angry too?

Pa. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cris. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pa. What, not between Troilus and Hector?

Do you know a man, if you see him?

Cris. Ay; if I ever saw him before, and knew

him.

Pa. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cris. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pa. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cris. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pa. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were,—

Cris. So he is.

Pa. —'Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cris. He is not Hector.

T t 2

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—'Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; Time must friend, or end. Well, Troilus, well,—I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. The other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities;—

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must confess,)—Not brown neither.

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief, Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think, Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into a compass'd window,—and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But, to prove to you, that Helen loves him;—she came, and puts me her white hand to his eloven chin,—

Cres. Juno have mercy!—How came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think, his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then:—But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,— Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i'the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin;—Indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing;—Queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes;—Did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs your chin, and one of them is white.

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white; white hair is my father, and all the rest are his Jupiter! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris husband? The forked one, quoth he; pluck it and give it him. But, there was such laugh and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, a the rest so laughed, that it pass'd.

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yeste think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an a nettle against May. [A retreat son]

Pan. Hark, they are coming from the Shall we stand up here, and see them, at pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place we may see most bravely: I'll tell you that by their names, as they pass by; but mark 'a above the rest.

ÆNEAS passes over the stage.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Æneas; Is not that a brave he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell. But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

ANTENOR passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor; he has a shrewd can tell you; and he's a man good enough one o'the soundest judgments in Troy, whi and a proper man of person:—When comes —I'll show you Troilus anon; if he see I shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look yo There's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector; a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—L he looks! there's a countenance: Is't not man?

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart Look you what hacks are on his helmet? yonder, do you see? look you there! Th jesting: there's laying on; take't off who they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

PARIS passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not devil come to him, it's all one: By god does one's heart good:—Yonder comes Pe der comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece; a gallant man too, is't not?—Why, this now.—Who said, he came hurt home to not hurt: why, this will do Helen's be now. Ha! would I could see Troilus ne shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who's that?

HELENUS passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus,—I marvel, wher is:—That's Helenus;—I think he went to-day:—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight i well:—I marvel, where Troilus is!—Har not hear the people cry, Troilus!—Helen priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes you

TROIILUS passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deipho

as! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave as! the prince of chivalry!

3. Peace, for shame, peace!

3. Mark him; note him;—O brave Troilus! well upon him, niece; look you, how his helm is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than mine's; and how he looks, and how he goes!—Miserable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty way Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister as grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should be my choice. O admirable man! Paris?—Paris is to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, I give an eye to boot.

Forces pass over the stage.

3. Here come more.

1. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the asses are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

2. There is among the Greeks, Achilles; a man than Troilus.

3. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

2. Well, well.

3. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion you any eyes? Do you know what a man is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, good learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberty, and such like, the spice and salt that makes a man?

2. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked no date in the pye,—for then the man's date is.

1. You are such a woman! one knows not at ward you lie.

2. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my side, to defend my wiles; and upon my secrecy, to end mine honesty; my mask, to defend my face; and you, to defend all these: and at all wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

1. Say one of your watches.

2. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward I would not have hit; I can watch you for how I took the blow; unless it swell past 3, and then it is past watching.

1. You are such another!

Enter Troilus's Boy.

1. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

2. Where?

1. At your own house; there he unarms him.

1. Good boy, tell him I come: [Exit Boy.] But he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

2. Adieu, uncle.

1. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

2. To bring, uncle,—

1. Ay, a token from Troilus.

2. By the same token—you are a bawd.—

[Exit Pandarus.]

2. O, vows, griefs, tears, and love's full sacrifice, offers in another's enterprize:

in Troilus thousand fold I see in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;

old I off. Women are angels, wooing:

when won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:

she, below'd, knows nought, that knows not this,— prize the thing, ungain'd, more than it is:

she was never yet, that ever knew got so sweet, as when desire did sue:

before this maxim out of love I teach,— love is command; ungain'd, beseech:

though my heart's content firm love doth bear,

of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Grecian camp. Before Agamemnon's tent.

Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and Others.

1. Princes,

grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?

ample proposition, that hope makes

In all designs began on earth below,
Falls in the promis'd largeness: checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;

As knots, by the confix of meeting sap,

Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain

Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us,

That we come short of our suppose so far,

That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls stand;

Sith every action, that hath gone before,

Whereof we have record, trial did draw

Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,

And that unbodied figure of the thought,

That gav't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works;

And think them shames, which are, indeed, nought

else

But the protractive trials of great Jove,

To find persistent constancy in men?

The fineness of which metal is not found

In fortune's love: for then, the bold and coward,

The wise and fool, the artist and unlearned,

The hard and soft, seem all affix'd and kin:

But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,

Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,

Puffing at all, winnows the light away;

And what hath mass, or matter, by itself

Lies, rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply

Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance

Lies the true proof of men: The sea being smooth,

How many shallow bauble boats dare sail

Upon her patient breast, making their way

With those of nobler bulk?

But let the ruffian Boreas once engage

The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold

The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains

cut,

Bounding between the two moist elements,

Like Perseus' horse: Where's then the stately boat,

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now

Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbour fled,

Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so

Doth valour's show, and valour's worth, divide,

In storms of fortune: For, in her ray and brightness,

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze,

Than by the tiger: but when the splitting wind

Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,

And flies fled under shade, Why, then, the thing

of courage,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,

And with an accent tun'd in self-same key,

Returns to chiding fortune.

Ulyss.

Agamemnon,—

Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,

In whom the tempers and the minds of all

Should be shut up,—bear what Ulysses speaks.

Besides the applause and approbation

The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway,—

And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,—

[To Agamemnon.]

I give to both your speeches,—which were such,

As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece

Should hold up high in brass; and such again,

As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,

Should with a bond of air (stroug as the axletree

On which heaven rides), knit all the Greekish ears

To his experienc'd tongue,—yet let it please both,—

Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect

That matter needless, of importless burden,

Divide thy lips; that we are confident,

When rank Thersites opens his mastiff jaws,

We shall hear musick, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,

But for these instances.

The speciality of rule hath been neglected:

And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand

Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.

When that the general is not like the hive,

To whom the foragers shall all repair,
 What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
 The unworthing shows as fairly in the mask.
 The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre,
 Observe degree, priority, and place,
 Insistence, course, proportion, season, form,
 Office, and custom, in all line of order:
 And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
 In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
 Amidst the other; whose medicinal eye
 Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
 And posts, like the commandment of a king, Sans check, to good and bad: But, when the planets,

In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
 What plagues, and what portents? what mutiny?
 What raging of the sea? shaking of earth?
 Commotion in the winds? frights, changes, horrors,
 Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
 The unity and married calm of states
 Quite from their fixture? O, when degree is shak'd,
 Which is the ladder of all high designs,
 The enterprise is sick! How could communities,
 Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
 Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
 The primogenitive and due of birth,
 Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
 But by degree, stand in authentic place?
 Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
 In mere oppugnancy: The bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
 And make a sop of all this solid globe:
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead:
 Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
 (Between whose endless jar justice resides),
 Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
 Then every thing includes itself in power,
 Power into will, will into appetite;
 And appetite, an universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,
 Must make perforce an universal prey,
 And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
 This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
 Follows the choking.

And this neglect of degree it is,
 That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
 It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
 By him one step below; he, by the next;
 That next, by him beneath: so every step,
 Exemplary by the first pace that is sick
 Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
 Of pale and bloodless emulation:
 And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
 Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
 Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
 The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
 What is the remedy?

Ulyss. The great Achilles,—whom opinion crowns
 The sinew and the forehead of our host,—
 Having his ear full of his airy fame,
 Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
 Lies mocking our designs: With him, Patroclus,
 Upon a lazy bed the live-long day
 Breaks scurril jests;
 And with ridiculous and aukward action
 (Which, slanderer, he imitation calls),
 He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
 Thy topless deputation he puts on;
 And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
 Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
 To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,—
 Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
 He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms unsquar'd,
 Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
 Would seem hyperbules. At this fusty stuff,
 The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
 Cries—Excellent!—'tis Agamemnon just.—
*Now play me Nestor;—hem, and stroke thy beard,
 As he, being 'drest to some oration.*

That's done;—as near as the extremest ends
 Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife:
 Yet good Achilles still cries, Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right! Now play him me, Patroclus!
Arming to answer in a night alarm,
 And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
 Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit
 And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,
 Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport
 Sir Valour dies; cries, O!—enough, Patroclus!
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen. And in this fashion,
 All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
 Severals and generals of grace exact,
 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
 Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
 Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves
 As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain (Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
 With an imperial voice,) many are infect.
 Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head
 In such a rein, in full as proud a place
 As broad Achilles: keeps his tent like him;
 Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war
 Bold as an oracle: and sets Theristes
 (A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint
 To match us in comparisons with dirt;
 To weaken and discredit our exposure,
 How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it coward
 Count wisdom as no member of the war;
 Forestall presence, and esteem no act
 But that of hand: the still and mental parts,
 That do contrive how many hands shall strike
 When fitness calls them on; and know, by me
 Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight—
 Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
 They call this—bed-work, mappery, closet-walk
 So that the ram, that batters down the wall,
 For the great swing and rudeness of his point
 They place before his hand that made the eye
 Or those, that with the fineness of their souls
 By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' he Makes many Thetis' sons. [Trumpet so Agam. What trumpet? look, Men

Enter ÆNEAS.

Men. From Troy.

Agam. What would you 'fore our

Æne. Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray!

Agam. Even this

Æne. May one, that is a herald, and a pr
 Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles'
 'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one
 Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave, and large security. How
 A stranger to those most imperial looks
 Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. He

Æne. Ay;

I ask, that I might waken reverence,
 And bid the cheek be ready with a blush,
 Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
 The youthful Phoebus:

Which is that god in office, guiding men?
 Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of
 Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd
 As bending angels; that's their fame in peace
 But when they would seem soldiers, they galls,

Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and,
 accord,

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas
 Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips!
 The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
 If that the prais'd himself bring the praise
 But what the repining enemy commends,
 That breath fame follows; that praise, sole transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Æ

Ay, Greek, that is my name.

What's your affair, I pray you?
Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.
He hears enough privately, that comes on Troy.

Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him:
a trumpet to awake his ear;
in sense on the attentive heat,
to speak.

Speak frankly as the wind;
Agamemnon's sleeping hour:
you shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
thence so himself.

Trumpet, blow loud,
through all these lazy tents;—
Greek of mettle, let him know, roy means fairly, shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.]
O great Agamemnon, here in Troy call'd Hector, (Priam is his father,) this dull and long-continued truce grown; he bade me take a trumpet, his purpose speak: Kings, princes, lords!
be one, among the fair'st of Greece,
his honour higher than his ease;
his praise more than he fears his peril;
his valour, and knows not his fear;
his mistress more than in confession,
swears her own lips he loves,
he avow her beauty and her worth,
arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
in view of Trojans and of Greeks, make it good, or do his best to do it,
a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Greek did compass in his arms;
to-morrow with his trumpet call,
between your tents and walls of Troy,
a Grecian that is true in love:
me, Hector shall honour him;
he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
Grecian dames are sun-burn'd, and not worth ster of a lance. Even so much.

This shall be told our lovers, lord Æneas;
if them have soul in such a kind,
them all at home: But we are soldiers;
that soldier a mere recreant prove,
and not, hath not, or is not in love!
he is, or hath, or means to be,
meets Hector: if none else, I am he.
Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now; here be not in our Grecian host the man, that hath one spark of fire er for his love, Tell him from me,— my silver beard in a gold heaver, my vantage put this wither'd brawn;
telling him, will tell him, that my lady er than his grandame, and as chaste be in the world: His youth in flood,
this truth with my three drops of blood.
Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!
Amen.

Fair lord Æneas, let me touch your hand;
avilion shall I lead you, sir,
shall have word of this intent;
each lord of Greece, from tent to tent:
shall feast with us before you go,
the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor.]

Nestor,—
What says Ulysses?
I have a young conception in my brain,
at time to bring it to some shape.
What is't?
This 'tis:
edges rive hard knots: The seeded pride
h to this maturity blown up Achilles, must or now be cropp'd, ding, breed a nursery of like evil,

To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge, that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,

Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,

Whose grossness little characters sum up:
And, in the publication, make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough,—will with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?
Nest. Yes,

It is most meet; Whom may you else oppose,
That can from Hector bring those honours off,
If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate: And trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wild action: for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election; and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; Who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence a conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech;—
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,
By showing the worse first. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes; what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should share with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Africk sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair: if he were foul'd,
Why, then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: Among ourselves,
Give him allowance for the better man,
For that will physick the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris heads.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: If he fall,
Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax, employ'd, plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith.
To Agamemnon; go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other; Pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Another part of the Grecian camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites,—

Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils? full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites,—

Ther. And those boils did run?—Say so,—did not the general run then? were not that a hotchy core?

Ajax. Dog,—

Ther. Then would come some matter from him; I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel then. [Strikes him.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou unsalted leaven, speak: I'll heat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o'thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think, I have no sense, thou strikest me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not; my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—

Ther. Thou grumblest and raillest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would puu thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur!

[Beating him.

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows! an assinego may tutor thee: Thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here put to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. You cur!

[Beating him.

Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax? wherefore do you thus?

How now, Thersites? what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do; What's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain, more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pits matter is not worth the ninth part of a This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his his belly, and his guts in his head,—I'll what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax—

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

[Ajax offers to strike him, Achilles in Ther. Has not so much wit—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's ne whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and quietness fool will not: he here; and that he; look you!

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl, go learn me th of the proclamation, and he rails upon me

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well; go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance; voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary; here the voluntary, and you as under an Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, you plough up the wars.

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth; To, Achilles! to,

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as thou, afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace

Ther. I will hold my peace, when Achil bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like clot I come any more to your tents; I will ke there is wit stirring, and leave the factio Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaimed th our host:

That Hector, by the first hour of the sun Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents as To-morrow morning call some knight to: That hath a stomach; and such a one, th Maintain—I know not what; 'tis trash:

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer hi

Achil. I know not, it is put to lottery; c He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you:—I'll go learn n

Troy. A room in Priam's Palace

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speech Thus once again says Nestor from the Gr Deliver Helen, and all damage else—

As honour, loss of time, travail, expence, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is In hot digestion of this cormorant war,—

 And do a deed that fortune never did,

 Richer than sea and land? O theft most base;
 That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
 But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
 That in their country did them that disgrace,
 We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!
Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?
Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.
Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!
Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,
 And I will fill them with prophetic tears.
Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled elders,

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
 Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
 A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
 Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
 Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand;
 Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.
 Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe:
 Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.
Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work
 Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
 So readily hot, that no discourse of reason,
 Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
 Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
 We may not think the justness of each act
 Such and no other than event doth form it;
 Nor once defect the courage of our minds,
 Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures
 Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
 Which hath our several honours all engag'd
 To make it gracious. For my private part,
 I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
 And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
 Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
 To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levity
 As well my undertakings, as your counsels:
 But I attest the gods, your full consent
 Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
 All fears attending on so dire a project.
 For what, alas, can these my single arms?
 What propugnation is in one man's valour,
 To stand the push and enmity of these?
 This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
 Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
 And had as ample power as I have will,
 Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
 Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
 Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
 You have the honey still, but these the gall;
 So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
 The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
 But I would have the soil of her fair rape
 Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.
 What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
 Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
 Now to deliver her possession up
 On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
 That so degenerate a stain as this
 Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
 There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
 Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
 When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
 Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
 Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,
 We'll may we fight for her, whom we know well,
 The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well;
 And on the cause and question now in hand
 Have glaz'd,—but superficially; not much
 Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
 Unfit to hear moral philosophy:

The reasons, you allege, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; For pleasure and revenge
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All dues be render'd to their owners; Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than wife is to the husband? if this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection;
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth: yet, ne'ertheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause, that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:
Were it not glory, that we more affected
Than the performance of our hearing spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame, in time to come, canonize us:
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.—
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits:
I was advertis'd their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept;
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Grecian camp. Before Achilles' tent.

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, THERSITES? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! 'would, it were otherwise;
that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me:
'Soot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles,—a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olymps, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus; if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumpetion deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons, and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the boneache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on these that war for a packet. I have said my prayers; and the devil, envy, say Amen. What, ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites? Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter; Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mauling, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she, that lays thee out, says art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. V Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast e

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come?
my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not thyself in to my table so many meals?
what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles;—Then Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites; Then tell me thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then
Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayst tell, that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. A non commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord
Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool: I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is

5. No more than what he thinks he is. Is he so much? Do you not think, he himself a better man than I am?

6. No question.

7. Will you subscribe his thought, and say it?

8. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, ogether more tractable.

9. Why should a man be proud? How doth row? I know not what pride is.

10. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your the fairer. He, that is proud, eats up him- side is his own glass, his own trumpet, his ronicle; and whate'er praises itself but in d, devours the deed in the praise.

14. He doth rely on none; cries on the stream of his dispose, at observance or respect of any, peculiar and in self-admission.

Here is a man—But 'tis before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Troy. A room in Priam's Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: Do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord he prais'd!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. 'Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord
Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace. [Musick within.]

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles:—What musick is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is musick in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love musick.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another;
I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir: Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul,—

Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a compli-mental assault upon him, for my business seeths.

Serv. Sudden business! there's a stewed phrase,
indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen!
fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.
—Fair prince, here is good broken musick.

Par. You have broke it, cousin: and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance:—Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir,—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen:
My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, sweet queen.

me.—But (marry) thus, my lord,—My dear words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you if the king call for him at supper, you will

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, i'faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but Pan. In good troth, it begins so:

Love, love, nothing but love, still more
For, oh, love's bow
Shoots huck and doe:
The shaft confounds
Not that it wounds,
But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ba! ha!

Hey ho!

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush! shame's a baby.—Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.—What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend day-light! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so: rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet.

Nay, you shall fight your hearts out, ere I part
you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds: but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's —In witness whereof the parties interchangeably—
Come in, come in; I'll go get a fire.

[Exit Pandarus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wish'd me thus!

Cres. Wish'd, my lord?—The gods grant!—O

my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abrupton? What too curious dreg spies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils cherubims; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: To fear the worst, oft cures the worst.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all
Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady,—that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we: Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert, before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me: Be true to my lord:
if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too; our kindred, though they be long ere they are woo'd, they are constant, being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me
heart:—

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day

For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win!

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever—Pardon me;—
If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.
I love you now; but not, till now, so much
But I might master it:—in faith, I lie;
My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother: See, we fools!
Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us,
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?
But though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man;
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;
For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak
The thing, I shall repent. See, see, your silence,
Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel: Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet musick issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, I'faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss:
I am asham'd;—O heavens! what have I done!—
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning.

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun
Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:
I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave,
To be another's fool. I would be gone:—
Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love;

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: But you are wise;
Or else you love not: For to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O, that I thought it could be in a woman,
(As, if it can, I will presume in you.)

To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays!
Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me,—
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were I then uplifted! but, alas,
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall he most right!

True swains in love shall, in the world to come,
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,
Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want smiles, truth tir'd with iteration,—
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,—
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentick author to be cited,
As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When water-drops have worn the stones of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing; yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maids in love,
Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said—
as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
As false as Cressid.

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it,
I'll be the witness.—Here I hold your hand;
my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to other, since I have taken such pains to bring together, let all pitiful goers-between be call the world's end after my name, call them
Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show chamber and a bed, which bed, because it sh

What mean these fellows? Know they

They pass by strangely: they were us'd

What, am I poor of late?

Greatness, once fallen out with fortune, fall out with men too: What the declin'd is,

is as soon read in the eyes of others,

in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,

at their mealy wings, but to the summer;

and a man, for being simply man,

by honour; but honour for those honours is without him, as place, riches, favour,

if accident as oft as merit:

when they fall, as being slippery standers,

and that lean'd on them as slippery too,

pluck down another, and together they fall. But 'tis not so with me:

and I are friends; I do enjoy the point all that I did possess, and men's looks; who do, methinks, find out me not worth in me such rich beholding have often given. Here is Ulysses; interrupt his reading.—

Ulysses.

Now, great Thetis' son?

What are you reading?

A strange fellow here comes, That man—how dearly ever parted, such in having, or without, or in,— make boast to have that which he hath,

is not what he owes, but by reflection;

his virtues shining upon others on him, and they retort that heat again on his giver.

This is not strange, Ulysses.

Why, that is borne here in the face,

and he knows not, but commends itself to his eyes: nor doth the eye itself,

but pure spirit of sense, behold itself,

and from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd

each other with each other's form.

Reflection turns not to itself,

and he that travels, and is married there,

may see itself: this is not strange at all.

I do not strain at the position,

and he; but at the author's drift:

his circumstance, expressly proves—man is the lord of any thing, and in and of him there he much consisting,

communicate his parts to others:

and he of himself know them for aught,

and behold them form'd in the applause,

they are extended; which, like an arch rebounds again; or like a gate of steel, and the sun, receives and renders back and his heat. I was much rapt in this;

and heeded here immediately known Ajax.

What a man is there! a very horse;

and he knows not what. Nature, what things

there are,

and respect in regard, and dear in use!

What things again most dear in the esteem,
 And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow,
 An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
 Ajax renowned. O heavens, what some men do,
 While some men leave to do!

How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
 While others play the idiots in her eyes!
 How one man eats into another's pride,
 While pride is fasting in his wantonness!

To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
 They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder;
 As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
 And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it: for they pass'd by me,
 As misers do by beggars; neither gave to me
 Good word, nor look: What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
 Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
 A great-siz'd monster of ingratitude:

Those scraps are good deeds past; which are devour'd
 As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
 As done: Perséverance, dear my lord,
 Keeps honour bright: To have done, is to hang

Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
 In monumental mockery. Take the instant way;
 For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
 Where one but goes abreast: keep then the path;

For emulation hath a thousand sons,
 That one by one pursue: If you give way,
 Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
 Like to an enter'd tide, they all rush by,
 And leave you hindmost;—

Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
 Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
 O'er-run and trampled on: Then what they do in present,

 Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop yours:
 For time is like a fashionable host,
 That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand:

And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
 Grasps in the comer: Welcome ever smiles,
 And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;

For beauty, wit,
 High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
 Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
 To envious and calumniating time.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
 That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,
 Though they are made and moulded of things past;
 And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
 More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye prizes the present object:
 Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
 That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
 Since things in motion sooner catch the eye,
 Than what not stirs. The cry went o'er on thee,
 And still it might, and yet it may again,
 If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
 And ease thy reputation in thy tomb;

Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
 Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves,
 And drove great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy
 I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
 The reasons are more potent and heroic:
 'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
 With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known?

Ulyss. Is that a wonder?
 The providence, that's in a watchful state,
 Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold;
 Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps;
 Keeps pace with thought, and almost, like the gods,
 Does thoughts unweil in their dumb cradles.

There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of state;
 Which hath an operation more divine,
 Than breath, or pen, can give expression to:

All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
 As perfectly is ours, as yours, my lord;
 And better would it fit Achilles much,
 To throw down Hector, than Polyxena:
 But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
 When fame shall in our islands sound her trumpet;

U 2

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,—
Great Hector's sister did Achilles win;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.
Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

[Exit.]

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you:
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;
They think, my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and, perhaps, receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see, my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O, then beware;
Those wounds heal ill, that men do give themselves:

Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus:
I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat,
To see us here unarm'd: I have a woman's longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector; and is so prophetically proud of an her-oical cudgelling, that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peac-cock, a stride, and a stand: ruminates, like an hostess, that bath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say—there were wit in this head, an 'twould out; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck in the combat, he'll break it himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said, Good-morrow, Ajax; and he Thinks, Agamemnon. What think you of that that takes me for the general? He is grown land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plain opinion! a man may wear it on both sides leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador
Thersites.

Ther. Who, I! why, he'll answer nobody professes not answering: speaking is for he wears his tongue in his arms. I will presence; let Patroclus make demands to you;
I shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: Tell him,—I desire the valiant Ajax, to invite the most Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to safe conduct for his person, of the magna-and most illustrious, six- or seven-times-captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamem-non.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax.

Ther. Humph!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you,
Hector to his tent;—

Ther. Humph!

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to't?

Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, I o'clock it will go one way or other; however, shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this time.

Ther. No, but he's out o'tune thus. V sick will be in him when Hector has wrung his brains, I know not: But, I am sure unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews cuttings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter
straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fount
And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt Achilles and Ther. 'Would the fountain of your rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a norance.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Troy. A street.

Enter, at one side, ÆNEAS, and Servant, with a torch: at the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who's that there?

Dei. 'Tis the lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?—

Had I so good occasion to lie long,
As you, prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas; take his hand:
Witness the process of your speech, wherein
You told—how Diomed, a whole week by days,
Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir,
During all question of the gentle truce:

But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance,
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.

Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long
But when contention and occasion meet,
By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life
With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, the
With his face backward.—In humane eyes
Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' li-
Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I say
No man alive can love, in such a sort,
The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize:—Jove, let Æne-
If to my sword his fate be not the glory
A thousand complete courses of the sun
But, in mine envious honour, let him die
With every joint a wound; and that tomorrow.

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other
Par. This is the most spiteful gent
The noblest hateful love, that e'er I hear
What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; to know not.

Par. His purpose meets you; 'Twas this Greek

lehas' house; and there to render him, an unfreud Antenor, the fair Cressid:
have your company; or, if you please,
there before us: I constantly do think,
rather, call my thought a certain knowledge,
either Troilus lodges there to-night;
him, and give him note of our approach,
the whole quality wherefore: I fear,
all be much unwelcome.

That I assure you;
a had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Cressid borne from Troy.

There is no help;
litter disposition of the time
save it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Good morrow, all. [Exit.]
And tell me, noble Diomed; 'faith, tell me
true,

in the soul of sound good-fellowship,
in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best,
'or Menelaus?

Both alike:
merits well to have her, that doth seek her making any scruple of her soileure, such a fell of pain, and world of charge;
on as well to keep her, that defend her relating the taste of her dishonour, such a costly loss of wealth and friends:
as a puling cuckold, would drink up eyes and dregs of a flat tamed piece;
like a lecher, out of whorish loins cas'd to breed out your inheritors:
merits pois'd, each weighs no less nor more;
as he, the heavier for a whore.

You are too bitter to your country woman.
She's hither to her country: Hear me, Paris,
cry false drop in her bawdy veins
Cressid's life hath sunk; for every scruple contaminated carrion weight,
as hath been slain: since she could speak,
she not given so many good words breath,
her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
use the thing that you desire to buy:
I in silence hold this virtue well,
not commended what we intend to sell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

same. Court before the house of Pandarus.

Enter TROIILUS and CRESSIDA.

Dear, trouble not yourself; the morn is cold.
Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle
down;
I'll unbolt the gates.

Trouble him not;
, to bed: Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
we as soft attachment to thy senses,
uns' empty of all thought!

Good morrow then.
Pr'ythee now, to bed.

Are you aweary of me?
O Cressida! but that the busy day,
by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,
reaming night will hide our joys no longer,
I did not from thee.

Night hath been too brief.
Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights
she stays,
iously as hell; but flies the grasps of love,
wings more momentary-swift than thought,
I'll catch cold, and curse me.

Pr'ythee, tarry;—
I will never tarry.—
O Cressid!—I might have still held off, if you would have tarried. Hark! there's her up.

[Within.] What, are all the doors open here?
It is your uncle.

Enter PANDARUS.

A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
have such a life,—
How now, how now? how go maidenheads?
you maid! where's my cousin Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!
You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what?—let her say what: what have I brought you to do?

Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart! you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia!—hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a hugbear take him!

[Knocking.]
Cres. Did not I tell you?—'would he were knock'd o'the head!—

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.—
My lord, come you again into my chamber:
You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha!
Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing.— [Knocking.]

How earnestly they knock!—pray you, come in;
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.
[Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.]

Pan. [Going to the door.] Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now? what's the matter!

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my lord Æneas? By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord, do not deny him;
It doth import him much, to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know,
I'll be sworn:—For my own part, I came in late:
What should he do here?

Æne. Who!—nay, then:—
Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you are 'ware:
You'll be so true to him, to be false to him:

Do not you know of him, yet go fetch him hither;
Go.

As Pandarus is going out, enter TROIILUS.

Tro. How now? what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash: There is at hand
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?
Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy:
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me!
I will go meet them: and, my lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt Troilus and Æneas.]
Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got, but lost! The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would, they had broke's neck!

Enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now? What is the matter? Who was here?

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord gone?

Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?
Pan. 'Would I were as deep under the earth
as I am above!

Cres. O the gods!—what's the matter?
Pan. Pr'ythee, get thee in; 'Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew, thou wouldst be his death:—O poor gentleman!—A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you on my knees,
I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus; 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot hear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity ;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me,
As the sweet Troilus.—O you gods divine!
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,
If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,
Do to this body what extremes you can ;
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth,
Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in, and weep ;—
Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks ;
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart
With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. Before Pandarus' house.

Enter PARIS, TROIUS, ÆNEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour prefix'd
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon :—Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk in to her house ;
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently ;
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar ; and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit.]

Par. I know what 'tis to love ;
And 'would, as I shall pity, I could help !—
Please you, walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A room in Pandarus' house.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it : How can I moderate it ?
If I could temporize with my affection,
Or hrew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief :
My love admits no qualifying dross ;
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROIUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes.—Ah sweet ducks !
Cres. O Troilus ! Troilus ! [Embracing him.]
Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here ! Let me embrace too : O heart,—as the goodly saying is,— —o heart, o heavy heart,

Why sigh'st thou without breaking ?
where he answers again,
Because thou canst not ease thy smart,
By friendship, nor by speaking.

There never was a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse ; we see it, we see it.—How now, lams ?

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity,
That the blest gods—as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy ?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay ; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy ?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too ?

Tro. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible ?

Tro. And suddenly ; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath :
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now, with a robber's haste,
Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how :
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,

With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to
He fumbles up into a loose adieu ;
And accents us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.
Æne. [Within.] My lord ! is the lady ready

Grecians, Come ! to him, that instantly must die

SCENE V.

The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

AX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHIL-PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYS-ESTOR, and Others.

Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
ng time with starting courage.
thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
sful Ajax; that the appalled air
e the head of the great combatant, him hither.

Then, trumpet, there's my purse.
k thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:
lain, till thy sphered bias cheek
l the cholick of puff'd Aquilon:
etch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;
'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.]
No trumpet answers.

'Tis but early days.
Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?
Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;
in the toe: that spirit of his ion lifts him from the earth.

DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.
Is this the lady Cressid?

Even she.
Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet y.
ur general doth salute you with a kiss.
Yet is the kindness but particular;
ster, she were kiss'd in general.
nd very courtly counsel: I'll begin.— for Nestor.
'Tl take that winter from your lips, fair lady:
ids you welcome.
had good argument for kissing once.
bat that's no argument for kissing now:
popp'd Paris in his bardiment;
d thus you and your argument.
d deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!
e we lose our heads, to gild his horns.
he first was Menelaus' kiss; this, mine:
kisses you.

O, this is trim!
Paris, and I, kiss evermore for him.
ll have my kiss, sir.—Lady, by your leave.
a kissing, do you render, or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.
Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;
Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one.
Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.
Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.
Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o'the head.
Cres. No, I'll be sworn.
Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn.—

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.
Cres. Why, beg then.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,
When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.
Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Dio. Lady, a word;—I'll bring you to your father. [Diomedes leads out Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.
Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,
Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out
At every joint and motive of her body.

O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome ere it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
To every ticklish reader! set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity,
And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.]

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all the state of Greece! what shall be done

To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose,
A victor shall be known? will you, the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?
Æne. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deal misprising
The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.
Æne. Therefore Achilles: But, whate'er, know
this;—

In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blended knight, half Trojan and half Greek.
Achil. A maiden battle then?—O, I perceive you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is sir Diomed:—Go, gentle knight,
Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath: the combatants being kin,
Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists.]
Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight;
Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon calm'd:
His heart and hand both open, and both free;
For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he shows;
Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath :
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous ;
For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes
To tender objects ; but he, in heat of action,
Is more vindictive than jealous love ;
They call him Troilus ; and on him erect
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thus says Æneas ; one that knows the youth
Even to his inches, and, with private soul,
Did in great Ilium thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.]

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own !

Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st !

Awake thee !

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd :—there, Ajax !

Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why then, will I no more :—

Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,

A cousin-german to great Priam's seed ;

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain :

Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so,

That thou couldst say—This hand is Grecian all,

And this is Trojan ; the sinews of this leg

All Greek, and this all Troy ; my mother's blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister

Bounds-in my father's ; by Jove omnipotent,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member

Wherein my sword had not impressure made

Of our rank feud : But the just gods gainsay,

That any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother,

My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword

Be drain'd ! Let me embrace thee, Ajax :

By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms ;

Hector would have them fall upon him thus :

Cousin, all honour to thee !

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector :

Thou art too gentle, and too free a man :

I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence

A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,

(On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st O yes Cries, This is he,) could promise to himself

A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Æne. There is expectation here from both the sides

What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it ;

The issue is embracement :—Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,

(As sold I have the chance,) I would desire

My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish : and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me :

And signify this loving interview

To the expecters of our Trojan part ;

Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin ;

I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here ;

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name by name ;

But for Achilles, my own searching eyes

Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms' as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy ;

But that's no welcome : Understand more clear,

What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion ;

But in this extant moment, faith and troth,

Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing :

Bids thee, with most divine integrity,

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agam. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to

you. [To Troilus.]

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting ;—

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Whom must we answer ?

Æne. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Your quondam wife swears still by Venus
She's well, but bade me not commend her

Tro. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep ?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus :
There Diomed doth feast with him to-night ;
Who neither looks upon the heaven, nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressida.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,
After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither ?

Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy ! Had she no lover there,
That waits her absence ?

Tro. O, sir, to such as boasting show their scars,
A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord ?
She was belov'd, she lov'd ; she is, and doth :
But, still, sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Asian Camp. Before Achilles' tent.

ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

He beat his blood with Greekish wine

let us feast him to the height.
re comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

How now, thou core of envy ?
batch of nature, what's the news ?
by, thou picture of what thou seemest, diot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.
om whence, fragment ?
by, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

ses of the south, the guts-gripping, rup-shs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lers full of imposthume, sciaticas, limealm, incurable bone-ach, and the rivell'd if the tetter, take and take again such discoveries !
by thou damnable box of envy, thou,
at thou to curse thus ?
I curse thee !

ty, no, you ruinous butt ; you whoreson
hable car, no.

erial skein of sleive silk, thou green for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodi-thoo ? Ah, how the poor world is pessuch water-flies ; diminutives of nature !

ay run mad ; but if with too much brain,

ed blood, they do, I'll be a curer of mad-

Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough,

t loves quails ; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax : And the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds ; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to ? To an ass, were nothing ; he is both ass and ox :

to an ox, were nothing ; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care : but to be Menelaus—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites ; for I care not to be the house of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus.—Hey-day !
spirits and fires !

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEM-NON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis ;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector ; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I hid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night, to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught : Sweet, quoth 'a ! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night,

And welcome, both to those that go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night. [Exeunt Agam. and Men.]

Achil. Old Nestor taries ; and you too, Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord ; I have important business,

The tide whereof is now.—Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. Follow his torch, he goes

To Calchas' tent ; I'll keep you company.

[Aside to Troilus.]

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so good night.

[Exit Diomedes ; Ulyss. and Tro. following.]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue,

a most unjust knave ; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses :

he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabler

the hound ; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it ; it is prodigious, there will come some change ; the sun borrows of the moon, when Dio-med keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him : they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent : I'll after.—Nothing but lechery ! all incontinent varlets !

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. Before Calchas' tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What are you up here, ho ? speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls ?

Dio. Diomed.—Calchas, I think.—Where's your daughter ?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance ; after them THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid come forth to him !

Dio. How now, my charge ?

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian !—Hark ! a word with you. [Whispers.]

Tro. Yea, so familiar !

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff ; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember ?

Cres. Remember ? yes.

Dio. Nay, but do then ; And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember ?

Ulyss. List !

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery !

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what :—

Dio. Pho ! pho ! come, tell a pin : You are forsworn.—

Cres. In faith, I cannot : What would you have me do ?

Ther. A juggling trick, to be—secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me ?

Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath ; Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience !

Ulyss. How now, Trojan ?

Cres. Diomed.—

Dio. No, no, good night : I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark ! one word in your ear.

Tro. O plague and madness !

Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince ; let us depart, I pray you,

Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms : this place is dangerous ; The time right deadly ; I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you !

Ulyss. Now, good my lord, go off : You flow to great destruction ; come, my lord.

Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience ; come.

Tro. I pray you, stay ; by hell, and all hell's torments,

I will not speak a word.

Dio. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee ?

O wither'd truth !

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord ?

Tro. By Jove,

I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian !—why, Greek !

Dio. Pho, pho ! adieu ; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not ; come hither once again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something ; will you go ?

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek !

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay ; by Jove, I will not speak a word :

There is between my will and all offences

A guard of patience :—stay a little while.

Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat ramp, and potatoe finger, tickles these together lechery, fry !

Dio. But will you then ?

Cres. In faith, I will, la ; never trust in

Dio. Give me some token for the surety

Cres. I'll fetch you one.

Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, you

I will not be myself, nor have cognition

Of what I feel ; I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge ; now, now, now

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

Tro. O beauty ! where's thy faith ?

Ulyss. My

SCENE III.

Troy. Before Priam's Palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently tem-per'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to-day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent:
Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, it is true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.

Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O! be persuaded: do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose, that makes strong the vow;

But vows, to every purpose, must not hold:

Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:

Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious—dear than life.—

Enter TROIUS.

How now, young man? mean'st thou to fight to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit Cassandra.

Hect. No, 'faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth,

I am to-day i'th' vein of chivalry:

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.

Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand, to day, for thee, and me, and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion, than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me
for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecians fall,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O, 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now? how now?

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mother;
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth,

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:

He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:

Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;

X x

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrap,
To tell thee—that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Æneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. But thou shalt not go.
Hect. I must not break my faith.

You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.
And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector.
Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth!
Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!
Cas. Farewell.—Yet, soft:—Hector, I take my
leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaims:
Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and fight;
Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!
[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector. Alarums.]

Tro. They are at it; hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side,
PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter from you' poor girl.

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson ptisick, a whoreson rascally ptisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: And I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were curs'd, I cannot tell what to think on't.—What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart; [Tearing the letter.]

The effect doth operate another way.—
Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.—
My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV.

Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter THERSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another;
I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable var-let, Diomed, has got that same scurvey dotting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there, in his helm:
I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whomemasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. O the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses,—is not proved worth a blackberry:—They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come sleeve, and t'other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for, shouldst thou take the river Styx,

I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire
I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now he whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve
[Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou fo-tor's match?

Art thou of blood, and honour?

Ther. No, no:—I am a rascal; a scurvey knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee;—live.

Ther. God—a-mercy, that thou wilt believe
But a plague break thy neck, for frighting What's become of the wenching rogues! I they have swallowed one another: I would at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats
I'll seek them.

SCENE V.

The same.

Enter DIOMEDES, and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus'
Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty
Tell her, I have chasit'd the amorous Troj
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polyde
Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margaret Hath Doreus prisoner;
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beard
Upon the pashed corpses of the kings
Epistrophus and Cediüs: Polixenes is slain
Amphimachus, and Thos, deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruis'd: the dreadful Sagitt
Appals our numbers; haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achil
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shan
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galathe his horse,
And there lacks work; anon, he's there aft
And there they fly, or die, like scaled seal
Before the belching whale; when is he yon
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his Fall down before him, like the mower's sw Here, there, and every where, he leaves, an Dexterity so obeying appetite,
That what he will, he does; and does so.
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing venge
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp
to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day
Mad and fantastick execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless c
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus!

Dio. Ay, there

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy fi

what it is to meet Achilles angry.
 Where's Hector? I will none but Hector.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Another part of the field.

Enter AJAX.

Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?
 What wouldst thou?

I would correct him.
 Were I the general, thou shouldst have thy office,
 correction:—Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

O traitor Diomed!—turn thy false face,
 thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!
 What art thou there?

I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.
 He is my prize, I will not look upon.
 Come both, you cogging Greeks; have at you both. [Exeunt, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter ACHILLES.

Now do I see thee: Ha!—Have at thee,
 Hector.

Pause, if thou wilt.
 I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.
 Why, that my arms are out of use:
 and negligence befrieth thee now,
 anon shalt hear of me again;
 go, seek thy fortune. [Exit.]

Fare thee well:—
 have been much more a fresher man, expected thee.—How now, my brother?

Re-enter TROILUS.

Ajax hath ta'en Aeneas; Shall it be?
 the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
 I not carry him; I'll be taken too,
 & him off: Fate, hear me what I say!
 not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.]

Enter one in sumptuous armour.

Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a woful mark:—
 Is it thou not?—I like thy armour well;
 lock it, and unlock the rivets all,
 be master of it:—Wilt thou not, beast, abide?
 then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

The same.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Come here about me, you my Myrmidons;
 what I say.—Attend me where I wheel:
 at a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;
 when I have the bloody Hector found, him with your weapons round about;
 in manner execute your arms.
 Come, sirs, and my proceedings eye:—
 heed—Hector the great must die. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.

The same.

MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting; then
 THERSITES.

The cuckold, and the cuckold-maker are at it, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! now ole-henned sparrow! 'loo, Paris, 'loo! The game is:—ware horns, ho!
[Exeunt Paris and Menelaus.]

Enter MARGARELON.

Tom, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment: Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.

Another part of the field.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrified core, so fair without,
 Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.—
 Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath:
 Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death!
[Puts off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;
 How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:
 Even with the veil and dark'ning of the sun,
 To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man I seek. [Hector falls.]

So, Ilium, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down;
 Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.—
 On, Myrmidons; and cry you all again,
 Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

[A retreat sounded.]

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'er spreads the earth,
 And, stickler like, the armies separates.

My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,
 Pleas'd with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.—

[Sheaths his sword.]

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;
 Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X.

The same.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS,
 NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, marching,
 Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums.

[Within.] Achilles!

Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Diom. The brutis—Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be;

Great Hector was as good a man as he.

Agam. March patiently along:—Let one be sent To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—

If in his death the gods have us befriended,
 Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

[Exeunt marching.]

SCENE XI.

Another part of the field.

Enter AENEAS and Trojans.

Aene. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field;
 Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector!—The gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail,
 In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field.—

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!

I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,

And linger not our sure destructions on!

Aene. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so:

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;

But dare all imminence, that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Heecuba?

Let him, that will a screech-owl ay be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead :
 There is a word will Priam turn to stone ;
 Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,
 Cold statues of the youth ; and, in a word,
 Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away :
 Hector is dead ; there is no more to say.
 Stay yet ;—You vile ahominable tents,
 Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
 Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
 I'll through and through you !—And thou, greatsiz'd coward !

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates ;
 I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,
 That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy thoughts.—
 Strike a free march to Troy !—with comfort go :
 Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt Æneas and Trojans.]

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side,
 PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you !

Tro. Hence, broker lackey ! ignomy and shame
 Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name !
 [Exit Troilus.]

Pan. A goodly med'cine for my aching bones !—
 O world ! world ! world ! thus is the poor agent despised ! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly you set a' work, and how ill requited ! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed ? what verse for it ! what instance for it !—
 Let me see :—

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
 Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting :
 And being once subdu'd in armed tall,
 Sweet honey and sweet notes together fall.—

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall,
 Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall :
 Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
 Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
 Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,
 Some two months hence my will shall here be made :
 It should be now, but that my fear is this,—
 Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss :
 Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for asses ;
 And, at that time, bequeath you my diseases. [Exit]

TIMON OF ATHENS.

Act 1 Sc. 2.

Published by W. Pickering, 57, Chancery Lane, 1824.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

TIMON, a noble Athenian.

LUCIUS, LUCCELLUS,
SEMPRONIUS, } lords, and flatterers of Timon.

VENTIDIUS, one of Timon's false friends.

APEMANTUS, a churlish philosopher.

ALCIBIADES, an Athenian general.

FLAVIUS, steward to Timon.

FLAMINIUS,
LUCILIUS,
SERVILIUS, } Timon's servants.

CAPHIS, PHILOTUS, }
TITUS,
LUCIUS,
HORTENSIVS, } servants to Timon's creditors.

Two Servants of Varro, and the Servant of Isidore;
two of Timon's creditors.

Cupid and Maskers. Three Strangers.

Poet, Painter, Jeweller, and Merchant.

An old Athenian. A Page. A Fool.

PHRYNIA, }
TIMANDRA, } mistresses to Alcibiades.

Other Lords, Senators, Officers, Soldiers, Thieves, and Attendants.

Scene,—Athens; and the Woods adjoining.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Athens. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Poet. I am glad you are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long: How goes the world?

Poet. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange,

Which manifold record not matches? See,

Musick of bounty! all these spirits thy power

Must conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Poet. I know them both; t'other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!

Mer. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd, as it were

To an unmirable and continue goodness:

He passes.

Mer. I have a jewel here.

Mer. O, pray, let's see't: For the lord Timon, sir?

Mer. He will touch the estimate: But, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the ville,

It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good form.

[Looking on the jewel.]

Mer. And rich: here is a water, look you.

Poet. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poetry is as a gum, which oozes

From whence 'tis nourished: The fire i'th flint

Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies

Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Poet. A picture, sir.—And when comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.

Let's see your piece.

Poet. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Poet. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: How this grace

Speaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination

Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Poet. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

Here is a touch; Is't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,

It tutors nature: artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord's follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens:—Happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment: My free drift

Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of wax: no level'd malice

Infests one comma in the course I hold;

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I'll unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,

(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as Of grave and austere quality,) tender down

Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,

Subdues and properties to his love and tendance

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better

Than to abhor himself: even he drops down

The knee before him, and returns in peace

Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o'the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,

That labour on the bosom of this sphere

To propagate their states: amongst them all,

Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,

One do I personate of lord Timon's frame,

Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafes to her;

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants

Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,

Bowing his head against the steepy mount

To climb his happiness, would be well express'd

In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on:

All those which were his fellows but of late,

(Some better than his value,) on the moment.

Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrop, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,

Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants,
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:

A thousand moral paintings I can show,
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of fortune
More pregnant than words. Yet you do well,
To show lord Timon, that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter TIMON, attended; the Servant of Ventidius talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait:

Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing to him,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;

I am not of that feather, to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know him
A gentleman, that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Ven. Serv. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me:—

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,

But to support him after.—Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour! [Exit.]

Enter an Old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: What of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius!

Enter LUCILIUS.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy creature,

By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift;
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got:

The maid is fair, o'the youngest for a bride;

And I have bred her at my dearest cost,

In qualities of the best. This man of thine

Attempts her love: I pry'thee, noble lord,

Join with me to forbid him her resort;

Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:

His honesty rewards him in itself,

It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:

Our own precedent passions do instruct us

What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose

Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,

And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,

If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents, on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long;

To build his fortune, I will strain a little,

For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,

And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble

Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship; Ne-
That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not ow'd to you!

[Exeunt Lucilius and Old Ath.]

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long li-

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me Go not away.—What have you there, my Poet. Art not one?

SCENE II.

The same. A room of state in Timon's house.

Hautboys playing loud musick. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and others attending; then enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, LUCIUS, LUCULLUS, SEMPRONIUS, and other Athenian Senators, with VENTIDIUS, and Attendants. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, 't hath pleas'd the gods remember

My father's age, and call him to long peace.

He is gone happy, and has left me rich :

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound

To your free heart, I do return those talents,

Doubled, with thanks, and service, from whose help

I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means,

Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love;

I gave it freely ever; and there's none

Can truly say, he gives, if he receives :

If our betters play at that game, we must not dare

To imitate them; Faults, that are rich, are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit.

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on Timon.]

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony

Was but devis'd at first, to set a gloss

On faint deeds, hollow welcomes,

Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;

But where there is true friendship, there needs none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes,

Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.]

I Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.

Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it? hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus!—you are welcome.

Apem. No,

You shall not make me welcome :

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie, thou art a churl; you have got a humour there

Does not become a man, 'tis much to blame :—

They say, my lords, that ira furor brevis est,

But yond' man's ever angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself;

For he does neither affect company,

Nor is he fit for it, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine own peril, Timon;

I come to observe; I give thee warning out.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian; therefore welcome: I myself would have no power: pry'thee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for

I should

Ne'er flatter thee.—O you gods! what a number

Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not!

It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat

In one man's blood; and all the madness is,

He cheers them up too.

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men;

Metinks, they should invite them without knives;

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for't; the fellow, that

Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught,

Is the readiest man to kill him: it has been prov'd.

If I

Were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals;

Least they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes:

Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! This way!

A brave fellow!—he keeps his tides well. Timon,

Those healths will make thee, and thy state, look ill.

Here's that, which is too weak to be a sinner,

Honest water, which ne'er left a man i' the mire:

This, and my food, are equals; there's no odds.

Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

APEMANTUS'S GRACE.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;

I pray for no man but myself:

Grant I may never prove so fond,

To trust man on his oath or bond;

em. Yes.

v. Then I lie not.

em. Art not a poet?

v. Yes.

em. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

v. That's not feign'd, he is so.

em. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee labour: He, that loves to be flattered, is o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a

What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

em. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord

my heart.

v. What, thyself?

em. Ay.

v. Wherefore?

em. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.—

thou a merchant?

v. Ay, Apemantus.

em. Traffick confound thee, if the gods will

not!

v. If traffick do it, the gods do it.

em. Traffick's thy god, and thy god confound

v. What trumpet's that?

'Tis Alcibiades, and twenty horse, all of companionship.

Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.—[Exeunt some Attendants.]

Must needs dine with me:—Go not you hence,

have thank'd you; and, when dinner's done,

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

[They salute.]

v. So, so; there!—

contract and starve your supple joints!—

there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knives,

aboon and monkey.

v. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

hungerly on your sight.

Right welcome, sir:

erent pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all but Apemantus.]

Enter two Lords.

rd. What time a day is't, Apemantus?

v. Time to be honest.

rd. That time serves still.

v. The most accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.

rd. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

v. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

rd. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

v. Thou art a fool, to bid me farewell twice.

rd. Why, Apemantus?

v. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I o give thee none.

rd. Hang thyself.

v. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding:

by requests to thy friend.

rd. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn nee.

v. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass.

[Exit.]

v. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,

ste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes

ry heart of kindness.

v. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,

his steward: no need, but he repays

old above itself; no gift to him, eds the giver a return exceeding of quittance.

v. The noblest mind he carries,

er govern'd man.

v. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall he in?

v. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.]

*Or a harlot, for her weeping;
Or a dog, that seems a sleeping;
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.*

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies, than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like them; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then; that then thou mightst kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

I Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: How had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O, you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should never have need of them? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for them: and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wish'd myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own, than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon. 2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes, And, at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much! [Tucket sounded.]

Tim. What means that trumpet?—How now?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon;—and to all That of his bounties taste!—The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely To gratulate thy plenteous bosom: The ear, Taste, touch, smell, all pleas'd from thy table rise; They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let them have kind admittance!—

Musick, make their welcome. [Exit Cupid.]
I Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you are belov'd.

Musick. Re-enter Cupid, with a Masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hey day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and root.
We make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves;
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men,

Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite, and envy. Who lives
not

Depraved, or depraves? who dies, that bears
Not one spurn to their graves of their friend
I should fear, those, that dance before me:
Would one day stamp upon me: It has been
Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from table, with much ado
TIMON; and, to show their loves, each strain an Amazon, and all dance, men with lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cec.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto't, and lively life
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for it.

I Lady. My lord, you take us even at the 1 Lord. The best of happiness,

Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt Alcibiades, Lords, &c.]

Apen. What a coil's here!

Serving of hecks, and jutting out of bums!

I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums

That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I'd be good to thee.

Apen. No, I'll nothing: for,

If I should be brib'd too, there would be none left

To rail upon thee; and then thou wouldst sin the faster.

Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me, thou

Wilt give away thyself in paper shortly:

What need these feasts, pomps, and vain glories?

Tim. Nay,

An you begin to rail on society once,

I am sworn, not to give regard to you.

Farewell; and come with better musick. [Exit.]

Apen. So;—

Thou'lt not hear me now,—thou shalt not then,

I'll lock

Thy heaven from thee. O, that men's ears should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expence,

That he will neither know how to maintain it,

Nor cease his flow of riot: Takes no account

How things go from him: nor resumes no care

Of what is to continue; Never mind

Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.

What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel:

I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.

Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro: What,

You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is;—And yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. 'Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,

My Alcibiades.—With me? What's your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? Whence are they?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month:

My master is awak'd by great occasion,

To call upon his own; and humbly prays you,

That with your other noble parts you'll suit,

In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,

I pr'y'thee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment,—

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks,

And past,—

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord; And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:—

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on; [Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.]
I'll wait on you instantly.—Come hither, pray you. [To Flavius.]

How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds, And the detention of long-since-due debts, Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen, The time is unagreeable to this business; Your importunacy cease, till after dinner; That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends: See them well entertain'd. [Exit Timon.]
Flav. I pray, draw near. [Exit Flavius.]

Enter APEMANTUS and a Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus; let's have some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No, 'tis to thyself.—Come away. [To the Fool.]

Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand'st single, thou art not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last ask'd the question.—Poor rogues, and usurers' men! hawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: How does your mistress?

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. 'Would we could see you at Corinth.

Apem. Good! gramerey.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain? what do you in this wise company?—How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. 'Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apemantus, read me the supercription of these letters; I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hang'd. This is to lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelp'd a dog; and thou shalt famish, a dog's death. Answer not, I am gone. [Exit Page.]

Apem. Even so thou out-run'n'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; 'would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and sadly: The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it then, that we may account whoremaster, and a knave; which notwithstanding thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?
Fool. A fool in good clothes, and somewhat thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like sometime, like a lawyer: sometime, like a piper, with two stones more than his artifice. He is very often like a knight; and, gent all shapes, that man goes up and down fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.
Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: foolery as I have, so much wit thou lack'st.

Apem. That answer might have become mantus.
All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes lord

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS

Tim. Is't true? can it be?
Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot
Do what they would; are sorry—you are ho-

But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—but Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wretch—would all were well—'tis pity—

And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractious,
With certain half-caps, and cold-moving nods,
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!—
I pr'ythee, man, look cheerly: These old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, 'tis seldom flows;
'Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind;
And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull, and heavy.—
Go to Ventidius,—[To a Serv.] Pr'ythee, [To

No blame belongs to thee:—[To Serv.] Ventidius

Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents: Greet him from me;
Bid him suppose, some good necessity
Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd
With those five talents:—that had,—[To Flav.]

To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think,
That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would, I could not think it: That thought is bounty's foe;
Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.

La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says

lease your lordship, here is the wine.
Flaminius, I have noted these always wise
they,

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a to-wardly, prompt spirit,—give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee.—Get you gone, sirrah.—[To the Servant, who goes out.]—Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say, thou savest me not.
Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ;
And we alive, that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness,
To him that worships thee.

[Throwing the money away.
Lucul. Ha! now I see, thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit Lucullus.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods,
I feel my master's passion! This slave
Unto his honour, has my lord's meat in him:
Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poison?
O, may diseases only work upon't!
And, when he is sick to death, let not that part of nature,

Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.

SCENE II.

The same. A publick place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

I Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours; now lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? Now, before the gods, I am ashamed out. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honoured lord,—

[To Lucius.]

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well:—Commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: How shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me; He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord. If his occasion were not virtuous, Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable? how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour?—Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do't; the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope, his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind:—And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I will look you out a good turn, Servilius.—
[Exit Servilius.]
True, as you said, Timon is shrunk, indeed; And he, that's once denied, will hardly speed.

[Exit Lucius.]

I Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

I Stran. Why this

Is the world's soul; and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him
His friend, that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse;
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: He ne'er drinks,
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

I Stran. For mine
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation
And the best half should have return'd to
So much I love his heart: But, I perceive
Men must learn now with pity to dispense
For policy sits above conscience.

SCENE IV.

The same. A hall in Timon's house.
Enter two Servants of Varro, and the Lucius, meeting TITUS, HORTENS, other Servants to Timon's creditors,
coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow,
Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and,
One business does command us all; for
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

And sir

Serv. I am

Good day at once.

Serv. Welcome, good brother.

do you think the hour?

Labouring for nine.

Serv. So much?

Is not my lord seen yet?

Serv. Not yet.

I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at seven.

Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter

with him:

and consider, that a prodigal course of the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.

Deepest winter in lord Timon's purse;

and, one may reach deep enough, and yet little.

I am of your fear for that.

I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

and sends now for money.

Most true, he does.

And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,

which I wait for money.

It is against my heart.

Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, in this should pay more than he owes:

even as if your lord should wear rich jewels,

and for money for 'em.

I am weary of this charge, the gods can witness:

my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,

and ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns:

What's yours?

Serv. Five thousand mine.

Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem

by the sum,

your master's confidence was above mine;

and rely, his had equal'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

One of lord Timon's men.

Serv. Flaminius! sir, a word: 'Pray, is my lord to come forth?

No, indeed, he is not.

We attend his lordship; 'pray, signify so

to me.

I need not tell him that; he knows, you are diligent. [Exit Flaminius.]

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Do you hear, sir?

Serv. By your leave, sir,—

What do you ask of me, my friend?

We wait for certain money here, sir.

Ay,

and were as certain as your waiting, sure enough. Why then prefer'd you not debts and bills, when your false masters eat your meat? Then they could smile, and fawn on debts, and take down th' interest of their gluttonous maws. You do yourselves it wrong,

and neep; let me pass quietly:

and, my lord and I have made an end;

no more to reckon, he to spend.

Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

If 'twill not,

so base as you; for you serve knaves.

[Exit.]

Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship?

Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and venge enough. Who can speak broader that has no house to put his head in? such against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Here's Servilius; now we shall know

the answer.

If I might beseech you, gentlemen,

To repair some other hour, I should much

Derive from it: for, take it on my soul,

My lord leans wond'rously to discontent.

His comfortable temper has forsok him;

He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick:

And, if it be so far beyond his health,

Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts,

And make a clear way to the gods.

Serv. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord! my

lord!

Enter TIMON in a rage, FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place, which I have feasted, does it now,

Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord.

Both Fur. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.—

What yours?—and yours?

1 Fur. Serv. My lord,—

2 Fur. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall on you!

[Exit.]

Hor. 'Faith, I perceive, our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be call'd desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em.

[Exeunt.]

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me,

the slaves:

Creditors!—devils.

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so:—My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again,

Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:

I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord,

You only speak from your distracted soul;

There is not so much left, to furnish out

A moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care; go,

I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide

Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The same. The Senate-house.

The Senate sitting. Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to 't; the fault's bloody;

'Tis necessary, he should die:

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

1 Sen. Now, captain!

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;

For pity is the virtue of the law,

And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time, and fortune, to lie heavy

Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,

Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth

To those that, without heed, do plunge into it.

He is a man, setting his fate aside,

Y y

Of comely virtues:
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice;
(An honour in him, which buys out his fault;)
But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe:
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains, as if they labour'd
To bring manslaughter into form, set quarrelling
Upon the head of valour; which, indeed,
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born:
He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe; and make his

wrogs
His outsidings; wear them like his raiment, carelessly;
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill?

Alcib. My lord,—

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me,
If I speak like a captain—

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threatnings? I sleep upon it,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy? but if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why then, women are more valiant,
That stay at home, if bearing carry it;
And th'ass more captain than the lion; the felon,
Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,

As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.

To be in anger, is impiety;
But who is man, that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain? his service done
At Lacedæmon, and Byzantium,
Were a sufficient briber for his life.

1 Sen. What's that?

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, h'as done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plentiful wounds?

2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, he Is a sworn rioter: h'as a sin that often
Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:
If there were no foes, that were enough alone
To overcome him: in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages,
And cherish factions: 'Tis infer'd to us,
His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him,
(Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in debt to none,) yet, more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and join them both:
And, for I know, your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns.

If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the law receive't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 Sen. We are for law, he dies; urge it no more,
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or brother,
He forfeits his own blood, that spills another.

Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords,
I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How?

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances. What?

3 Sen.

Alcib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot me;
It could not else be, I should prove so base,
To sue, and be denied such common grace:

My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;

SCENE II.

Athens. A room in Timon's house.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

1 Serr. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you?
 Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
 I am as poor as you.

1 Serr. Such a house broke!
 So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not
 One friend, to take his fortune by the arm,
 And go along with him!

2 Serr. As we do turn our backs
 From our companion, thrown into his grave;
 So his familiars to his buried fortunes
 Slink all away; leave their false vows with him,
 Like empty purses pick'd: and his poor self,
 A dedicated beggar to the air,
 With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
 Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

3 Serr. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's liverly,
 That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
 Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our bark;
 And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,
 Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
 Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
 The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
 Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,

Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say,
As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
We have seen better days. Let each take some;
[Giving them money.]
Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more:
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

[Exit Servants.]
O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who'd be so mock'd with glory? or to live
But in a dream of friendship?
To have his pomp, and all what state compounds,
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart;
Undone by goodness! Strange, unusual good!
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good!
Who then dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
My dearest lord,—bless'd, to be most accur'd,
Rich, only to be wretched;—thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord!
He's flung in rage from this ungrateful seat
Of monstrous friends: nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it.
I'll follow, and inquire him out:
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

The woods.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,—
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is dividant,—touch them with several fortunes;

The greater scorns the lesser: Not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,
But by contempt of nature.

Raise me this beggar, and denude that lord,
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the brother's sides,
The war: that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, This man's a flatterer? if one be,
So are they all; for every grize of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: All is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhor'd
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
Destruction fang mankind!—Earth, yield me roots!

[Digging.]

Who seeks for better of thee, sance his palate
With thy most operant poison? What is here?
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,
I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
Thus much of this, will make black, white; foul, fair;
Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; eoward, valiant.

Ha, you gods! why this? What this, you gods?
Why this

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides;
Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads:
This yellow slave

Will knit and break religions; bless the accur'd;
Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench: this is it,
That makes the wappen'd widow weep again;
She, whom the spital-house, and ulcerous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices
To the April day again. Come, damned earth,
Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds
Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.]—Ha! a drum?—Thou'rt quick,

But yet I'll bury thee: Thou'lt go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:—
Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife,
like manner; PHRYNIA and TIMON.

Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,

at nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
 it be hungry!—Common mother, thou,

[Digging.]
 omb unmeasurable, and infinite breast, id feeds all; whose self-same mettle,
 thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
 the black toad, and adder blue,

The gilded newt, and eyeless venom'd worm,
 With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven
 Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
 Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
 From forth thy plenteous bosom one poor root!
 Ensear thy fertile and conception womb,
 Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!
 Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
 Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
 Hath to the marbled mansion all above
 Never presented!—O, a root,—Dear thanks!
 Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;
 Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts,
 And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
 That from it all consideration slips!

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man? Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: Mea report,
 Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog,
 Whom I would imitate: Consumption catch thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected;
 A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung

From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
 This slave-like habit? and these looks of care!

Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft;
 Hug their diseases'd perfumes, and have forgot

That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
 By putting on the cunning of a carper.

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
 By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,

And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
 Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,

And call it excellent: Thou wast told thus;
 Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid welcome,

To knaves, and all approachers: 'Tis most just,
 That thou turn rascal; had'st thou wealth again,

Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like
 thyself;

A madman so long, now a fool: What, think'st
 That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,

Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moss'd trees,
 That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels,

And skip, when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook,

Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
 To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? call the creatures,—

Whose naked natures live in all the spite
 Of wreakful heaven; whose bare unhoussed trunks,

To the conflicting elements expos'd,
 Answer mere nature,—bid them flatter thee!

O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say, thou art a catiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in't? Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on
 To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
 Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again,
 Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery

Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before:
 The one is filling still, never complete;

The other, at high wish: Best state, contentless,
 Hath a distracted and most wretched being,

Worse than the worst, content.
 Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.
 Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
 With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog.

Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath, proceeded
 The sweet degrees that this brief world affords

To such as may the passive drugs of it
 Freely command, thou wouldest have plung'd thyself

In general riot; melted down thy youth

In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary;
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, the hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment;
That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows;—I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: What hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse,—thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff
To some she beggar, and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!—
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave, and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

I, that I was

No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:

Were all the wealth I have, shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.]

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[Offering him something.]

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.
Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
Tell them here I have gold; look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best, and truest:
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?
Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather,
where I eat it.

Tim. 'Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary.
There's a medal for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medal?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated medlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest, but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass; if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee; and still thou lived'st but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou art hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the corn, pride and wrath would confound the

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The same. Before Timon's cave.

of and Painter; Timon behind, unseen.

of. I took note of the place, it cannot be he abides.

of. What's to be thought of him? Does the old for true, that he is so full of gold?

Timon comes forward from his cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
 Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then

I know thee not: I ne'er had honest man
 About me, I; all that I kept were knaves,
 To serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,
 Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief,
 For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer;—
 then I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
 Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
 But thorough lust, and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
 Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
 To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor wealth lasts,
 To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward so true, so just, and now
 So comfortable? It almost turns

My dangerous nature wild. Let me behold
 Thy face.—Surely, this man was born of woman.—
 Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
 Perpetual-sober ghost! I do proclaim

One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one;

No more, I pray,—and he is a steward.—

How fain would I have hated all mankind,
 And thou redeem'st thyself: But all, save thee,
 I fell with curses.

Methinks, thou art more honest now, than wise;

For, by oppressing and betraying me,
 Thou might'st have sooner got another service:

For many so arrive at second masters,
 Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,

(For I must ever doubt, though we'er so sure,)
 Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,

If not a usuring kindness; and as rich men deal gifts,
 Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose breast

Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:

You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast:

Suspect still comes, where an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
 Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,

Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
 My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me,
 Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange

For this one wish, That you had power and wealth
 To requite me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so!—Thou singly honest man,
 Here, take:—the gods out of my misery

Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy:
 But thus condition'd; Thou shalt build from men;

Hate all, curse all: show charity to none;
 But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,

Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
 What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow them,

Debts wither them: Be men like blasted woods,
 And may diseases lick up their false bloods!

And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay,
 And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hat'st

Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free:
 Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.

[Exeunt severally.]

*Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity:
 'Tis said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.*

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. There- fore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o'the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will, or testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Tim. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking, what I shall say I have provided for him: It must be a personating of himself: a satire against the softness of prosperity; with a discovery of the infinite flatteries, that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:

Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True;

When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold,
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple,
Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark, and plough'st the foam;
Settlest admired reverence in a slave:

To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!
'Fit I do meet them. [Advancing.]

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master.

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,

Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What! to you!

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being! I'm rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better:
You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. He, and myself,
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweedly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. You are honest men: You have heard that I have gold;

I am sure, you have: speak truth: you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but therefore Came not my friend, nor I.

Tim. Good honest men:—Thou draw'st a counterfeit!

Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, sir, as I say:—And for thy fiction,
[To the Poet.]

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,
That thou art even natural in thine art.—
But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,
I must needs say, you have a little fault:
Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I,

You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your

To make it known to us. You'll take it ill

Tim. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you,

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's ne'er a one of you but trusts
That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him di-

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him

Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd,

That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. No

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give:

Rid me these villains from your companies:

Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a

Confound them by some course, and come

I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know

Tim. You that way, and you this, but company:—

Each man apart, all single and alone,

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If, where thou art, two villains shall not Come not near him.—If thou wouldst not

But where one villain is, then him abandon

Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for slaves:

You have done work for me, there's payment

You are an alchymist, make gold of that:

Out, rascal dogs!

[Exit, driving and beating]

Enter FLAVIUS, and two Senators

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with

For he is set so only to himself,

That nothing but himself, which looks like

Is friendly with him.

I Sen. Bring us to his cave:

It is our part, and promise to the Athenians

To speak with Timon.

 Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
 And strain what other means is left unto us
 In our dear peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exit.

SCENE III.

The walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators, and a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd; are his files
 As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least:
 Besides, his expedition promises
 Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend;—
 Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
 Yet our old love made a particular force,
 And made us speak like friends:—this man was riding
 From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
 With letters of entreaty, which imported
 His friendship i'the cause against your city,
 In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter Senators from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.
 3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.—
 The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
 Doth choke the air with dust: In, and prepare;
 Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

The woods. Timon's cave, and a tomb-stone seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.
 Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer!—what is this?
 Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:
 Some beast rear'd this; there does not live a man.
 Dead, sure; and this his grave.—
 What's on this tomb I cannot read; the character
 I'll take with wax:
 Our captain hath in every figure skill;
 An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
 Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
 Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.

SCENE V.

Before the walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES, and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
 Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded.]

Enter Senators on the walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
 With all licentious measure, making your wills
 The scope of justice; till now, myself, and such
 As slept within the shadow of your power,
 Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
 Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flush,
 When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
 Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong
 Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
 And pury insolence shall break his wind
 With fear, and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble, and young,
 When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
 Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear,
 We sent to thee; to give thy rages halm,
 To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
 Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
 Transformed Timon to our city's love,
 By humble message, and by promis'd means;
 We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
 The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
 Were not erected by their hands, from whom
 You have receiv'd your griefs: nor are they such,
 That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall

For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,
(If thy revenges hunger for that food,
Which nature loaths,) take thou the destin'd tenth;
And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square, to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and cull the infected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than hew to't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,

Fall, and no more: and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied, to your publick laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.
Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

The Senators descend, and open the gates.

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o'the sea:
And, on his grave-stone, this insculpture; which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impress
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] Here lies a wretched cur,
wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name: A plague consume you with catiffs left!

Here lie I Timon; who, alive, all living men did ho Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stey here thy gait.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our drops which

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceals
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for ay
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint w

make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.—
Let our drums strike. [Exit

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Rome. A street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.
Cit. Speak, speak. [Several speaking at once.]

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to submit?

Cit. Resolved, resolved.

1 Cit. First, you know, Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

Cit. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

Cit. No more talking on't; let it be done: away,

away.

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians, good: What authority surfeits on, would instruct us: If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess, they relieve us humanely; but they think, we are dearer: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become pleas'd: for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give this good report for't, but that he pays himself with usury.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienced men can be content to say, it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be proudly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you cannot a vice in him: You must in no way say, he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in composition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these?

2 Cit. The other side o' the city is risen: Why stay we here? to the Capitol.

Cit. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft; who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

1 Cit. He's our honest enough; 'Would, all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand?

Where go you

With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling, this fortnight, what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds.

They say, poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know, we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,

Will you undo yourselves?

1 Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care have the patricians of you. For your wants,

Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well strike at the heaven with your staves, as lift them

Against the Roman state; whose course will on the way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs

Of more strong link asunder, than can ever appear in your impediment: For the dearth,

The gods, not the patricians, make it; and your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack,

You are transported by calamity Thither where more attends you; and you slander

The helms o' the state, who care for you like fathers, When you curse them as enemies.

1 Cit. Care for us!—True, indeed!—They ne'er car'd for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their store-houses cramm'd with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers: repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you

A pretty tale; it may be, you have heard it; But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture

To scale't a little more.

1 Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir: yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale: but, an't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the body's members

Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:—
That only like a gulf it did remain
I'the midst o'the body, idle and inactive,
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest; where the other instruments

Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answered,—

I Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?
Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus,
(For, look you, I may make the belly smile,
As well as speak,) it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators, for that
They are not such as you.

I Cit. Your belly's answer: What!
The kingly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?—
Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then? what then?

I Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink o'the body,—

Men. Well, what then?
I Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you;
If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little,) Patience, a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

I Cit. You are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:
*True is it, my incorporate friends, quoth he,
That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon: and fit it is;
Because I am the store-house, and the shop
Of the whole body: But if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart,—to the seat o' the brain;
And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins,
From me receive that natural competency,
Whereby they live: And though that all at once,
You, my good friends, (this says the belly,) mark me,—*
I Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. *Though all at once cannot
See what I do deliver out to each;
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the fower of all,
And leave me but the bran.* What say you to't?

I Cit. It was an answer: How apply you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members: For examine
Their counsels, and their cares; digest things rightly,
Touching the weal o'the common; you shall find,
No publick benefit which you receive,
But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you,
And no way from yourselves.—What do you think?
You, the great toe of this assembly?—

I Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that being one o'the lowest, basest, poorest,

Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost:
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood, to run
Lead'st first, to win some vantage.—

But make you ready your stiff hats and clubs;
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle,
The one side must have bale.—Hail, noble Marcius!

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves seals?

I Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter

Beneath abhorring.—What would you have, you curs,

That like nor peace, nor war? the one affright
The other makes you proud. He that trust
Where he should find you lions, finds you
Where foxes, geese: You are no surer, no
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy, whose offence subd

Such a nature,

he treads on at noon: But I do wonder, solence can brook to be commanded Cominius.

Fame, at the which he aims,— m already he is well grac'd,—cannot be held, nor more attain'd, than by c below the first: for what miscarries be the general's fault, though he perform atmost of a man; and giddy censure hen cry out of Marcius, O, if he

Besides, if things go well,

rcius shall be honours, though, indeed,
ht he merit not.

Let's hence, and hear
he despatch is made; and in what fashion, han in singularity, he goes,
this present action.

Let's along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Corioli. The Senate-House.

TULLUS AUFIDIUS, and certain Senators.

1. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, hey of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
sow how we proceed.

Is it not yours?
ever hath been thought on in this state,
ould be brought to bodily act ere Rome
umvention? 'Tis not four days gone, heard thence; these are the words: I think,
the letter here; yes, here it is: [Reads.]

*They have press'd a power, but it is not known Whether for east, or west: The death is great;
The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius your old enemy,
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you),
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation,
Whither 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.*

1 Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery
We shall be shorten'd in our aim; which was,
To take in many towns, ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your bands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before us, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find
They have not prepar'd for us:

Auf. O, doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more,
Some parcels of their powers are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave you honours.

If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn betwixen us, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Auf. And keep your honours safe!

1 Sen. Farewell.

2 Sen. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Rome. An apartment in Marcius' house.

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA: They sit down on two low stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embracements of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaze his way; when, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was likely to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter,—
I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had prov'd himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam?
how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely:—Had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius,—I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Genl. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks, I hear hither your husband's drum;
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair;
As children from a bear, the Volces shunning him:
Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,—
*Come on, you cowards, you were got in fear,
Though you were born in Rome: His bloody brow
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes;
Like to a harvest-man, that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire,*

Vir. His bloody brow; O, Jupiter, no blood!
Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man,
 Than gilt his trophy: The breasts of Hecuba,
 When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
 Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth blood
 At Grecian swords' contending.—Tell Valeria,
 We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.]
Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!
Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
 And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and her Usher.

Vol. My ladies both, good day to you.
Vol. Sweet madam,—
Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.
Vol. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What, are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith.—How does your little son?
Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Vol. O my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O my troth, I look'd upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirm'd countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; catch'd it again: or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O, I warrant, how he maim'd it!

Vol. One of his father's moods.

Vol. Indeed la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Vol. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Vol. Not out of doors!

Vir. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience: I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

Vol. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably: Come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Vol. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence, did but fill (thæca full of moths. Come; I would, your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Vol. In truth la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Vol. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Vol. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady; as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Vol. In troth, I think, she would:—Fare you well then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Pr'ythee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No: at a word, madam; indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Vol. Well, then farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Before Corioli.

Enter, with drum and colours, MARCIUS, T LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. To the Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news:—A wager, they met.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS.

f. What is become of Marcius?
Slain, sir, doubtless.
J. Following the sliers at the very heels,

when it bows, stands up: Thou art left, Marcius:

to Cato's wish: not fierce and terrible strokes; but, with thy grim looks, and under-like percussion of thy sounds, mad'st shine enemies shake, as if the world
feverous, and did tremble.

Enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

f. Look, sir, 'Tis Marcius.
Fetch him off, or make remain alike.
[They fight, and all enter the city.]

SCENE V.

Within the town. A street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

a. This will I carry to Rome.

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS,

SCENE VI.

Near the camp of Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS and Forces, retreating.

Breathe you, my friends; well fought: we re come off
omans, neither foolish in our stands, wardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
I'll be charg'd again. While we have struck, rims, and conveying gusts, we have heard arges of our friends:—The Roman gods beir successes as we wish our own;
oath our powers, with smiling fronts encountering,

Enter a Messenger.

May give you thankful sacrifice!—Thy news?
Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks, thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?
Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Spies of the Voices
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else, had I, sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter MARCIUS.

Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,
More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man's.

Mar. Come I too late?
Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip you
In arms as sound, as when I woo'd; in heart
As merry, as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did inform the truth: But for our gentlemen,
The common file, (A plague!—Tribunes for them!)
The mouse ne'er smurr'd the cat, as they did budge
From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?
Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think—

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o'the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so!

Com. Marcias,
We have at disadvantage fought, and did
Retire, to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side
They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcias,
Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust: o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius, and his Antiates,
And that you not delay the present; but,
Filling the air with swords advanc'd, and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking; take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing:—If any such be here,
(As it were sin to doubt,) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think, brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many, so minded,
Wave thus, [Waving his hand.] to express his disposition,

And follow Marcins.

[They all shout, and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.]

O me, alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Voices? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select: the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

The gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with a drum and trumpet toward Cominius and Caius Marcius, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.
Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.—
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.

A field of battle between the Roman and the Volcian camps.

Alarum. Enter MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike;
Not Africk owns a serpent, I abhor
More than thy fame and envy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd: 'Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for thy revenge,
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector,
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny
Thou shouldst not scape me here.—

[They fight, and certain Volcians come to the aid of Aufidius.]

Officious, and not valiant—you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds.

[Exeunt fighting, driven in by Marcius.]

SCENE IX.

The Roman camp.

Alarum. A retreat is sounded. Flourish. Enter at one side, COMINIUS and Romans; at the other side, MARCIUS with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou'lt not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it,
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,
I'th' end, admire; where ladies shall be frighted,
And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull
tribunes,

That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours,
Shall say, against their hearts,—*[We thank the gods,
Our Rome hath such a soldier!—*
Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully din'd before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his Power from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:

Hadst thou beheld—

As you have been; that's for my country:
He, that has but effected his good will,
Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must lo
The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traduce
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises vocal
Would seem but modest: therefore, I beseech
(In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,) before our army hear

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe, to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

[A long flourish. They all cry, Marcins' cius! cast up their caps and lances: Com and Lurtius stand bare.]

Mar. May these same instruments, whic

Or soil'd some debile wretch,—which, witho
Here's many else have done,—you shout me
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I lov'd my little should be dieted
In praises, sauc'd with lies.

Where, ere we do repose us, we will write

The camp of the Volces.

i. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

The town is ta'en!
'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.
Condition?—

I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Volce, be that I am.—Condition!

I'dst do so, I think, should we encounter
as we eat.—By the elements,

If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: Mine emulation
Hath not that honour in't, it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,
(True sword to sword,) I'll potch at him some way;
Or wrath, or craft, may get him.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle: My valour's poison'd,

With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick: nor fane, nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there Against the hospitable canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in his heart. Go you to the city;
Learn, how 'tis held; and what they are, that must Be hostages for Rome.

I Sol. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove:
I pray you,
('Tis south the city mills,) bring me word thither
How the world goes; that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.
I Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.]

We do it not alone, sir.
I know, you can do very little alone; for as are many; or else your actions would

Why, then you should discover a brace of

I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in't; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint; hasty, and tinder-like, upon too trivial motion: one that converses more with the buttock of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I utter; and spend my malice in my breath: Meeting two such wealsmen as you are, (I cannot call you Lycurguses,) if the drink you give me, touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worship have deliver'd the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables: and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men; yet they lie deadly, that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it, that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson conspectivities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and leas; you wear out a good wholesome forenoon, in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller; and then rejoinn the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience.—When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the cholick, you make faces like mummies; set up the bloody flag against all patience; and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause, is, calling both the parties knaves:
You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table, than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entomb'd in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Deucalion; though, peradventure, some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. Good e'en to your worship; more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be hold to take my leave of you.

[Brutus and Sicinius retire.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee:—Hoo! Marcius coming home!

Two Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night:—A letter for me?

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricick, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much:—Brings 'a victory in his pocket?—The wounds become him.

Vol. On's brows, Menenius: he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Larcus writes,—they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had staid by him, I would not have been so fidius'd for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go:—Yes, yes, yes: the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Val. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous? ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True? I'll be sworn they are true:—Where is he wounded?—God save your good workshops! [To the Tribunes.] Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud.—Where is he wounded?

Vol. I'the shoulder, and i'the left arm: There will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received, in the repulse of Tarquin, seven hurts i'the body.

Men. One in the neck, and two in the thigh,—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave: [A shout, and flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him He carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears; Death, that dark spirit, in's nery arm doth lie; Which being advanc'd, declines; and then men die.

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight Within Corioli's gates: where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these In honour follows, Coriolanus!—

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [Flourish.]

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart; Pray now, no more.

Com.

Look, sir, your mother,

Cor.

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods For my prosperity.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,

What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee? But O, thy wife—

Cor.

My gracious silence, Wouldst thou have laugh'd, had I come home,

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my d Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, And mothers that lack sons.

Men.

Now the gods crown Cor. And live you yet!—O my sweet lady,

Vol. I know not where to turn:—O welcome And welcome, general;—And you are welcome

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I weep,

And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy: come:

A curse begin at very root of his heart, That is not glad to see thee!—You are three That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of We have some old crab-trees here at home will not

The faults of fools, but folly, Ever right.

Com.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on.

Cor.

Your hand, and Ere in our own house I do shade my head,

The good patricians must be visited; From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings

But with them change of honours.

Vol.

To see inherited my very wishes, And the buildings of my fancy: only there Is one thing wanting, which I doubt not, but Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor.

Know, good I had rather be their servant in my way, Than sway with them in theirs.

Com.

On, to the [Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt ladies before. The Tribunes come forward.]

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the sights

Are spectacl'd to see him: Your prattling Into a rapture lets her baby cry,

While she chats him: the kitchen malkin Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck,

Clambering the walls to eye him: Stalls, windows,

Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges high With variable complexions; all agreeing

In earnestness to see him: sold-shown flames Do press among the popular throngs, and

To win a vulgar station: our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask, in

Their nicely-gawded cheeks, to the war-ton Of Phoebus' burning kisses: such a pothor,

As if that whatsoever god, who leads him, Were silly crept into his human powers,

And gave him gentle posture.

Stc.

On the sud I warrant him consul.

Bru.

Then our office may, During his power, go sleep.

Stc. He cannot temperately transport his h From where he should begin, and end; but Lose those that he hath won.

'Tis right.
It was his word: O, he would miss it

If I wish no better,

rtied their freedoms: holding them,

This, as you say, suggested time when his soaring insolence ch the people, (which time shall not want,
put upon't; and that's as easy, dogs on sheep,) will be his fire
: their dry stubble; and their blaze
ken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

What's the matter?

You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis ught,
reius shall be consul: I have seen
b men throng to see him, and the blind im speak: The matrons flung their gloves, od maid's their scarfs and handkerchiefs,
a as he pass'd: the nobles bended,
re's statue; and the commons maile
, and thunder, with their caps, and shouts:
aw the like.

Let's to the Capitol;
y with us ears and eyes for the time, s for the event.

Have with you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions.

Come, come, they are almost here; How nd for consulships?

Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every olanus will carry it.

That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance
d loves not the common people.

Faith, there have been many great men flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them;
be many that they have loved they know eave: so that, if they love they know not y hate upon no better ground: Therefore, anus neither to care whether they love or manifests the true knowledge he has in osition; and, out of his noble carelessness, plainly see't.

If he did not care whether he had their no, he waded indifferently 'twixt doing her good, nor harm; but he seeks their greater devotion than they can render it l leaves nothing undone, that may fully im their opposite. Now to seem to affect and displeasure of the people, is as bad as h he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.
He hath deserved worthily of his country:
scent is not by such easy degrees as these,
ing been supple and courteous to the peo-etted, without any further deed to heave ll into their estimation and report: but o planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise, were a mallice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

I Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man:
Make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter, with Lictors before them, COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, many other Senators, SICINIUS and BRUTUS. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volces, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that Hath thus stood for his country: Therefore, please

you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire

The present consul, and last general

In our well-found successes, to report

A little of that worthy work perform'd

By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom

We meet here, both to thank, and to remember

With honours like himself.

I Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Masters o'the people,
We do request your kindest ears; and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convened
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people, than
He hath hitherto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off;
I would you rather had been silent: Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly:
But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak.—Nay, keep your place.
[Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.]

I Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon;
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope,
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: But, your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.
Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head

i'the sun,
When the alarum were struck, than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

[Exit Coriolanus.]
Men. Masters o'the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
(That's thousand to one good one,) when you now see,
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one of his ears to hear it?—Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is held,
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him: he bestrid
An o'erpress'd Roman, and i'the consul's view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met,

And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd all swords o' the garland. For this last,

Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: He stopp'd the fliers;
And by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as waves before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword (death's stamp)
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate o' the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny; aidless came off,
And with a sudden reinforcement struck
Corioli like a planet: Now all's his;
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense: then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigue,
And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if 'Twere a perpetual spoil: and, till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!
I Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours

Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right noble;
Let him be call'd for.

I Sen. Call for Coriolanus,

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please
you,

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:—
Pray you, go fit you to the custom; and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people

Bru. Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them,—Thus I did, and thus:—
Show them the unaking scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only:—

Men. Do not stand upon't.—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them;—and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Then exunt Senators.]

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive 's intent! He will require
them,

As if he did condemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know, they do attend us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we

Here he comes, and in the gown of humilithis behaviour. We are not to stay all i-but to come by him where he stands, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his req-particulars: wherein every one of us has honour, in giving him our own voices with

Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?
 Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd:
 The people do admit you; and are summon'd
 To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?
 Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I then change these garments?
 Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself
 again,

Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you along?
 Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
 'Tis warm at his heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
 His humble weeds: Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters? have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods; he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, sir: To my poor unworthy notice,

He mock'd us, when he begg'd our voices.

2 Cit. Certainly,

He flouted us down-right.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

3 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says,

He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us

His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Cit. No; no man saw 'em.

[General speak.]

3 Cit. He said, he had wounds which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,

I would be consul, says he: aged custom,

But by your voices, will not so permit me;

Your voices therefore: When we granted that,

Here was,—I thank you for your voices,—thank you,—

Your most sweet voices:—now you have left your voices,

I have no further with you:—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, were you ignorant to see't?

Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness

To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him,

As you were less'n'd,—When he had no power,

But was a petty servant to the state,

He was your enemy; ever spake against

Your liberties, and the charters that you bear

I'the body of the weal: and now, arriving

A place of potency, and sway o'the state,

If he should still malignantly remain

Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might

Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,

That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less

Than what he stood for; so his gracious nature

Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,

Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,

As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit,

And try'd his inclination; from him pluck'd

Either his gracious promise, which you might,

As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;

Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,

Which easily endures not article

Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,

You should have ta'en advantage of his choler,

And pass'd him uneleected.

Bru. Did you perceive,

He did solicit you in free contempt,

When he did need your loves; and do you think,

That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,

When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies

No heart among you? Or had you tongues, to cry

Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you,

Ere now, deny'd the asker? and, now again,

On him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow

Your su'd-for tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.
 2 Cit. And will deny him:
 I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.
 1 Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly; and tell those friends,—

They have chose a consul, that will from them take
 Their liberties; make them of no more voice
 Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
 As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
 And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
 Your ignorant election: Enforce his pride,
 And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
 With what contempt he wore the humble weed;
 How in his suit he scorn'd you: but your loves,
 Thinking upon his services, took from you
 The apprehension of his present portance,
 Which gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
 After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay
 A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd, (No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
 More after our commandment, than as guided
 By your own true affections: and that, your minds
 Pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do
 Than what you should, made you against the grain
 To voice him consul: Lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures to
 you,

How youngly he began to serve his country
 How long continued: and what stock he got
 The noble house o'the Marcians; from when

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. A street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?
Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was, which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volces stand but as at first;
 Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
 Upon 's again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
 That we shall hardly in our ages see
 Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?
Lart. On safe-guard he came to me; and did curse
 Against the Volces, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.
Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword:
 That, of all things upon the earth, he hated
 Your person most: that he would pawn his fortunes
 To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.
Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
 To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home.
 [To Lartius.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
 The tongues o'the common mouth. I do despise
 them;

For they do prank them in authority,
 Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further.

Cor. Ha! What is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to Go on: no further.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows t
 To curb the will of the nobility:—

Suffer 't, and live with such as cannot rul
 Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru. Call't not a plot:
 The people cry, you mock'd them; and, o
 When corn was given them gratis, you re

 Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to t

Cor. Have you inform'd them since?

Bru. How! I inform

Cor. You are like to do such business.

Bru. No

Each way, to better ymurs.

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By you

Sic. You show too much
 For which the people stir: If you will pas their pardons:—

 mutable, rank-scented many, let them

 behold themselves: I say again, of them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
 the rebellion, insurrection, sedition,
 'ere ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and ster'd,
 ing them with us, the honour'd number;
 e not virtue, no, nor power, but that they have given to beggars.

Well, no more.
 No more words, we beseech you.

How! no more?
 y country I have shed my blood,
 ng outward force, so shall my lungs senators: and they are no less,

 h your voices blended, the greatest taste es theirs. They choose their magistrate a one as he, who puts his shall,

 when two authorities are up,

Why, shall the people give

I'll give my reasons,
 ier than their voices. They know, the corn r recompense; resting well assur'd lid service for't: Being press'd to the war,
 the navel of the state was touch'd,
 I not thread the gates: this kind of service serve corn gratis: being i'the war, nies and revolts, wherein they show'd

 y have often made against the senate, aborn, could never be the native, rank donation. Well, what then?
 this bosom multiplied digest
 's courtesy? Let deeds express
 : to be their words:—We did request it;

*We are the greater poll, and in true fear
 They gave us our demands:—* Thus we debase
 The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
 Call our cares, fears: which will in time break open
 The locks o'the senate, and bring in the crows
 To peck the eagles.—

Men. Come, enough.
Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more:
 What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
 Seal what I end withal!—This double worship,—
 Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
 Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom
 Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
 Of general ignorance,—it must omit
 Real necessities, and give way the while
 To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,
 Nothing is done to purpose: Therefore, beseech you,—
 You that will be less fearful than discreet;
 That love the fundamental part of state,
 More than you doubt the change of't; that prefer
 A noble life before a long, and wish
 To jump a body with a dangerous physick
 That's sure of death without it,—at once pluck out
 The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
 The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour
 Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
 Of that integrity which should become it;
 Not having the power to do the good it would,
 For the ill which doth control it.

Bru. He has said enough.
Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
 As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!—
 What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
 On whom depending, their obedience fails
 To the greater bench: In a rebellion,
 When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
 Theo were they chose; in a better hour,
 Let what is meet, be said, it must be meet,
 And throw their power i'the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason.
Sic. This a consul? no.
Bru. The ædiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.
Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit Brutus.] in whose name, myself

Attach thee, as a traitorous innovator,
 A foe to the publick weal: Obey, I charge thee,
 And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!
Sen. & Pat. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
 Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens.

Re-enter BRUTUS, with the Ædiles, and a rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect.
Sic. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, ædiles.
Cit. Down with him, down with him!
 [Several speak.]

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons!
 [They all bustle about Coriolanus.]

Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—what ho!—
 Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!

Cit. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of breath;
 Confusion's near; I cannot speak:—You, tribunes
 To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:—
 Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people:—Peace.
Cit. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace. Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
 Marcius would have all from you; Marcius,
 Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!
 This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

1 Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city, but the people?
Cit. True,

The people are the city.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd

The people's magistrates.

Cit. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Cor. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation;
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.

Sic. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it:—We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o' the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy
Of present death.

Sic. Therefore, lay hold of him;
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ædiles, seize him.

Cit. Yield, Marcius, yield.

Men. Hear me one word.

‘Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Æd. Peace, peace.

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,
And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous
Where the disease is violent:—Lay hands upon him,
And bear him to the rock.

Cor. No; I'll die here.

[Drawing his sword.

There's some among you have beheld me fighting;
Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that sword;—Tribunes, withdraw a while.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help, help, Marcius! help,
You that be noble; help him, young, and old!

Cit. Down with him, down with him!

[In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People, are beat in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone, away,
All will be naught else.

2 Sen. Get you gone.

Cor. Stand fast;
We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that?

1 Sen. The gods forbid!
I pry'thee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us,
You cannot tent yourself: Begone, 'beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians, (as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd,) not Romans, (as they are not,

Though call'd i'the porch o'the Capitol.)—

Men. Be gone;
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;
One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground,
I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself
Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetick;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabrick.—Will you hence,
Before the tag return? whose rage doth read
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are us'd to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone:
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little; this must be patch'd
With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, and Others.

1 Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for his power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. [A noise within.
Here's goodly work!

I'll bring him to you:—

He must come,

Pray you, let's to him.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A room in Coriolanus's house.

Enter CORIOLANUS, and Patricians.

Let them pull all about mine ears; present me on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
e ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
the precipitation might down stretch the beam of sight, yet will I still is to them.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

You do the nobler.
I muse, my mother
not approve me further, who was wont l them woollen vassals, things created y and sell with groats; to show bare heads gregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder, one but of my ordinance stood up ak of peace, or war. I talk of you;

[To Volumnia.]
Did you wish me milder? Would you have me to my nature? Rather say, I play as I am.

O, sir, sir, sir,
d have had you put your power well on,
you had worn it out.

Let go.
You might have been enough the man you are, striving less to be so: Lesser had been warrings of your dispositions, if ed not show'd them how you were dispos'd ey lack'd power to cross you.

Let them hang.
Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS, and Senators.

Come, come, you have been too rough,
something too rough;
ust return, and mend it.

There's no remedy;
y, by not so doing, our good city
in the midst, and perish.

Pray be counselld:
a heart as little apt as yours,
t a brain, that leads my use of anger,
ter vantage.

Well said, noble woman:
he should thus stoop to the herd, but that olent fit o'the time craves it as physick
e whole state, I would put mine armour on,
I can scarcely bear.

What must I do?
Return to the tribunes.

Well,
then? what then?

Repeat what you have spoke.
For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
then do't to them?

You are too absolute;
a therein you can never be too noble,
en extremities speak. I have heard you say,
r and policy, like nnsaver'd friends,
r and grow together: Grant that, and tell me,
e, what each of them by th' other lose,
ay combine not there.

Tush, tush!

Men. A good demand.
Vol. If it be honour, in your wars, to seem
The same you are not, (which, for your best ends,
You adopt your policy,) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?
Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you to,
But with such words that are but roted in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—

I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general lowts
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon them,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us; speak fair: you may save so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it, (here be with them,)
Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant
More learned than the ears,) waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble, as the ripest mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: Or, say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils,
Hast not the soft way, which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power, and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, all their hearts were yours.
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Pr'ythee now,
Go, and be rul'd: although, I know, thou hadst
rather
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf,
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i'the market-place: and, sir,
'tis fit

You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness, or by absence; all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think, 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will:—
Pr'ythee, now, say, you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd scence?
Must I

With my base tongue, give to my noble heart
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw it against the wind.—To the marketplace:—

You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet son; as thou hast said,
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves

Tent in my cheeks; and schoolboys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an aim!—I will not do't:
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And, by my body's action, teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me;
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content;
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home belov'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I' the way of flattery, further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.]
Com. Away, the tribunes do attend you: arm
yourself

To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly:—Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.
Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. The Forum.Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects

Tyrannical power: If he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people;
And that the spoil, got on the Antiates,
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come?

Æd. He's coming.
Bru. How accompanied?

Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?

Æd. I have; 'tis ready, here.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?

Æd. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, It shall be so
I' the right and strength o' the commons, be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say, fine, cry fine; if death, cry death;
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i' the truth o' the cause.

Æd. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Æd. Very well.
Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give't them.

Bru. Go about it.—
[Exit Ædile.]

Put him to choler straight: He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction: Being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What's in his heart; and that is there, which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMI-NIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Sic. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poor
Will bear the knave by the volume.—The gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice Supplied with worthy men! plant love among
Through our large temples with the shows,
And not our streets with war!

I Sen. Amen, and Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes; audience: Peace
Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say.—
Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand,
If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor. I am content
Men. Lo, citizens, he says, he is content
The warlike service he has done, consider
Think on the wounds his body bears, whi
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.

Cor. Scratches whi
Sears to move laughter only.

Men. Consider fu
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier: Do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well, no m
Cor. What is the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voi
I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour
You take it off again?

Sic. Answer to us.

Cor. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sic. We charge you, that you have contri
From Rome all season'd office, and to w
Yourself into a power tyrannical;
For which, you are a traitor to the people

Cor. How! Traitor?

Men. Nay; temperately: Your

The promise that you made your mother!

Cor. I'll know no further:

Let me speak:

smies' marks upon me. I do love country's good, with a respect more tender, thy, and profound, than mine own life,
my wife's estimate, her womb's increase,
my assurance of my loins: then if I would
that—

We know your drift: Speak what?
There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,
I say to the people, and his country:
it shall be so.

It shall be so, it shall be so.
Your common cry of curs: whose breath I hate

As reek o'the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air, I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till, at length,
Your ignorance, (which finds not, till it feels,)
Making not reservation of yourselves,
(Still your own foes), deliver you, as most Abated captives, to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back:
There is a world elsewhere.

[*Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Menenius,
Senators, and Patricians.*]

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!
Cit. Our enemy's banish'd! he is gone! Hoo!
hoo!

[The People shout, and throw up their caps.
Sc. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,
As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the city.

Cit. Come, come, let us see him out at gates;
come:—
The gods preserve our noble tribunes!—Come.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same. Before a gate of the city.

CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENIENUS, COMINIUS, and several young lads.

Some, leave your tears; a brief farewell:—
we best

many heads butts me away.—Nay, mother, is your ancient courage? you were us'd extremity was the trier of spirits;
common chances common men could bear;
when the sea was calm, all boats alike mastership in floating: fortune's blows, most struck home, being gentle wounded, caves

dunning: you were us'd to load me receipts, that would make invincible art that conn'd them.
O heavens! O heavens!
Nay, I pry'thee, woman,—
Now the red pestilence strike all trades in some,
occupations perish!

What, what, what!
be lov'd, when I am lack'd. Nay, mother, that spirit, when you were wont to say,
had been the wife of Hercules, is labours you'd have done, and sav'd husband so much sweat.—Cominius, ot; adieu:—Farewell, my wife! my mother!
well yet.—Thou old and true Menenius, rs are saltier than a younger man's,
somous to thine eyes.—My sometime general, seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld ard'ning spectacles; tell these sad women,
d to wait inevitable strokes,
a laugh at them.—My mother, you wot well, ards still have been your solace: and t not lightly, (though I go alone, a lonely dragon, that his fen

autelons baits and practice.

My first son,
x wilt thou go? Take good Cominius see a while: Determine on some course, an a wild exposure to each chance arts i'the way before thee.

O the gods!
I'll follow thee a moath, devise with thee
thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of us,

And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world, to seek a single man;
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I'the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well!—
Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full
Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruist: bring me but out at gate.—
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still; and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear.—Come, let's not weep.—
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand:—
Come.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A street near the gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an Ædile.
Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no
further.—

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided
In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done,
Than when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home:
Say, their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENIENUS.
Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Bru. Why?
Sic. They say, she's mad.

Bru. They have ta'en note of us:
Keep on your way.

Vol. O, you're well met: The hoarded plague
o'the gods
Requite your love!
Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.
Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—

Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be gone?

Vir. You shall stay too: [To Brutus.
I had the power
To Sicin.] I would,

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankied?
Vol. Ay, fool; Is that a shame?—None but this fool.—

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words;
And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what;—Yet
go:—

Nay, but thou shalt stay too:—I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?
Vir. What then?

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards, and all.—

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continued to his country,
As he began; and not unknit himself

The noble knot he made.
Bru. I would he had.
Vol. I would he had? 'Twas you incens'd the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:
You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:
As far as doth the Capitol exceed

The meanest house in Rome; so far, my son,
(This lady's husband here, this, do you see),
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her wits?
Vol. Take my prayers with you.—
I would the gods had nothing else to do,

[Exeunt Tribunes.
But to confirm my curses! Could I meet them
But once a day, it would unlog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,
And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's go:
Leave this faint pulsing, and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.
Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

A highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Voice, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me:
your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against them: Know you me yet?

Vol. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vol. You had more heard, when I last saw you;
but your favour is well appear'd by your tongue.
What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volcian state, to find you out there: You have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness, to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I you, and is almost mature for the violent break

Vol. Coriolanus banish'd?
Rom. Banish'd, sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intel-Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now.
heard it said, The fittest time to corrupt a wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband.
Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear these wars, his great opposer Coriolanus be in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortuna-accidentally to encounter you: You have en-business, and I will merrily accompany you

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, most strange things from Rome; all tendin-good of their adversaries. Have you a

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions, a action. So, sir, heartily well met, and m

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together.

SCENE IV.

Antium. Before Aufidius's house.

and muffled.*

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium: City

He dees fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service.

SCENE V.

The same. A hall in Aufidius's house

Musick within. Enter a Servant.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service
I think our fellows are asleep.

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus? my master calls
Cotus!

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house: The feast smells we Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servant.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend!

a. Here's no place for you: Pray, go to

 I have deserv'd ne better entertainment,

Re-enter second Servant.

v. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his his head, that he gives entrance to such lions? Pray, get you out.

Away!

o. Away! Get you away.

Now thou art troublesome.

o. Are you so brave? I'll have you talk'd

Enter a third Servant. The first meets him.

o. What fellow's this?

o. A strange one as ever I look'd on: I can-him out o'the house: Pr'ythee, call my
 to him.

o. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray did the house.

Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

o. What are you?

A gentleman.

o. A marvellous poor one.

True, so I am.

o. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some ation; here's no place for you; pray you,
 come.

Follow your function, go,
 ten on cold bits. [Pushes him away.]

What, will you not? Pr'ythee, tell my what a strange guest he has here.

o. And I shall. [Exit.]

o. Where dwell'st thou?

Under the canopy.

o. Under the canopy?

Ay.

Where's that?

Under the city of kites and crows.

o. Under the city of kites and crows?—What an

!—Then thou dwell'st with daws too?

No, I serve not thy master.

o. Hew, sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Ay, 'tis an honest service than to meddle
 y mistress:

o. 'Tis a cat's, and prat's; serve with thy trencher,
 once! [Beats him away.]

Enter AUFIDIUS and the second Servant.

Where is this fellow?

o. Here, sir; I'd have beaten him like a for disturbing the lords within.

Whence comest thou? What wouldst thou?

o. By name?

o. Speak'st not? Speak, man: What's thy name?

o. If, Tullius, [Unmuffling.]

o. Thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not as for the man I am, necessarily name me name myself.

What is thy name?

o. [Servants retire.]

A name unmusical to the Volcians' ears, ash in sound to thine.

Say, what's thy name?

o. I have a grim appearance, and thy face command in't; though thy tackle's torn,

now'st a noble vessel: What's thy name?

o. Prepare thy brow to frown: Know'st thou me yet?

o. I know thee not:—Thy name?

o. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done particularly, and to all the Volces, virt and mischief; thereto witness may name, Coriolanus: The painful service, perils, dangers, and the drops of blood

in my thankless country, are requited

with that surname; a good memory, of the malice and displeasure

thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;

and envy of the people,

ed by our dastard nobles, who

I forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;

and I am left by the voice of slaves to be

Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity
 Hath brought me to thy hearth; Not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
 I had fear'd death, of all the men 't the world
 I would have 'voided thee: but in mere spite,
 To be full quit of those my banishers,
 Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
 A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge
 Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those maims
 Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee
 straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn; so use it,
 That my revengeful services may prove
 As benefits to thee; for I will fight Against my canker'd country with the spleen
 Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes
 Thou art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am
 Longer to live most weary, and present
 My throat to thee, and to thy ancient malice:
 Which not to cut, would show thee but a fool;
 Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate,
 Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,
 And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
 It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius,
 Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from thy
 heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
 Should from yon cloud speak divine things, and say,
 'Tis true; I'd not believe them more than thee,
 All noble Marcius.—O, let me twine
 Mine arms about that body, where against
 My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,
 And scar'd the moon with splinters! Here I clip
 The avil of my sword; and do contest
 As hotly and as nobly with thy love,
 As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
 I lov'd the maid I married; never man
 Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
 Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart,
 Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee,
 We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
 Once more to hew thy target from thy brow,
 Or lose mine arm for't: Thou hast beat me out
 Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
 We have been down together in my sleep,
 Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,
 And wak'd halfdead with nothing. Worthy Marcius,
 Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
 From twelve to seventy; and, pouring war
 Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
 Like a bold flood o'er-beat. O, come, go in,
 And take our friendly senators by the hands;
 Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
 Who am prepar'd against your territories,
 Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take

The one half of my commission; and set down,—

As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st

Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways:

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,

Or rudely visit them in parts remote,

To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:

Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say, yea, to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!

And more a friend than e'er an enemy;

Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand! Most welcome! [Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.]

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have struck him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: He had, sir, a kind of face,

methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were,— 'Would I were hang'd, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: He is simply the rarest man i'the world.

1 Serv. I think, he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot one.

2 Serv. Who? my master?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Serv. Worth six of him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. 'Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3 Serv. O, slaves, I can tell you news; news,
you rascals.

1, 2 Serv. What, what, what? let's partake.

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations;
I had as lieve be a condemn'd man.

1, 2 Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general, Caius Marcius.

1 Serv. Why do you say, thwack our general?

3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him.

2 Serv. Come, we are fellows, and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Corioli, he scotch'd him and notch'd him like a carbonado.

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broil'd and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But, more of thy news?

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars: set at upper end o'the table: no question ask'd him by any of the senators, but they stand hal'd before him: our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o'the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i'the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowle the porter of Rome gates by the ears: He will woe down all before him, and leave his passage poll'd.

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do't? he will do't: For, look you, sir,
he has as many friends as enemies: which friends,
sir, (as it were,) durst not (look you, sir,) show themselves (as we term it,) his friends, whilst he's in directitude.

1 Serv. Directitude! what's that?

3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all
with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward?

3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

1 Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace, as far as day does night; it's sprightly, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; mull'd, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more hasty children, than wars
a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'Tis so: and as wars, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher; so it cannot be denied,
but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volcians.—They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in.

[Exeunt.

The nobles, in great earnestness, are going to the senate house: some news is come, turns their countenances.

'Tis this slave;—
Iip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his raising!

Yes, worthy sir,

What more fearful?

This is most likely!

Marcius home again.

This is unlikely:
Aufidius can no more atone,

Enter another Messenger.

You are sent for to the senate:
ul army, led by Caius Marcius,
ted with Aufidius, rages
our territories; and have already ne their way, consum'd with fire, and took lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.

O, you have made good work!
What news? what news?
You have help to ravish your own daughters, and

It the city leads upon your pates;
your wives dishonour'd to your noses;—
What's the news? what's the news?
Your temples burned in their cement; and franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd an augre's bore.

Pray now, your news?—
ave made fair work, I fear me:—Pray, your news?
rcius should be join'd with Volcians,—

If!
their god; he leads them like a thing
by some other deity than nature, shapes man better: and they follow him,
at us brats, with no less confidence,
boys pursuing summer butterflies,
uchers killing flies.

You have made good work,
and your apron-men; you that stood so much the voice of occupation, and death of garlick-eaters!

He will shake
Rome about your ears. As Hercules shake down mellow fruit: You have made fair
work!

But is this true, sir?
Ay; and you'll look pale you find it other. All the regions ally revolt; and, who resist, ily mock'd for valiant ignorance,
erish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?
enemies, and his, find something in him.
i. We are all undone, unless oble man have mercy.

Who shall ask it?
ribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
re such pity of him, as the wolf of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they d say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him even ose should do that had deserv'd his hate, herein show'd like enemies.

'Tis true:
were putting to my house the brand should consume it, I have not the face y, Beseech you, cease.—You have made fair
hands,
and your crafts! you have crafted fair!
You have brought

A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.
Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but,
like beasts,
And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clusters,
Who did hoot him out o'the city.

Com. But, I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer:—Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.—
And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip; as many coxcombs,
As you threw caps up, will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Cit. 'Faith, we hear fearful news.
1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.
3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: That we did, we did for the best:
and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You are goodly things, you voices!
Men. You have made
Good work, you and your cry!—Shall us to the Capitol!

Com. O, ay; what else? [Exeunt Com. and Men.]
Sic. Go, masters, get you home, be not dismay'd;
These are a side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were i'the wrong,
when we banish'd him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.
[Exeunt Citizens.]

Bru. I do not like this news.
Sic. Nor I.
Bru. Let's to the Capitol:—Would, half my wealth
Would buy this for a lie!
Sic. Pray, let us go.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

A camp; at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS, and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?
Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him; but
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now;
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more prondlier
Even to my person, than I thought he would,
When first I did embrace him: Yet his nature
In that's no changeling; and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish, sir,
(I mean, for your particular,) you had not Join'd in commission with him: but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less appare't
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volcian state;
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword: yet he hath left undone

That, which shall break his neck, or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down,
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators, and patricians, love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome,
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fall in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,

Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but common
peace

Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war: but, one of these (As he hath spies of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him,) made him fear
So hated, and so banish'd: But he has a
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtue Lies in the interpretation of the time:
And power, unto itself most commodeable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one
Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strength Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Rome. A publick place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and Others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear, what he hath said,
Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me, father:
But what o'that? Go, you that banish'd him,
A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel
The way into his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name:
I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to: forbade all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name i'the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work:
A pair of tribunes, that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap: A noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: He replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well:
Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For his private friends: His answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome, musty chaff: He said, 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain
Or two? I am one of those; his mother, wife,
His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the moon! We must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: If you refuse your aid
In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid us with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. I pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?
Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcus.

Men. Well, and say that Marcus
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?—
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? Say't be so?

Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake it:
I think, he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.

He was not taken well; he had not din'd:
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and
We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but, when we have These pipes and these conveyances of our
With wine and feeding, we have suppler
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his
And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll pro
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have kn
Of my success.

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his injur
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before h
'Twas very faintly he said, Rise; dismiss
Thus, with his speechless hand: What he w
He sent in writing after me; what he wot
Bound with an oath, to yield to his condit
So, that all hope is vain,
Unless his noble mother, and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's
And with our fair entreaties haste them on

SCENE II.

*An advanced post of the Volscian camp before
The Guard at their stations.*

Enter to them MENENIUS.

I G. Stay: Whence are you?

2 G. Stand, and

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well:
your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?

Men. From

1 G. You may not pass, you must retu

You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my fr

If you have heard your general talk of Ro
And of his friends there, it is lots to blank
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Me

1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of yo
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The hook of his good acts, whence men ha
His fame unparallel'd, haply, amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends,
(Of whom he's chief,) with all the size, the
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, somet
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,

omble past the throw; and in his praise most, stamp'd the leasing: Therefore, fellow, have leave to pass.

Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in life, as you have uttered words in your own, had not pass here: no, though it were as to lie, as to live chastly. Therefore, go back. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is, always factionary on the party of your Whoever you have been his liar, (as you have,) I am one that, telling true under say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back. Has he din'd, canst thou tell? for I would kiss with him till after dinner.

You are a Roman, are you? I am as thy general is.

Then you should hate Rome, as he does, when you have push'd out your gates the eider of them, and, in a violent popular rage, given your enemy your shield, think to revenge with the easy groans of old wo-irginal palms of your daughters, or with ed intercession of such a decay'd dotant as I to be? Can you think to blow out the in-ire your city is ready to flame in, with such such as this? No, you are deceiv'd; there-fore to Rome, and prepare for your execution: condemn'd, our general has sworn you out re and pardon.

Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, I use me with estimation.

I mean, my captain knows you not.

I mean, thy general.

My general cares not for you. Back, I say, let forth your half pint of blood;—back,—e utmost of your having:—back.

Nay, but fellow, fellow,—

or CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

What's the matter?

Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for a shall know now, that I am in estimation; I perceive, that a Jack guardant cannot office my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my enant with him, if thou stand'st not i'th' state ag, or of some death more long in specta-nd crueler in suffering; behold now pre-nd swoon for what's to come upon thee.—ious gods sit in hourly synod about thy prosperity, and love thee no worse than ather Menenius does! O, my son! my son! preparing fire for us; look thee, here's quench it. I was hardly moved to come but being assured, none but myself could se, I have been blown out of your gates with od conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy ry countrymen. The good gods assuage b, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet his, who, like a block, hath denied my y, thee.

Away!

How! away?

Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs ented to others: Though I owe nge properly, my remission lies an breasts. That we have been familiar, forgetfulness shall poison, rather ty note how much.—Therefore, be gone. es against your suits are stronger, than es against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee, as along; I writ it for thy sake, ould have sent it. Another word, Menenius, y bear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius, y below'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st— You keep a constant temper.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Now, sir, is your name Menenius? Tis a spell, you see, of much power: You e way home again.

Do you hear how we are shent for keeping amess back?

What cause, do you think, I have to swoon? I neither care for the world, nor your : for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, he that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! [Exit.

1 G. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2 G. The worthy fellow is our general: He is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The tent of Coriolanus.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and Others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow Set down our host.—My partner in this action, You must report to the Volcian lords, how plainly I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends

You have respected; stopp'd your ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Lov'd me above the measure of a father; Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him: for whose old love, I have (Though I show'd scarily to him,) once more offer'd The first conditions, which they did refuse, And cannot now accept, to grace him only, That thought he could do more; a very little I have yielded too: Fresh embassies, and suits, Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to.—Ha! what shout is this?

[Shout within.

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not.—

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUM-NIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand The grandchild to her blood. But, out, affection! All bond and privilege of nature, break!

Let it be virtuous, to be obstinate.—

What is that eurt's worth? or those doves' eyes, Which can make gods forsworn?—I melt, and am not Of stronger earth than others.—My mother bows; As if Olympus to a molehill should

In supplication nod: and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries, Deny not.—Let the Volcea Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct; but stand, As if a man were author of himself, And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same, I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus chang'd, Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now,

I have forgot my part, and I am out, Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny; but do not say, For that, Forgive our Romans.—O, a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! Now by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods! I prate, And the most noble mother of the world Leave unsaluted: Sink, my knee, i'th' earth;

[Kneels.

Of thy deep duty more impression show Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless'd!

Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint, I kneel before thee; and unproperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while Between the child and parent.

[Kneels.

Cor. What is this?

Your knees to me? to your corrected son? Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach Phillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds

Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun;
Murdring impossibility, to make,
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle,
That's curdled by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple: Dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove
To shame invulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy.
Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before;
The things, I have forsworn to grant, may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanicks:—Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not
To allay my rages and revenges, with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said, you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: Yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness: therefore hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volces, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private.—Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment,

And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should

Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;

Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy: For how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,

Whereto we are bound; together with thy victory,
Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had

Our wish, which side should win: for either thou Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets; or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin;
And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread
(Trust to't, thou shalt not), on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and on mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.

Boy. He shall not tread on me;
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend

To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volces whom you serve, you might conder
As poisonous of your honour: No; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volce
May say, This mercy we have show'd; and the Ro-
This we receiv'd; and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, Be bless'd!
For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a one Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses
Whose chronicle thus writ,—*The man was not
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out*;
*Destroy'd his country; and his name remains
To the ensuing age, abhorr'd.* Speak to me,
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak
He cares not for your weeping.—Speak that Perhaps, thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons.—There is no man
world

More bound to his mother; yet here he
prate

Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in-
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she, (poor hen!) fond of no second,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely be-Loaden with honour. Say, my request's u-
And spurn me back: But, if it be not so,
Thou art not honest; and the gods will plague
That thou restrain'st from me the duty, wit-
To a mother's part belongs.—He turns aw-Down, ladies; let us shame him with our
To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pri-
Than pity to our prayers. Down; and end
This is the last;—So we will home to Rom
And die among our neighbours.—Nay, beh
This boy, that cannot tell what he would
But kneels, and holds up hands, for fellow-
Does reason our petition with more streng-
Than thou hast to deny't.—Come, let us g-
This fellow had a Volcian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance:—Yet give us our des-
I am hush'd until our city be asfire,
And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. O mother, mo-
[Holding Volturnia by the hands]

What have you done? Behold the heavens
The gods look down, and this unnatural se-
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O
You have won a happy victory to Rome:
But, for your son,—believe it, O, believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd
If not most mortal to him. But, let it com-
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good A-
Were you in my stead; say, would you have A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius?

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn, ye
And, sir, it is no little thing, to make Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good
What peace you'll make, advise me; for I
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and p-
Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! w-Auf. I am glad, thou hast set thy me-thy honour

At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune.

[The Ladies make signs to Cor]

Cor. Ay, by and by
[To Volturnia, Virgi]

But we will drink together; and you shall
A better witness back than words, which v-
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the sword!
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace.

SCENE IV.

Rome. A publick place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

See you yond' coign o'the Capitol; yond' stone?

Why, what of that?

If it be possible for you to displace it with the finger, there is some hope the ladies of especially his mother, may prevail with it, I say, there is no hope in't; our throats are cut, and stay upon execution.

As possible, that so short a time can alter the lot of a man?

There is differency between a grub, and a man; yet your butterfly was a grub. This is grown from man to dragon: he has his more than a creeping thing. He lov'd his mother dearly.

So did he me: and he no more remembers her now, than an eight year old horse. The of his face sours ripe grapes. When he moves like an engine, and the ground before his treading. He is able to pierce a with his eye; talks like a knell, and his a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing Alexander. What he bids be done, is with his bidding. He wants nothing of a eternity, and a heaven to throne in. (Exit, mercy, if you report him truly.)

I paint him in the character. Mark what is mother shall bring from him: There is mercy in him, than there is milk in a ewe; that shall our poor city find: and all the gods be good unto us!

No, in such a case the gods will not be to us. When we banish'd him, we respect them: and, he returning to break our hey respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:

The senators have got your fellow-tribune, and have him up and down; all swearing, if the ladies bring not comfort home, they will give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

What's the news?

Good news, good news;—The ladies have prevailed. The tribunes are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone: the day did never yet greet Rome, since the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Friend,

Is it certain this is true? is it most certain? As certain, as I know the sun is fire: have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it? I have caught an arch so hurried the blown tide, and comforted through the gates. Why, hark you!

Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within. Sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, are in a dance. Hark you!

[Shouting again.]

This is good news: to meet the ladies. This Volumina, a tribune of consuls, senators, patricians, and all, of tribunes, such as you, and land full: You have pray'd well to-day; and, for ten thousand of your throats have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Shouting and music.]

First, the gods bless you for your tidings: next, your thankfulness.

Sir, we have all use to give great thanks.

They are near the city? Almost at point to enter.

We will meet them, p the joy. [Going.]

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome: Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:

Unshout the noise, that banish'd Marcius, Repeat him with the welcome of his mother; Cry,—Welcome, ladies, welcome!

All. Welcome, ladies! Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Antium. A publick place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here: Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place; where I, Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse, The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words: Despatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction. Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general? Auf. Even so, As with a man by his own alms empoison'd, And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell; We must proceed, as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst 'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction. I rais'd him, and I paw'd Mine honour for his truth: Who being so heighten'd, He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing so my friends: and, to this end, He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness, When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping,—

Auf. That I would have spoke of: Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth; Presented to my knife his throat: I took him; Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way In all his own desires; nay, let him choose Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men; serv'd his designments In mine own person; help to reap the fame, Which he did end all his; and took some pride To do myself this wrong: till, at the last, I seem'd his follower, not partner; and He wag'd me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So be did, my lord: The army marvell'd at it. And, in the last, When he had carried Rome; and that we look'd For no less spoil, than glory,—

Auf. There was it;— For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him. At a few drops of women's rheum, which are As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour Of our great action; Therefore shall he die, And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the people.]

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post, And had no welcomes home; but he returns, Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,

Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear, With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,

Ere he express himself, or move the people.
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more;
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the city.

Lords. You are most welcome home.
Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.
1 Lord. And grieve to hear it.

What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,
Where he was to begin; and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge; making a treaty, where
There was a yielding; This admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.
Enter CORIOLANUS, with drums and colours; a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage, led your wars, even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,

Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antiates,
Than shame to the Romans: And we here deliver,
Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o'the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—How now?
Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.

Cor. Marcius!
Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius; Dost thou think I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus in Corioli?—

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome
(I say, your city), to his wife and mother:
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting Counsel o'the war; but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?
Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears,—

Cor. Ha!

Auf. No more.
Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was fore'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave
lords,

Must give this cur the lie: and his own nation (Who wears my stripes impress'd on him; that must bear

My beating to his grave;) shall join to thrust
To lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.
Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volces; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me.—Boy! False heart!
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volces in Corioli:
Alone I did it.—Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,

'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Cor. Let him die for't. [Several speak at once.]

Cit. [Speaking promiscuously.] Tear him to pieces, do it presently. He kill'd my son;—my daughter;—He kill'd my cousin Marcus;—he kill'd my father.—

2 Lord. Peace, he;—no outrage;—peace.
The man is noble, and his fame folds in
This orb o'the earth. His last offence to us
Shall have judicious hearing.—Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O, that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

Cor. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.
Aufidius and the Conspirators draw and kill Coriolanus, who falls, and Aufidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O follow.—

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters all, be quiet;

Put up your swords.
Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage,

Provok'd by him, you cannot,) the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him: let him be regarded
As the most noble corse, that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him up:—
Help, three o'the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.—
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully:—
Trail your steel pikes.—Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury;
Yet he shall have a noble memory.—

Assist. [*Exeunt, bearing the body of Coriolanus.
A dead march sounded.*]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Rome. A street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and a rabble of Citizens.

Flav. Hence; home, you idle creatures, get you home;
 Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
 Being mechanical, you ought not walk
 Upon a labouring day, without the sign
 Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?
1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter.
Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?
 What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—
1st. Cit. Sir; what trade are you?
1 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman,
 I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.
Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.
2 Cit. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad souls.
Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?
1 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me; yes, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.
Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou knave, fellow?
2 Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.
Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?
2 Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the awl; I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's-leather, have gone upon my handy-work.
Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?
 Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?
1 Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Cæsar, and to rejoice in his triumph.
Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?
 What tributaries follow him to Rome,
 To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
 You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
 O, you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
 Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
 Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,

To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
 Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
 The live-long day, with patient expectation,
 To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
 And, when you saw his chariot but appear,
 Have you not made an universal shout,
 That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
 To hear the replication of your sounds,
 Made in her concave shores?
 And do you now put on your best attire?
 And do you now cull out a holiday?
 And do you now strew flowers in his way,
 That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
 Be gone;
 Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
 Pray to the gods to intermit the plague,
 That needs must light on this ingratitude.
Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,
 Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
 Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
 Into the channel, till the lowest stream
 Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.
[Exeunt Citizens.]
 See, wher their basest metal be not mov'd;
 They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
 Go you down that way towards the Capitol:
 This way will I: Disrobe the images,
 If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.
Mar. May we do so?
 You know, it is the feast of Lupercal.
Flav. It is no matter; let no images
 Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about,
 And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
 So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
 These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing,
 Will make him fly an ordinary pitch;
 Who else would soar above the view of men,
 And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A publick place.

Enter, in procession, with music, CÆSAR; AN-TONY, for the course; CALPHURNIA, POR-TIA, DECIUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA, a great crowd following; among them a Soothsayer.
Cæs. Calphurnia,— Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks. [Music ceases.]

Cæs.
Cal. Here, my lord.
Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
 When he doth run his course.—Antonius.
Ant. Cæsar, my lord.
Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
 To touch Calphurnia: for our elders say,
 The barren, touched in this holy chase,
 Shake off their sterility.
Ant. I shall remember:
 When Cæsar says, Do this, it is perform'd.
Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out. [Musick.
South. Cæsar.
Cæs. Ha! Who calls?
Casca. Bid every noise be still:—Peace yet again.
 [Musick ceases.
Cæs. Who is it in the press, that calls on me?
 I hear a tongue, shriller than all the musick,
 Cry, Cæsar: Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.
South. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. What man is that?
Bru. A soothsayer, bids you beware the ides of March.
Cæs. Set him before me, let me see his face.
Cæs. Fellow; come from the throng: Look upon Cæsar.
Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once
 again.
South. Beware the ides of March.
Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him;—pass.
 [Señet. Exeunt all but Bru. and Cas.
Cæs. Will you go see the order of the course?
Bru. Not I.
Cæs. I pray you, do.
Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some part
 Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
 Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
 I'll leave you.
Cæs. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
 I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
 And show of love, as I was wont to have:
 You hear too stubborn and too strange a hand
 Over your friend that loves you.
Bru. Cassius,
 Be not deceiv'd: If I have veil'd my look,
 I turn the trouble of my countenance
 Merely upon myself. Vexed I am,
 Of late, with passions of some difference,
 Conceptions only proper to myself,
 Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours:
 But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd;
 (Among which number, Cassius, be you one;)
 Nor construe any further my neglect,
 Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
 Forgets the shows of love to other men.
Cæs. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
 By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried
 Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
 Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?
Bru. No, Cassius: for the eye sees not itself,
 But by reflection, by some other things.
Cæs. 'Tis just:
 And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
 That you have no such mirrors, as will turn
 Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
 That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
 Where many of the best respect in Rome,
 (Except immortal Cæsar,) speaking of Brutus,
 And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
 Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.
Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me,
 Cassius,
 That you would have me seek into myself
 For that which is not in me?
Cæs. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear:
 And, since you know you cannot see yourself
 So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
 Will modestly discover to yourself
 That of yourself which you yet know not of.
 And be not jealous of me, gentle Brutus:
 Were I a common laughèr, or did use
 To stale with ordinary oaths my love
 To every new protester; if you know
 That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
 And after scandal them; or if you know,

Calphurnia,—

That I profess myself in banqueting
 To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish, and
Bru. What means this shouting? I do f

Choose Cæsar for their king.

Cæs. Ay, do you
 Then must I think you would not have it
Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I lo
 well:—

But wherefore do you hold me here so long
 What is it that you would impart to me?
 If it be aught toward the general good,
 Set honour in one eye, and death i'the other
 And I will look on both indifferently:
 For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
 The name of honour more than I fear death

Cæs. I know that virtue to be in you, Bru
 As well as I do know your outward favour
 Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
 I cannot tell, what you and other men
 Think of this life; but, for my single self,
 I had as lief not be, as live to be
 In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Cæsar; so were you:
 We both have fed as well; and we can be Endure the winter's cold, as well as he.

For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
 The troubled Tiber chafing with his shore
 Cæsar said to me, Dar'st thou, Cassius, no

Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?—Upon the wor
 Accoutter'd as I was, I plunged in,
 And bad him follow: so, indeed, he did.

The torrent roar'd; and we did buffet it
 With lusty sinews; throwing it aside
 And stemming it with hearts of controversy;
 But ere we could arrive the point propos'd

Cæsar cried, Help me, Cassius, or I sink.
 I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,
 Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear; so, from the waves
 Did I the tired Cæsar: And this man
 Is now become a god; and Cassius is

A wretched creature, and must bend his to
 If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.

He had a fever when he was in Spain,
 And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
 How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did

His coward lips did from their colour fly
 And that same eye, whose bend doth awe'd
 Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan

Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the

 Alas! it cried, Give me some drink, Titinius

As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze
 A man of such a feeble temper should
 So get the start of the majestic world,
 And bear the palm alone. [Shout.

Bru. Another general shout!
 I do believe, that these applauses are
 For some new honours that are heap'd on

Cæs. Why, man, he doth bestride the
 world,

Like a Colossus; and we petty men
 Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
 To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

Men at some time are masters of their fate:
 The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars
 But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

and I have heard our fathers say,
was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
a devil to keep his state in Rome,
as a king.

That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
you would work me to, I have some aim:
have thought of this, and of these times,
recount hereafter; for this present,
I do not, so with love I might entreat you,
further mov'd. What you have said, consider; what you have to say,
with patience hear; and find a time to meet to hear, and answer, such high things.
You, my noble friend, chew upon this;
I had rather be a villager, to repute myself a son of Rome under these hard conditions as this time to lay upon us.

I am glad, that my weak words
do not look but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter CÆSAR, and his Train.

The games are done, and Cæsar is returning.
As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve;
will, after his sour fashion, tell you with proceeded, worthy note, to-day.
I will do so.—But, look you, Cassius,
a grey spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,
the rest look like a chidden train:
Cæsar's cheek is pale; and Cicero with such ferret and such fiery eyes, have seen him in the Capitol,
cross'd in conference by some senators.
Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Antonyus.

Cæsar.

Let me have men about me that are fat;
sleaz'd men, and such as sleep o' nights:
Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
his face is like some wood-cutter's;
his face too much; such men are dangerous.
Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous;
noble Roman, and well given.
'Would he were fatter!—But I fear him not:
my name were liable to fear,
I know the man I should avoid,
as that spare Cassius. He reads much;
great observer, and he looks through the deeds of men: he loves no plays,
he dotes; Antony; he hears no music;
he smiles; and smiles in such a sort,
as mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit that would be mov'd to smile at anything.
As he be never at heart's ease,
they behold a greater than themselves;
and therefore are they very dangerous.
I tell thee what is to be fear'd,
that I fear; for always I am Cæsar.
On my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
and I truly what thou think'st of him.

[Exit Cæsar and his Train. Casca stays behind.]

You pull'd me by the cloak; Would you kill me?
Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day,
Cæsar looks so sad.

Why you were with him, were you not?
I should not then ask Casca what hath chanc'd.

Why, there was a crown offer'd him:
he offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a shouting.

What was the second noise for?

Why, for that too.
They shouted thrice; What was the last cry for?

Why, for that too.

Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, as gentle as a lamb; and at every putting the honest neighbours shouted.

Who offer'd him the crown?

Why, Antony.

Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

I can as well be hang'd, as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery, I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown;—yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets;

—and, as I told you, he put it by once: but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had
it. Then he offer'd it to him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time; he put it the third time by: and still as he refus'd it, the rabblement hooted, and clapp'd their chopp'd hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and utter'd such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refus'd the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swoon'd, and fell down at it: And for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft, I pray you: What? did Cæsar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like; he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I,
And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that;
but, I am sure, Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displeas'd them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refus'd the crown, he pluck'd me ope his doublet, and offer'd them his throat to cut.—An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done, or said, any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four venches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul!—and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stabb'd their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you in the face again: But those, that understood him, smiled at one another, and shook their heads:
but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold,
and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so: Farewell, both. [Exit Casca.]

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be?
He was quick mettle, when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise,
However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:
To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world.
[Exit Brutus.]

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,

Thy honourable metal may be wrought

From that it is dispos'd: Therefore 'tis meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes:

For who so firm, that cannot be seduc'd?

Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:

If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,

He should not humour me. I will this night,

In several hands, in at his windows throw,

As if they came from several citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And, after this, let Cæsar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. A street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides,
CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca: Brought you Cæsar home?
Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds
Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,
To be exalted with the threaten'ing clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
Either there is a civil strife in heaven;
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?
Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight),

Held up his left hand, which did flame, and burn
Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides, (I have not since put up my sword,)
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me: And there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
Transformed with their fear; who swore, they saw
Meo, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.
And, yesterday, the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon day, upon the market-place,
Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,
These are their reasons,—They are natural;
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.
Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero.]

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those, that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night;
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone:
And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman, you do want,
Or else you use not: You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds, and beasts, from quality and kind;

Why old men, fools, and children calculate
Why all these things change, from their own
Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality; why, you shall find
That heaven hath infus'd them with these
To make them instruments of fear, and wa
Unto some monstrous state. Now could I
Name to thee a man most like this dreadful
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and
As doth the lion in the Capitol:
A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigions grown,
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean: Is Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans no
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' eyes:
Our yoke and suzerance show us women.

Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to Mean to establish Cæsar as a king:
And he shall wear his crown, by sea, and
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak more
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly ban,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world beside
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.

Casca. So can I;
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant Poor man! I know, he would not be a
But that he sees the Romans are but she
He were no lion, were not Romans hind
Those that with haste will make a might Begin it with weak straws: What trash
What rubbish, and what offal, when it is
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar? But, O, grief
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, or Before a willing bondman: then I know
My answer must be made: But I am arm
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca; and to see
That is no fleeing tell-tale. Hold my hand
Be factious for redress of all these griefs.
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As you goest farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain
New know you, Casca, I have mov'd all
Some certain of the noblest-minded Rom
To undergo, with me, an enterprize
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: For now, this fearful
There is no stir, or walking in the streets:
And the complexion of the element,
Is favour'd, like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here com
haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his
He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you Cin. To find out you: Who's that?
Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not staid for, C

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night
There's two or three of us have seen stran
Cas. Am I not staid for, Cinna? Tell Cin.

You are. O, Cassius, if you could but v
The noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content: Good Cinna, take
And look you lay it in the praetor's chair,

Brutus may but find it; and throw this his window: set this up with wax old Brutus' statue: all this done, to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Brutus, and Trebonius, there?
All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone to your house. Well, I will here, to bestow these papers as you bade me.
That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
[Exit Cinna.]
Casca, you and I will, yet, ere day,

See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already; and the man entire,
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.
Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:
And that, which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchymy,
Will change to virtue, and to worthiness.
Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,
You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and, ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him. [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The same. Brutus' orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

What, Lucius! ho!—
at, by the progress of the stars, guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!—
did it were my fault to sleep so soundly.—
Lucius, when? Awake, I say: What Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Call'd you, my lord?
Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
it is lighted, come and call me here.
I will, my lord. [Exit.]
It must be by his death: and, for my part,
no personal cause to spurn at him,
or the general. He would be crown'd:—
that might change his nature, there's the question.

the bright day, that brings forth the adder;
that craves wary walking. Crown him?—
That;—

Yes, I grant, we put a sting in him, at his will he may do danger with.
course of greatness is, when it disjoins us from power: And, to speak truth of Cæsar, not known when his affectuous sway'd than his reason. But 'tis a common proof, ownness is young ambition's ladder,
eto the climber-upward turns his face:
been he once attains the utmost round,
as unto the ladder turns his back,
in the clouds, scorning the base degrees,
uch he did ascend: So Cæsar may;
lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel bear no colour for the thing he is,
am it thus; that what he is, augmented,
d run to these, and these extremities:
erefore think him as a serpent's egg,
e, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous;
kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

The taper burneth in your closet, sir, ing the window for a flint, I found aper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure,
not lie there, when I went to bed.
Get you to bed again, it is not day.
to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?
I know not, sir.
Look in the calendar, and bring me word.
I will, sir. [Exit.]

The exhalations, whizzing in the air,
so much light, that I may read by them.
[Opens the letter, and reads.]

z, thou sleep'st; awake, and see thyself.
Name &c. Speak, strike, redress!
z, thou sleep'st; awake,— insigations have been often dropp'd
e I have took them up.
Rome &c. Thus must I piece it out;
Rome stand under one man's awe? What!
Rome?
cessors did from the streets of Rome
arquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
, strike, redress!—Am I entreated then ak, and strike? O Rome! I make these promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. [Exit Lucius.]

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The genius, and the mortal instruments,
Are then in counsel; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let them enter. [Exit Lucius.]

They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,
When evils are most free? O, then, by day,
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;
Hide it in smiles, and affability:
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think, we are too bold upon your rest:

Good morrow, Brutus; Do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour; awake, all night.

Know I these men, that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here,

But honours you: and every one doth wish,

You had but that opinion of yourself,

Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;

And this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves

Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? [They whisper.]

Dec. Here lies the east: Doth not the day break

here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines,

That fret the clouds, are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess, that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;

Which is a great way growing on the south,

Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence, up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.
Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: If not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,—
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen,
What need we any spur, but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other bond,
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? and what other oath,
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautelous,
Old feeble carriages, and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt: but do not stain
The even-virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think, that, or our cause, or our performance,
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood,
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think, he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O, let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands;
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O, name him not; let us not break with him;
For he will never follow any thing,
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out.

Casca. Indeed, he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd, but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd:—I think it is not meet,

Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar: We shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far,
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Antony, and Cæsar, fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius
Cassius,

To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs;
Like wrath in death, and envy afterwards:
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.

Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood:
O, that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit;
And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas,
Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide them. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm,
When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I do fear him:

For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar,— Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself; take thought, and die for Cæsar:
And that were much he should; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

Bru. Peace, count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath strucker

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas.

But it is doubt
Wher Cæsar will come forth to-day, or no
For he is superstitious grown of late;
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies:
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: If he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him: for he loves to hear,
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;
But, when I tell him, he hates flatterers,
He says, he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work:

For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetter

Bru. By the eighth hour: Is that the utmost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not!

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
I wonder, none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by
He, loves me well, and I have given him
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon us: We'
you, Brutus:—
And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all re-
What you have said, and show yourself
Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and m-
Let not our looks put on our purposes;
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits, and formal countenance
And so, good-morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but
Boy! Lucius!—Fast asleep? It is no mat-
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber:
Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, n-Bru. Portia, what mean you? Where you now?

It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw-cold morn-
Por. Nor for yours neither. You have us
Brutus,

Stole from my bed: And yesternight, at st-
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your arms across
And, when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks:
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your foot
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not;
But, with an angry wafture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you: So I did;
Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
Which seem'd too much enkindled; and,
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;
And, could it work so much upon your sense
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my Make me acquainted with your cause of gri-

He would embrace the means to come by i-

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humour
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sic-
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed

SCENE II.

The same. A room in Cæsar's Palace.

Thunder and lightning. Enter CÆSAR, in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace to-night :
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
Help, ho ! They murder Cæsar ! Who's within ?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord ?
Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.
Serv. I will, my lord.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar ? Think you to walk forth ?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth : The things that threaten'd me,
Ne'er look'd hut on my back ; when they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanish'd.

Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets ;
And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead ;
Pierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks, and squadrons, and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol :
The noise of battle hurl'd in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan ;
And ghosts did shriek, and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar ! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods ?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth : for these predictions
Are to the world in general ; as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die, there are no comets seen ;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths ;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear ;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a Servant.

Serv. What say the augurers ?
Cæs. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice :
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Cæsar shall not : Danger knows full well,
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he.
We were two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible ;
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day : Call it my fear,
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house ;
And he shall say, you are not well to-day :
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well ;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all hail ! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar :
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them, that I will not come to-day :
Cannot, is false ; and that I dare not, falser ;
I will not come to-day : Tell them so, Decius.

re the vile contagion of the night ?
empt the rheumy and unpurged air
l unto his sickness ? No, my Brutus ; ave some sick offence within your mind,
y, by the right and virtue of my place,
t to know of : And, upon my knees,
m you, by my once commended beauty,
your vows of love, and that great vow,
did incorporate and make us one,
ou unfold to me, yourself, your half,
you are heavy ; and what men to-night had resort to you : for here have been ix or seven, who did hide their faces rom darkness.

Kneel not, gentle Portia.

I should not need, if you were gentle
Brutus.

the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus, cepted, I should know no secrets, pertain to you ? Am I yourself,
s it were, in sort, or limitation ;
p with you at meals, comfort your bed, alk to you sometimes ? Dwell I but in the suburbs

r good pleasure ? If it be no more, is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

You are my true and honourable wife ;
r to me, as are the ruddy drops
visit my sad heart.

If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I am a woman ; but, withal,
can that lord Brutus took to wife :

I am a woman ; but, withal,
can well-reputed ; Cato's daughter.

you, I am no stronger than my sex,
so father'd, and so husbanded ?

your counsels, I will not disclose them :
made strong proof of my constancy, myself a voluntary wound

in the thigh : Can I bear that with patience, not my husband's secrets ?

O ye gods,

er me worthy of this noble wife !

[Knocking within.

ark ! one knocks : Portia, go in a while ;
y and by thy bosom shall partake
crets of my heart.

engagements I will construe to thee, character of my sad' brows :—
me with haste.

[Exit Portia.

Enter LUCIUS and LIGARIUS.

Lucius, who's that, knocks ?

Here is a sick man, that would speak with
you.

Cains Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.— stand aside.—Caius Ligarius ! how ?
Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

O, what a time have you chose out, brave
Cains,

ar a kerchief ? 'Would you were not sick !
I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
ploit worthy the name of honour.

Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
on a healthful ear to hear of it.

By all the gods that Romans how before, discard my sickness. Soul of Rome !
son, deriv'd from honourable loins !

like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up ruffed spirit. Now bid me run.

will strive with things impossible ;
et the better of them. What's to do ?

A piece of work, that will make sick men whole.

But are not some whole, that we must make sick ?

That must we also. What it is, my Cains, unfold to thee, as we are going om it must be done.

Set on your foot ;

with a heart new-fr'd, I follow you,
I know not what : but it sufficeth,
Brutus leads me on.

Follow me then.

[Exeunt.

Col. Say, he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell grey-beards the truth?
Decius, go tell them, Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at, when I tell them so.

Cæs. The cause is in my will, I will not come;
That is enough to satisfy the senate.
But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dreamt to-night she saw my statua,
Which like a fountain, with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings, portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate:
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood; and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.
Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:

And know it now; The senate have concluded
To give, this day, a crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word, you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
Break up the senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams.
If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
Lo, Cæsar is afraid?

Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear, dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this;
And reason to my love is liable.

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia?
I am ashamed I did yield to them.—

Give me my robe, for I will go:—

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius.—
What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?—
Good morrow, Casca.—Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy,
As that same ague which hath made you lean.—
What is't o'clock?

Bru. Cæsar, 'tis strucken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up:—
Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within:—
I am to blame to be thus waited for.—
Now, Cinna:—Now, Metellus:—What, Trebonius!
I have an hour's talk in store for you;
Remember that you call on me to day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will:—and so near will I be,

That your best friends shall wish I had been further.
Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine
with me;

And we, like friends, will straightway go together.
Bru. That every like is not the same, O Cæsar,
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon!

[Exit.

SCENE III.

The same. A street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a paper.

Art. Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed

Here will I stand, till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments, that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

same. The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A group of People in the street leading to the Capitol; among them ARTEMIDORUS, and the Soothsayer Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, BONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and Others.

The ides of March are come.

Ay, Cæsar; but not gone.

Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule.

Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,

at best leisure, this his humble suit.

O, Cæsar, read mine first; for mine's a suit touches Cæsar nearer: Read it, great Cæsar.

What touches us ourself, shall be last serv'd.

Delay not, Cæsar; read it instantly.

What, is the fellow mad!

Sirrah, give place.

What, urge you your petitions in the street?

O the Capitol.

Enter Trebonius, and the Senators rise.

I wish your enterprize to-day may thrive.

What enterprize, Popilius?

Fare you well.

[Advances to Cæsar.]

What said Popilius Lena?

He wish'd, to-day our enterprize might thrive.

Our purpose is discovered.

Look, how he makes to Cæsar: Mark him.

Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.—

What shall be done? If this be known,

our Cæsar never shall turn back,

will slay myself.

Cassius, be constant:

Lena speaks not of our purposes;

look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Trebonius knows his time; for, look you,

Brutus, he will mark Antony out of the way.

[Exit Antony and Trebonius. Cæsar and the Senators take their seats.]

Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go, we'll presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.

He is address'd: press near, and second him.

Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Are we all ready? what is now amiss,

Cæsar, and his senate, must redress?

Most high, most mighty, and most puissant

Cæsar,

as Cimber throws before thy seat

our humble heart:—

[Kneeling.]

I must prevent thee, Cimber.

These lowly courtesies,

fire the blood of ordinary men;

turn pre-ordinance, and first decree, to the law of children. Be not fond,

to think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood,

will be thaw'd from the true quality that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet

words,

smoothed curtsies, and base spianel fawning.

Other by decree is banished;

do not bend, and pray, and fawn for him,

but strike like a cur out of my way.

Cæsar doth not wrong; nor without cause will he be satisfied.

Is there no voice more worthy than my own,

and more sweetly to great Cæsar's ear,

to repeal of my banish'd brother?

I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cæsar;

and thee, that Publius Cimber may have an immediate freedom of repeal.

What, Brutus!

Pardon, Cæsar; Cæsar, pardon:

as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,

and enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

I could be well mov'd, if I were as you;

but would pray to move, prayers would move me:

But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fix'd, and resting quality,
There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
They are all fire, and every one doth shine;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place:
So, in the world; 'Tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet, in the number, I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion: and, that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this;
That I may constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And that that constant to keep him so.

Cin. O Cæsar,—

Cas. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Cæsar,—

Cas. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca. Speak, hands, for me.

[Casca stabs Cæsar in the neck. Cæsar catches hold of his arm. He is then stabbed by several other conspirators, and at last by Marcus Brutus.]

Cas. Et tu, Brute?—Then fall, Cæsar.

[Dies. The senators and people retire in confusion.]

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!—

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out,
Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!

Bru. People, and senators! be not affrighted;

Fly not; stand still:—ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's

Should chance—

Bru. Talk not of standing:—Publius, good cheer;

There is no harm intended to your person,

Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,
Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so;—and let no man abide this deed.

But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd:

Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run,
As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates! we will know your pleasures:—

That we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time,
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:

So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords;
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place;
And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash.—How many ages
hence,

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over,
In states unborn, and accents yet unknown?

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompey's basis lies along,
No worthier than the dust?

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave our country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving;
Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say, I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus,
Thorough the hazards, of this untrod state,
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently.

[Exit Servant.]

Bru. I know, that we shall have him well to friend.
Cas. I wish, we may; but yet have I a mind,
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony.—Welcome Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! Dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure?—Fare thee well.—
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you hear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die:
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands, and this our present act,
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome
As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony:
Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts,
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's,
In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;—
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;—
Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus;
Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Casca, yours;—
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward, or a flatterer.—
That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corpse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close

In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius!—Here wast thou bay'd

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters

Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

But what compact mean you to have with

Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That, were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:

And am moreover suitor, that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

You shall not in your funeral speech blame
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar;
And say, you do't by our permission;

After my speech is ended.

I do desire no more.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Cæsar did write for him, to come to Rome. He did receive his letters, and is coming: I will say to you by word of mouth,—

[Seeing the body.]

Thy heart is big; get thee apart and weep. I see, is catching; for mine eyes, those beads of sorrow stand in thine, o water. Is thy master coming? He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Post back with speed, and tell him what such chance'd: a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome, no safety for Octavius yet; see, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while; wait not back, till I have borne this coarse market-place: there shall I try, sensation, how the people take the issue of these bloody men; to the which, thou shalt discourse of Octavius of the state of things. Be true to your hand. [Exeunt, with Cæsar's body.]

SCENE II.

The same. The Forum.

BRUTUS, and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied. Then follow me, and give me audience, I pray.

Go you into the other street, and call the numbers.— That will hear me speak, let them stay here; that will follow Cassius, go with him; and such reasons shall be rendered for Cæsar's death.

I will hear Brutus speak.

I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons, and generally we hear them rendered.

[Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens. Brutus goes into the rostrum.]

The noble Brutus is ascended: Silence! Be patient till the last.

Countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my sake, and be silent, that you may hear: believe me mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, as you may believe: censure me in your private places; and awake your senses, that you may see the error of my way. If there be any in this assembly, any man that loves Cæsar, to him I say, that Brutus has done Cæsar no less than his. If then that man demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar, my answer is,—Not that I loved Cæsar less, nor that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar should live, and die all slaves; than that Cæsar should die, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, as I loved Cæsar, as we both loved Rome, as I loved Cæsar, as he was fortunate, I rejoice that he was valiant, I honour him: but, as he was ambitious, I slew him: There is tears for his love, joy for his fortune; honour for his valour, death for his ambition. Who is here so bold that would be a bondman? If any, speak; I have no offence. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him I will not be a Roman. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him I will not be a Roman. I pause for a reply.

[Several speaking at once.]
None, Brutus, none.
Then none have I offended. I have done no more hurt to you than you should do to Brutus. My name is enrolled in the Capitol: my offence not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; my offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

ANTONY and Others, with Cæsar's body.
Cæsar's body, mourned by Mark Antony: O that I had a hand in his death, shall be benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; As which of you shall not? With this sword; That, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

self, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Cit. Live, Brutus, live! live!
1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.
3 Cit. Let him be Cæsar.

4 Cit. Cæsar's better parts shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—
2 Cit. Peace; silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cit. Peace, ho!
Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, and, for my sake, stay here with Antony: Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech: Tending to Cæsar's glories; which Mark Antony, by our permission is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.]

1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.
3 Cit. Let him go up into the publick chair; We'll hear him:—Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.
4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake, He finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.
3 Cit. Nay, that's certain; We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cit. Peace; let us hear what Antony can say.
Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him.
Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. The evil, that men do, lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones; So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus hath told you, Cæsar was ambitious: If it were so, it was a grievous fault; And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it. Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest, (For Brutus is an honourable man; So are they all, all honourable men;) Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me: But Brutus says, he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome, Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious? When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept: Ambition should be made of sterner stuff: Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see, that on the Lupercal, I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition? Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious; And, sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke, But here I am to speak what I do know.

You all did love him once, not without cause; What cause withholds you then to mourn for him? O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts, And men have lost their reason!—Bear with me; My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar, And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Cit. Methinks, there is much reason in his sayings.

2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Cæsar has had great wrong.

3 Cit. Has he, masters? I fear, there will be a worse come in his place.

4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore, 'tis certain, he was not ambitious.
1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2 Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome, than Antony.

4 Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.
Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world: now lies he there,
 And none so poor to do him reverence.
 O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
 Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
 I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
 Who, you all know, are honourable men:
 I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
 To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
 Than I will wrong such honourable men.
 But here's a parchment, with the seal of Cæsar,
 I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:
 Let but the commons hear this testament,
 (Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,)
 And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds,
 And dip their napkins in his sacred blood;
 Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
 And, dying, mention it within their wills,
 Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy,
 Unto their issue.

4 Cit. We'll hear the will: Read it, Mark Antony.
Cit. The will, the will; we will hear Cæsar's will.
Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;

It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.
 You are not wood; you are not stones, but men;
 And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,
 It will inflame you, it will make you mad:
 'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
 For if you should, O, what would come of it!

4 Cit. Read the will; we will hear it, Antony;
 You shall read us the will; Cæsar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay a while?
 I have o'ershot myself, to tell you of it.

I fear, I wrong the honourable men,
 Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar: I do fear it.

4 Cit. They were traitors: Honourable men!
Cit. The will! the testament!

2 Cit. They were villains, murderers: The will!
 read the will!

Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?
 Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,
 And let me show you him that made the will.
 Shall I descend? And will you give me leave?

Cit. Come down.

2 Cit. Descend. [He comes down from the pulpit.]

3 Cit. You shall have leave.

4 Cit. A ring; stand round.

1 Cit. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.

2 Cit. Room for Antony;—most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Cit. Stand back! room! bear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
 You all do know this mantle: I remember

The first time ever Cæsar put it on;
 'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent;
 That day he overcame the Nervii:—

Look! in this place, ran Cassius' dagger through:
 See, what a rent the envious Casca made:

Through this, the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;
 And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
 Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it;
 As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no;
 For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel:

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him!
 This was the most unkindest cut of all:

For, when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
 Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
 Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart;

And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
 Even at the base of Pompey's statua,
 Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
 Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
 Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel
 The dint of pity: these are gracious drops.

Kind souls, what weep you, when you but behold
 Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here,
 Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

1 Cit. O piteous spectacle!

2 Cit. O noble Cæsar!

3 Cit. O woful day!

4 Cit. O traitors, villains!

1 Cit. O most bloody sight!

2 Cit. We will be reveng'd: revenge; a seek,—burn,—fire,—kill,—slay!—let not a live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Cit. Peace there:—Hear the noble Ant.

2 Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me

 That gave me public leave to speak of him

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor woe
 Action; nor utterance, nor the power of spee

To stir men's blood: I only speak right on
 I tell you that, which you yourselves do know

And bid them speak for me: But were I B

Enter CINNA the poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night, that I did feast with
 And things unluckily charge my fantasy:

no will to wander forth of doors,
nothing leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same. A room in Antony's house.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.
Your brother too must die; Consent you,
Lepidus?
I do consent.

Prick him down, Antony.
Upon condition Publius shall not live,
is your sister's son, Mark Antony.
He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.
Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house;
the will hither, and we will determine to cut off some charge in legacies.

What, shall I find you here?
Or here, or at [Exit Lepidus.]

Capitol.
This is a slight unmeritable man,
to be sent on errands: Is it fit, three-fold world divided, he should stand of the three to share it?

So you thought him;
look his voice who should be prick'd to die,
a black sentence and proscription.

Octavius, I have seen more days than you:
though we lay these honours on this man,
we ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
lean and sweat under the business,
led or driven, as we point the way;
having brought our treasure where we will,
take we down his load, and turn him off,
to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
graze in commons.

You may do your will;
he's a tried and valiant soldier.

So is my horse, Octavius; and, for that,
appoint him store of provender.
A creature that I teach to fight,
and, to stop, to run directly on;
corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
In some taste, is Lepidus but so;
must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth:
a ren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
onjects, arts, and imitations;
is, out of use, and stal'd by other men,
in his fashion: Do not talk of him,
as a property. And now, Octavius, of great things.—Brutus and Cassius crying powers: we must straight make head:
fore let our alliance be combin'd,
best friends made, and our best means stretch'd
out;

let us presently go sit in council,
covert matters may be best disclos'd,
open perils surest answered.

Let us do so: for we are at the stake,
day'd about with many enemies;

And some, that smile, have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischief. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Before Brutus' tent, in the camp near Sardis.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers: TITINIUS and PINDARUS meeting them.

Bru. Stand here.
Luc. Give the word; ho! and stand.
Bru. What now, Lucilius? is Cassius near?
Luc. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.

[Pindarus gives a letter to Brutus.]
Bru. He greets me well.—Your master, Pindarus, in his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone: but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt,
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard, and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Luc. With courtesy, and with respect enough;
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling: Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But, when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.]

Bru. Hark, he is arriv'd:—
March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.
Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.
Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them—

Bru. Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs softly,—I do know you well:—
Before the eyes of both our armies here,

Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: Bid them move away;

Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do the like; and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Within the tent of Brutus.

Lucius and Titinius at some distance from it.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella,
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein, my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold,
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm?
You know, that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!
Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember!
Did not great Julius bleed for justice's sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers; shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus?—
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you're not, Cassius.
Cas. I am.

Bru. I say, you are not.
Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

Bru. Away, slight man!
Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash cholour?
Shall I be frighted, when a madman stares?

Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?
Bru. All this? ay, more: Fret, till your proud heart break;

Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you: for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, ye, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?
Bru. You say, you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well: For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way, you wrong me,
Brutus;

I said, an elder soldier, not a better:
Did I say, better?

Bru. If you did, I care not.
Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace; you durst not so have tempted
him.

Cas. I durst not?
Bru. No.

Cas. What? durst not tempt him?

Bru. For your life you durst
Cas. Do not presume too much upon my life:
I may do that, I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that, you should be sorrier
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me, as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of money, which you denied:
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wade
From the hard hands of peasants their vile
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: Was that done like
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.
Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not:—he was but a
That brought my answer back.—Brutus had
my heart:

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.
Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your
Cas. A friendly eye could never see such
Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do
As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aware of the world:
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother,
Check'd like a bondman; at his faults obscure,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes!—There is my daughter
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'd'st
better

Than ever thou lov'd'st Cassius.

Bru. Sheath your sword
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humo
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb,
That carries anger, as the flint bears fire;
Who, much enforc'd, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth
Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!—
Bru. What's the matter
Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with
When that rash humour, which my mother ga
Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and, hence
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you

Enter Post.

Cas. How now? What's the matter?
Post. For shame, you generals; what do you Love, and be friends, as two such men should

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion

'I'll know his humour, when he knows his time: should the wars do with these jiggling fools?—hence.

Away, away, be gone. [Exit Poet.]

Enter LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.

Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders to lodge their companies to-night.

And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you loyally to us. [Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.]

Lucius, a bowl of wine.

did not think, you could have been so angry.

O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Of your philosophy you make no use, give place to accidental evils.

No man bears sorrow better:—Portia is dead.

Ha! Portia?

She is dead.

How scap'd I killing, when I cross'd you so?—portable and touching loss!—

What sickness?

Impatient of my absence; grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony made themselves so strong;—for with her death things came;—With this she fell distract, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

And died so?

Even so.

O ye immortal gods!

Enter LUCIUS, with wine and tapers.

Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine:—

I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.]

My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge:—

Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;

drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.]

Enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Come in, Titinius:—Welcome, good Messala.—

We close about this taper here, in question our necessities.

Portia, art thou gone?

No more, I pray you.—

I have here received letters,

young Octavius, and Mark Antony, have upon us with a mighty power,

their expedition towards Philippi.

Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

With what addition?

That by proscription, and bills of outlawry,

Brutus, Antony, and Lepidus,

are to death an hundred senators.

Therein our letters do not well agree;

speak of seventy senators, that died

by proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cicero one?

Ay, Cicero is dead,

that order of proscription.—

Give your letters from your wife, my lord?

No, Messala.

Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Nothing, Messala.

That, methinks, is strange.

Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?

No, my lord.

Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

in she is dead, and by strange manner.

Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die,

Messala:

meditating that she must die once,

and patience to endure it now.

Even so great men great losses should endure.

How have as much of this in art as you,

my nature could not bear it so.

Well, to our work alive. What do you think of Philippi presently?

do not think it good.

Your reason?

This it is:

er, that the enemy seek us:

he waste his means, weary his soldiers, himself offence; whilst we, lying still,

Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people, 'twixt Philippi and this ground,

Do stand but in a fore'd affection;

For they have grudg'd us contribution:

The enemy, marching along by them,

By them shall make a fuller number up,

Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd;

From which advantage shall we cut him off,

If at Philippi we do face him there,

These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon.—You must note beside,

That we have try'd the utmost of our friends,

Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:

The enemy increaseth every day,

We, at the height, are ready to decline.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,

Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life

Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.

On such a full sea are we now afloat;

And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;

We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,

And nature must obey necessity;

Which we will niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good night;

Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.] Farewell, good Messala:—

Good night, Titinius:—Noble, noble Cassius,

Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother!

This was an ill beginning of the night:

Never come such division 'twixen our souls!

Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt Cas. Tit. and Mes.]

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily?

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep;

It may be, I shall raise you by and by

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so: lie down, good sirs;

It may be, I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;

I put it in the pocket of my gown. [Servants lie down.]

Luc. I was sure, your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes a while,

And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, if it please you.

Bru. It does, my boy:

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;

I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It is well done; and thou shalt sleep again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live,

I will be good to thee. [Music, and a song.]

This is a sleepy tune:—O murderous slumber!

Lay'st thou thy leaden mantle upon my boy,

That plays thee music!—Gentle knave, good night;

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;

I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.
Let me see, let me see;—Is not the leaf turn'd down,
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down.]

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

How ill this taper burns!—Ha! who comes here?
I think, it is the weakness of mine eyes,
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me:—Art thou any thing?

Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well;

Then I shall see thee again?

Ghost.

Ay, at Philippi.

[Ghost vanishes.]

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.—
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—
Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!— Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks, he still is at his instrument.
Lucius, awake.

Luc. My lord!

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou cry'dst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst: Didst thou say any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudio, Fellow thou! awake.

Var. My lord.

Clau. My lord.

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?

Bru.

Ay; Saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Claudius.
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Var. Clau. It shall be done, my lord.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so: their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking, by this face,
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. [March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: We must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge.
Make forth, the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows: Is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
Crying, Long live! hail, Cæsar!

Cas. Antony,

The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.

Bru. O, yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely, threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's hand;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind,
Struck Cæsar on the neck. O flatterers!
Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank you
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: If arguing sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look;

I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up a
Never, till Cæsar's three and twenty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct.

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy Young man, thou couldst not die more honourably.
Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such Jain'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct.

Come, Antony;
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth:
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field
If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and the Army.]

Cas. Why now, blow, wind; swell, bill swim, bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Bru. Ho!

Lucilius; hark, a word with you.

Luc.

[Brutus and Lucilius converse.]

Cas. Messala,—

Mes. What says my general?

Cas.

This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand,
Be thou my witness, that, against my will
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands
Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This morning are they fled away, and gone,
And in their steads, do ravens, crows, and Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey; their shadows o'er
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Believe not so.

I but believe it partly;
A fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
All perils very constantly.
Even so, Lucilius.

Now, most noble Brutus,
To-day stand friendly; that we may,
In peace, lead on our days to age!
As the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
With the worst that may befall.
Lose this battle, then is this
Last time we shall speak together:
Are you then determined to do?
Even by the rule of that philosophy,
Which I did blame Cato for the death
He did give himself:—I know not how,
Find it cowardly and vile,
Of what might fall, so to prevent
Of life:—arming myself with patience,
He providence of some high powers,
Era as below.

Then, if we lose this battle,
Contented to be led in triumph
Through the streets of Rome?
O, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,
That Brutus will go bound to Rome;
I too great a mind. But this same day
I that work, the ides of March begun;
Where we shall meet again, I know not.
Our everlasting farewell take:—
And for ever, farewell, Cassius!
We shall meet again, why we shall smile;
But then this parting was well made.
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
We shall meet again, we'll smile indeed;
But then this parting was well made.
Why then, lead on.—O, that a man might Die of this day's business, ere it come!
I wish, that the day will end,
And the end is known.—Come, ho! away!
[Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. The field of battle.

Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.
Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these hills
Legions on the other side: [Loud alarm.
Set on at once; for I perceive
Demeanour in Octavius' wing,
Which doth push gives them the overthrow.
Fare you well, Messala; let them all come down.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. Another part of the field.

Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.
Look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
I have to mine own turn'd enemy:
I know here of mine was turning back;
I am coward, and did take it from him.
Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early:
I might have some advantage on Octavius,
But he was so eagerly; his soldiers fell to spoil,
And we by Antony are all enclosed.
[Exit.]

Enter PINDARUS.

Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.
This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;
Behold my tents, where I perceive the fire?
They are, my lord.
Titinius, if thou lov'st me,
Hide my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
I have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here I stand; that I may rest assur'd,
If yond' troops are friend or enemy,
I will be here again, even with a thought.
[Exit.]

So, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
I am ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.—
[Exit Pindarus.]
I breathed first: time is come round,
And here I did begin, there shall I end;

My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is

Enclosed round about with horsemen, that Make to him on the spur;—yet he spurs on.—
Now they are almost on him; now, Titinius!
Now some light:—O, he lights too:—he's ta'en;
—and, hark!
They shout for joy. [Shout.]

Cas. Come down, behold no more.—
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, sirrah:
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath:
Now be a freeman; and, with this good sword,
That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: Here, take thou the hilts;
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword.—Cæsar, thou art reveng'd,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]
Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.
Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.
Mes. Where did you leave him?
Tit. All inconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.
Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground?
Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!
Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun!
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;
The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed.
O hateful error, melancholy's child!
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?
Mes. Seek him, Titinius; whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it;
For piercing steel, and darts envenom'd,
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hee you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while.
[Exit Messala.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give't thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas, thou hast misconstru'd every thing.
But hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.—
By your leave, gods:—This is a Roman's part:
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.
[Dies.]

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?
Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.
Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.
Bru. O Julius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet!

Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails. [Low alarms.

Cato. Brave Titinius!
Look, wh'er he have not crown'd dead Cassius!
Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible, that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow.—Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man, than you shall see me pay.—
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body;
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomf' us.—Lucilius, come;—
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.—
Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on:—
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both armies; then BRUTUS, CATO, LUCILIUS, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!
Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go
with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field:—
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

[Charges the enemy.]
Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus.

[Exit, charging the enemy. Cato is overpowered, and falls.]

Luc. O young and noble Cato, art thou down?
Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius;
And mayst be honour'd being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Luc. Only I yield to die:
There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight;
[Offering money.]

Kill Brutus, and he honour'd in his death.
1 Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner!

2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.
1 Sold. I'll tell the news.—Here comes the general:—

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?
Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough:
I dare assure thee, that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:
The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him, or alive, or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,
A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe,
Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on,
And see wh'er Brutus be alive, or dead:
And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,
How every thing is chanc'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,
He came not back; he is or ta'en, or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: Slaying is the word;
It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.—

Cl. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.
Bru. Peace then, no words.

Cl. I'll rather kill myself.
Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius! [Whispers him.]

Dar. I do such a deed!
Cl. O, Dardanius!

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus: Look, he meditates.
Cl. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a word.
Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius:
The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night: at Sardis, once;
And, this last night, here in Philippi fields.
I know, my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.
Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou see'st the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit:

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves,
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,
Thou know'st that we two went to school together:

Even for that our love of old, I pray thee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.
[Alarum still.]

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here.
Bru. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you.

Volumnius.—
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;

Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen,
My heart doth joy, that yet, in all my life,

I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day,
More than Octavius, and Mark Antony.

By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history:
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest

That have but labour'd to attain this hour.
[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly.]

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly.
Bru. Hence; I will follow thee.

[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.]
I pry thee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in't:

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Strato. Give me your hand first: Fare you well,
my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still:
I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.
[He runs on his sword, and dies.]

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?
Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master?

Strato. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala:
The conquerors can but make a fire of him;

For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee,
Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.
Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Strato. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Strato. I held the sword, and he did run on it.
Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest service to my master.
Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all!

All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;

He, only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world, This was a man!
Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,

With all respect, and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.—
So, call the field to rest; and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.]

Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.
Scene, dispersed; in several parts of the Roman Empire.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Alexandria. A room in Cleopatra's palace.
Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Ph. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'flows the measure: those his goodly eyes,
That e'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn,
The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper;
And is become the bellows, and the fan,
To cool a gypsy's last. Look, where they come!

Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's beggary in the love! that can be reckan'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be below'd.
Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.
Ant. Grates me:—The sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:
Fulvia, perchance, is angry; Or, who knows,
If she scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, Do this, or this;
Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that;
Perform't, or else we damn thee.

How, my love!
Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like,
You must not stay here longer, your dismission
Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it, Antony.— Where's Fulvia's process? Cæsar's, I would say?
—Both?—

Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou blashest, Antony; and that blood of thine
Is Cæsar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds.—The messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt! and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space;
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life
Is, to do thus; when such a mutual pair,

And such a twain can do't, in which, I hind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet,
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood!
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?—
I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony
Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.—
Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with conference harsh.
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now: What sport to-night?
Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every passion fully strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd!
No messenger; but thine and all alone,
To-night, we'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it:—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleop. with their Train.]
Dem. Is Cæsar with Antonius priz'd so slight?
Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I'm full sorry,
That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome: But I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. Another room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, wisere's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough,
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall part when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more beloved, than belov'd.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all; let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names: Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worse thoughts heavens mend! Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune.—O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wiv'd, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded; Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't.

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus!

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where is Alexas?

Alex. Here, madam, at your service.—My approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger, and Attendants

Cleo. We will not look upon him: Go with [Exit Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants.]

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay;

But soon that war had end, and the time's stars Made friends of them, joining their force to Cæsar;

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy, Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant.

Well,

What worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the tale.

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward.—

Things, that are past, are done with me.—Tis that Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death.

I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess.

Labienus

(This is stiff news) hath, with his Parthian-arms

Extended Asia from Euphrates;

His conquering banner shook, from Syria

To Lydia, and to Ionia;

Whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—

Mess.

O, my

Ant. Speak to me home, mine not the general tongue;

Name Cleopatra as she's call'd in Rome:

Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my wife

With such full licence, as both truth and malice

Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth

When our quick wits lie still; and our wills to

Is as our earring. Fare thee well a while.

Mess. At your noble pleasure.

Ant. From Sicyon how the news? Speak!

1 Att. The man from Sicyon.—Is there such a

2 Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant.

Let him approach.

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,

Enter another Messenger.

Or lose myself in dotage.—What are you?

2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant.

Where did she

2 Mess. In Sicyon;

Her length of sickness, with what else more

Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a

Ant. Forbear

[Exit Mess.]

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire

What our contempts do often hurl from us,

We wish it ours again; the present pleasure

By revolution lowering, does become

The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;

The hand could pluck her back, that shov'd her

I must from this enchanting queen break off;

Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,

My idleness doth hatch.—How now! Enobarbus!

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women: we see how mortal an unkindness it is to them; it suffers our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let us die: It were pity to cast them away for nothing, between them and a great cause, they should be esteem'd nothing. Cleopatra, call her the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer motion. I do think, there is mettle in death, which does some loving act upon her, she hath such a content in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are more ng but the finest part of pure love : We cannot her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they reater storms and tempests than almanacks can : this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she s a shower of rain as well as Jove.

f. 'Would I had never seen her!
o. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonder-e of work; which not to have been bless'd
d, would have discredit your travel.

f. Fulvia is dead.

o. Sir?

f. Fulvia is dead.

o. Fulvia?

f. Dead.

o. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacri-old smock brings forth a new petticoat:—and,

sorrow.

o. The business she hath broach'd in the state, ot endure my absence.

o. And the business you have broach'd here ot be without you; especially that of Cleo-
's, which wholly depends on your abode.

o. No more light answers. Let our officers notice what we purpose. I shall break cause of our expedience to the queen, get her love to part. For not alone death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, strongly speak to us; but the letters too

o. I shall do't.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

o. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

o. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:—

d not send you;—If you find him sad,

I am dancing; if in mirth, report

I am sudden sick: Quick, and return.

[Exit Alex.]
Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,

do not hold the method to enforce like from him.

o. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

o. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose
him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far: I wish, forbear;
time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

o. Here comes Antony.

o. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—
o. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall; cannot be thus long, the sides of nature ill not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

o. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant.

What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go;

'Would, she had never given you leave to come!

Let her not say, 'tis I that keep you here,

I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O, never was there queen

So mightily betray'd! Yet, at the first,

I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think, you can be mine, and

true,

Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,

Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,

Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,

But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying,

Then was the time for words: No going then;—

Eternity was in our lips, and eyes;

Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor,

But was a race of heaven: They are so still,

Or thou, the greatest soldier in the world,

Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant.

How now, lady!

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst

know,

There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant.

Hear me, queen:

The strong necessity of time commands

Our services a while; but my full heart

Remains in use with you. Our Italy

Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius

Makes his approaches to the port of Rome:

Equality of two domestick powers

Breeds scrupulous faction: The hated, grown to

strength,

Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey,

Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace

Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge

By any desperate change: My more particular,

And that which most with you should safe my going,

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me

freedom,

It does from childishness:—Can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my queen:

Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read

The garbolls she awak'd; at the last, best:

See, when, and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!

Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,

In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know

The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,

As you shall give the advice: Now, by the fire,

That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence,

Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war,

As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;—

But let it be.—I am quickly ill, and well:

So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;

And give true evidence to his love, which stands

An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.

I pry'thee, turn aside, and weep for her;

Then bid adieu to me, and say, the tears

Belong to Egypt: Good now, play one scene

Of excellent dissembling; and let it look

Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. And target,—Still he mends;

But this is not the best: Look, pry'thee, Charmian

How this Herulean Roman does become

The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.

Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it :
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it ;
That you know well: Something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour,
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me ;
Since my becoming kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you : Your honour calls you hence ;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you ! upon your sword
Sit laurel'd victory ! and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet !

Ant. Let us go. Come ;
Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeing, here remain with thee.
Away. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

Rome. An apartment in Cæsar's house.

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
One great competitor: From Alexandria
This is the news; He fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel: is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra; nor the queen of Ptolemy
More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: You shall find there

A man, who is the abstract of all faults,
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think, there are
Evils enough to darken all his goodness:
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent: Let us grant, it is not Amis'to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tipping with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say, this becomes him,

(As his composure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish,) yet must Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Call on him for't: but, to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state, and ours,—'tis to be chid
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,

Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Cæsar: to the ports
The discontented repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less:—
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes dear'd, by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, lacking the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cæsar, I bring thee word,
Meneceates and Menas, famous pirates,

Makes the sea serve them; which they ear and
With keels of every kind: Many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth re-
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes in Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassels. When thou
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience
Than savages could suffer: Thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle,
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate thus deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture
The barks of trees thou brows'd'st; on the
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: And all this
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. It is pity of him.
Cæs. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i'the field; and, to that Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To 'front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encoun-
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: What you shall mean time

Of stir abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. [Exit

SCENE V.

Alexandria. A room in the palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian,—

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha!—

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char.

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap
My Antony is away.

Char.

You think of him
Too much.

Cleo.

O, treason!

Char.

Madam, I trust, it

Char.

Thou, sunuch! Mardian!

Mar.

What's your highness' plea

Cleo.

Not now to hear thee sing; I take no p

Char.

Mar.

Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo.

Indeed?

Mar.

Not in deed, madam; for I can do

Cleo.

But what in deed is honest to be done:

Char.

Yet have I fierce affections, and think,
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo.

O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou
The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgoon of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, Where's my serpent of old N
For so he calls me; Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison.—Think on me,
That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches liss,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted
When thou wast here above the ground, I
A morsel for a monarch; and great Pompey stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow ;

would he anchor his aspect, and die
looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Sovereign of Egypt, hail !
How much unlike art thou Mark Antony !
ming from him, that great medicine hath is tinct gilded thee.—
See it with my brave Mark Antony !
Last thing he did, dear queen,
'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,— lent pearl ;—His speech sticks in my heart.
Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Good friend, quoth he,
le firm Roman to great Egypt sends asure of an oyster ; at whose foot, d the petty present, I will piece
lent throne with kingdoms ; All the east,
a, shall call her mistress. So he nodded, erly did mought a termagant steed, sigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke astly dumb'd by him.

What, was he sad, or merry ?
Like to the time o' the year between the xtremes
nd cold ; he was nor sad, nor merry.
O well-divided disposition !—Note him,
m, good Charmian, 'tis the man ; but note
im :

He was not sad ; for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his : he was not merry ;
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay

In Egypt with his joy : but between both :
O heavenly mingle !—Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes ;
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts ?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers :
Why do you send so thick ?

Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.—
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian, Ever love Cæsar so ?

Char. O that brave Cæsar !
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis !
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Cæsar !
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cæsar paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My sallad days ;
When I was green in judgment :—Cold in blood,
To say, as I said then !—But, come, away :
Get me ink and paper : he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt. [Exeunt.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Antonia. A room in Pompey's house.

OMPEY, MENECRATES, and MENAS.
If the great gods be just, they shall assist us of justest men.

Know, worthy Pompey,
as they do delay, they not deny.
Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
g we sue for.

We, ignorant of ourselves,
our own harms, which the wise powers for our good ; so find we profit,
g of our prayers.

I shall do well :
ple love me, and the sea is mine ;
er's a crescent, and my auguring hope will come to the full. Mark Antony t sits at dinner, and will make without doors : Cæsar gets money, where hearts : Lepidus flatters both,
is flatter'd ; but he neither loves,
er cares for him.

Cæsar and Lepidus
se field ; a mighty strength they carry.
Where have you this ? 'tis false.

From Silvius, sir.
He dreams ; I know, they are in Rome to-
ther,

for Antony : But all charms of love,
patra, soften thy wan'd lip !
hecraft join with beauty, lust with both !
he libertine in a field of feasts, brain fuming ; Epicurean cooks,
with cloyless sauce his appetite ;
p and feeding may prougue his honour,
a Lethæ dulness.—How now, Varrinus ?

Enter VARRIUS.

his is most certain that I shall deliver :
time is every hour in Rome
; since he went from Egypt, 'tis far further travel.

I could have given less matter ear.—Menas, I did not think, rous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
a petty war : his soldiership
the other twain : But let us rear er our opinion, that our stirring t the lap of Egypt's widow pluck c lust-wearied Antony.

Men.

I cannot hope,

Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together :
His wife, that's dead, did trespass to Cæsar ;
His brother war'd up on him ; although, I think,
Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves ;

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords : but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions, and hind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be it as our gods will have it ! It only stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Rome. A room in the house of Lepidus.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself : if Cæsar move him,
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave 't to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in it.
Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.
Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion :
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cæsar.

Enter CÆSAR, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia :
Hark you, Ventidius.

Cæs. I do not know,
Mæcenas ; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which rombin'd us was most great, and let not

A leaner action read us. What's amiss,
 May it be gently heard; When we debate
 Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
 Murder in healing wounds: Then, noble partners,
 (The rather, for I earnestly beseech,)
 Touch you the soarest points with sweetest terms,
 Nor curstness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well:
 Were we before our armies, and to fight,
 I should do thus.

Cæs. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cæs. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir!

Cæs. Nay,

Then—
Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so;
 Or, being, concern you not.

Cæs. I must be laugh'd at,
 If, or for nothing, or a little, I Should say myself offended; and with you Chiefly i' the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
 It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Cæsar,
 What was't to you?

Cæs. No more than my residing here at Rome
 Might be to you in Egypt: Yet, if you there
 Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
 Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?
Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
 By what did here befall me. Your wife, and brother,
 Made wars upon me; and their contestation
 Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never

Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
 And have my learning from some true reports,
 That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours;
 And make the wars alike against my stomach,
 Having alike your cause? Of this, my letters
 Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
 As matter whole you have not to make it with,
 It must not be with this.

Cæs. You praise yourself
 By laying defects of judgment to me; but
 You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so:
 I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
 Very necessity of this thought, that I,
 Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
 Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars,
 Which 'fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
 I would you had her spirit in such another:
 The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle
 You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. 'Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurbable, her garboils, Cæsar,
 Made out of her impatience, (which net wanted Shrewdness of policy too,) I grieving grant,
 Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
 But say, I could not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you,
 When rioting in Alexandria; you
 Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
 Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
 He fell upon me, ere admitted; then
 Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
 Of what I was i' the morning: but, next day,
 I told him of myself; which was as much
 As to have ask'd him pardon: Let this fellow
 Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
 Out of our question wipe him.

Cæs. You have broken
 The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæsar.

Ant. No,

Lepidus, let him speak;
 The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
 Supposing that I lack'd it: But on, Cæsar;
 The article of my oath,—

Cæs. To lend me arms, and aid, when I
 them;

The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather
 And then, when poison'd hours had bound
 From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I'll play the penitent to you: but mine hon
 Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my Work without it: Truth is, that Fulvia,
 To have me out of Egypt, made wars here.
 For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
 So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour
 To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis nobly spoken
Mæc. If it might please you, to enforce ne
 The griefs between ye: to forget them qui
 Were to remember that the present need
 Speaks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoke, Ma
Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's the instant, you may, when you hear words of Pompey, return it again: you st time to wrangle in, when you have not
 to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no

Agr. Give me leave,

Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.
Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother
 Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
 Is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa;
 If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
 Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cæsar: let me
 Agrippa further speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
 To make you brothers, and to knit your

 Whose virtue, and whose general graces

 If I would say, Agrippa, be it so,

 His power unto Octavia.

Lep. Happily, ame
Ant. I did not think to draw my sw
 Pompey;

For he hath laid strange courtesies, and
 Of late upon me: I must thank him on Least my remembrance suffer ill report;

of that, defy him.

Time calls upon us:
most Pompey presently be sought,
so he seeks out us.

About the Mount Misenum.
And where lies he?

What's his strength
Great, and increasing: but by sea an absolute master.

So is the fame.
I had spoke together! Haste we for it:
we put ourselves in arms, despatch we business we have talk'd of.

With most gladness;
to invite you to my sister's view,
rather straight I will lead you.

Let us, Lepidus, seek your company.

Noble Antony,
weakness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exeunt Cæs. Ant. and Lep.
c. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mæcenas!
honourable friend, Agrippa!—
Good Enobarbus!

c. We have cause to be glad that matters are digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

ay, sir; we did sleep day out of counteand made the night light with drinking.

c. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a break-and but twelve persons there; Is this true?

This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had more monstrous matter of feast, which wor-deserved noting.

c. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be to her.

When she first met Mark Antony, she d up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

There she appear'd indeed; or my reporter
d well for her.

I will tell you:
large she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
d on the water: the poop was beaten gold;

the sails, and so perfumed, that winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver;

h to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made water, which they beat, to follow faster, sorrow of their strokes. For her own person, gar'd all description: she did lie pavilion, (cloth of gold, of tissue,) picturing that Venus, where we see, ancy out-work nature: on each side her,

pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, diverse-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem ow the delicate cheeks which they did cool, what they undid, did.

O, rare for Antony!

Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides, any mermaids, tended her i'th' eyes, made their bends adornings: at the helm ming mermaid steers; the silken tackle with the touches of those flower-soft hands, yarely frame the office. From the barge ange invisible perfume hits the sense e adjacent wharfs. The city cast people out upon her; and Antony, son'd in the market-place, did sit alone,
tling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
goe to gaze on Cleopatra too,
made a gap in nature.

Rare Egyptian!

o. Upon her landing, Antony seat to her,
ed her to supper: she replied,
ould be better, he became her guest;

th she entreated: Our courteous Antony,
ma ne'er the word of No woman heard speak,
y barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
for his ordinary, pays his heart,
what his eyes eat only.

Royal wench!
made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed;
ough'd her, and she cropp'd.

I saw her once
fifty paces through the publick street:

And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect, perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mæc. Now Antony must leave her utterly.
Eno. Never; he will not;

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: Other women
Cloy th' appetites they feed; but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies. For vilest things
Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her, when she is riggish.

Mæc. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Agg. Let us go.—
Good Enobarbus make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The same. A room in Cæsar's house.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them; Attendants, and a Soothsayer.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes

Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time,
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir.—My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear
lady.—

Octa. Good night, sir.

Cæs. Good night. [Exeunt Cæsar and Octavia.
Ant. Now, sirrah! you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. 'Would I had never come from thence,
nor you

Thither!
Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see't in My motion, have it not in my tongue: But yet
Hie you again to Egypt.

Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cæsar's, or mine?

Sooth. Cæsar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
Thy dæmon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæsar's is not; but, near him, thy angel Becomes a Fear, as being o'erpower'd; therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.
If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him:—
[Exit Soothsayer.

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: The very dice obey him;
And, in our sports, my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds:
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter VENTIDIUS.

I'th' east my pleasure lies:—O, come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia; your commission's ready:
Follow me, and receive it. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

The same. A street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten

3 D

Your generals after.

Ag. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en hut kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter,
My purposes do draw me much about;
You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Agr. Sir, good success!
Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Alexandria. A room in the palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS,
and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some musick; musick, moody food
Of us that trade in love.

Attend. The musick, he!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let us to billiards:
Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,
As with a woman;—Come, you'll play with me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though it come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now:—
Give me mine angle,—We'll to the river: there,
My musick playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha! you're caught.

Char. 'Twas merry, when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time!—O times!—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan. O! from Italy;—

Enter a Messenger.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,—

Antony's dead?—
If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress:
But well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

To say, the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee, will I melt, and pour

Mess. Good madam, hear me.
Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there's no goodness in thy face: If Antony
Be free, and healthful,—why so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings? If not well,
Thou shouldst come like a fury crown'd with snakes,
Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will't please you hear me?
Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou speak'st:
Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cæsar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence; fie upon but yet:
But yet is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Prythes, frie

SCENE VI.

Near Misenum.

POMPEY and MENAS, at one side, with and trumpet; at another, CÆSAR, LEPI-ANTONY, ENOBARBUS, MÆCENAS, soldiers marching.

Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
shall talk before we fight.

Most meet,

at we come to words; and therefore have we ten purposes before us sent;
if thou hast consider'd, let us know die up thy discountented sword;
try back to Sicily much tall youth,
we must perish here.

To you all three,
ators alone of this great world,
ctors for the gods,—I do not know,
ore my father should revengers want,
a son, and friends; since Julius Cæsar, Phillippi the good Brutus ghosted, aw you labouring for him. What was it, y'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what e all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus, e arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom, ch the Capitol; but that they would e man but a man? And that is it, ade me rig my navy; at whose burden ger'd ocean foams; with which I meant rge the ingratitude, that despiteful Rome
my noble father.

Take your time.

Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sils, speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st uch we do o'er-count thee.

At land, indeed,
st o'er-count me of my father's house:
see the cuckoo builds not for himself,
in't as thou mayst.

Be pleas'd to tell us,

s we have sent you.

There's the point.
Which do not be entreated to, but weigh

And what may follow,

You have made me offer

Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Know then,
before you here, a man prepar'd
this offer: But Mark Antony to some impatience:—Though I lose use of it by telling, You must know, Cæsar and your brother were at blows, other came to Sicily, and did find beome friendly.

I have heard it, Pompey;
I well studied for a liberal thanks,
I do owe you.

Let me have your hand:
ot think, sir, to have met you here.
The beds i'the east are soft; and thanks to ou,
ill'd me, timelier than my purpose, hither;
ave gain'd by it.

Cæs.

Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face;
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed:
I crave, our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Cæs. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other, ere we part; and let us
Draw lots, who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first,
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Cæsar Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard:—

And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that:—He did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now; How far'st thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;

And well am like to do; for, I perceive,

Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;

I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,

When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,

I never lov'd you much; but I have prais'd you,

When you have well deserv'd ten times as much

As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,

It nothing ill becomes thee.—

Aboard my galley I invite you all:

Will you lead, lords?

Cæs. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, sir.

Pom. Come.

[Exeunt Pompey, Cæsar, Antony, Lepidus,

Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.]—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man, that will praise me:

though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas! If our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoever their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true

face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We look'd not for Mark Antony here; Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cæsar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very stranger of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is; he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

On board Pompey's galley, lying near Misenum.

Musick. Enter two or three Servants, with a banquet.

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man: Some of their plants are ill-rooted already, the least wind i'the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partizan I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move into, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Sennet sounded. Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, POMPEY, LEPIDUS, AGRIPPA, MÆCENAS, ENO BARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir: [To Cæsar.] They take the flow o'the Nile

By certain scales i'the pyramid; they know, By'the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth, Or foison, follow: The higher Nilus swells, The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsman Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain, And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine.—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies' pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word.

Pom. Say in mine ear: What is't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.— This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To Menas aside.] Go, hang, sir, I Tell me of that? away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd? Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear Rise from thy stool.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A plain in Syria.

VENTIDIUS, as after conquest, with SI-
 S, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers;
 ad body of Pacorus borne before him.

Now darting Parthia, art thou struck; and
 low
 Fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death re-renger.—Bear the king's son's body our army:—Thy Pacorus, Orodes, his for Marcus Crassus.

Noble Ventidius,
 yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,
 ritive Parthians follow; spur through Media, stamia, and the shelters whither used fly: so thy grand captain Antony et thee on triumphant chariots, and stands on thy head.

O Silius, Silius,
 done enough: a lower place, note well,
 ke too great an act: For learn this, Silius;
 leave undone, than by our deed acquire gh a fame, when him we serve's away.
 and Antony, have ever won

 y place in Syria, his lieutenant,
 ick accumulation of renown,
 he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour.
 oes it the wars more than his captain can,
 es his captain's captain: and ambition,
 ddier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss,
 ain, which darkens him.
 I do more to do Antonius good,
 would offend him; and in his offence
 I my performance perish.

Thou hast, Ventidius, without which a soldier, and his sword, scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?
 I'll humbly signify what in his name,
 magical word of war, we have effected;
 with his banners, and his well-paid ranks, c'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia ave jaded out o'the field.

Where is he now?
 He purposeth to Athens: whither with what haste
 ight we must convey; with us will permit, shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Rome. An antechamber in Cæsar's house.

AGRIPPA and ENOBARBUS, meeting.

What, are the brothers parted?
 They have despatch'd with Pompey, he is gone;
 ther three are sealing. Octavia weeps ut from Rome: Cæsar is sad; and Lepidus, Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled the green sickness.

'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Cæsar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

Eno. Cæsar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cæsar! How? the nonpareil!

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say,—Cæsar;— go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he ply'd them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cæsar best;—Yet he loves
 Antony:

Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho, his love
 To Antony. But as for Cæsar,

Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle.

So,— [Trumpets.]

This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in it.—Sister, prove such a wife

As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band

Shall pass on thy approval.—Most noble Antony,

Let not the piece of virtue, which is set

Between us, as the cement of our love,

To keep it builded, be the ram, to batter

The fortress of it: for better might we

Have loved without this mean, if on both parts

This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended

In your distrust.

Cæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious, the least cause

For what you seem to fear: So, the gods keep you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!

We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well;

The elements be kind to thee, and make

Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Octa. My noble brother!

Ant. The April's in her eyes: It is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on.—Be cheerful.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house;

and—

Cæs. What,

Octavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart inform her tongue: the swan's down feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide,

And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cæsar weep? [Aside to Agrippa.]

Agr. He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a horse!

So is he, being a man.

Ant. Why, Enocharbus?

When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead,

He cried almost to roaring: and he wept,

When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound, he wail'd:

Believe it, till I weep too.

Cæs. No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still; the time shall not

Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come;

I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:

Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,

And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light

To thy fair way!

Cæs. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.]

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Alexandria. A room in the palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to:—Come hither, sir.

Enter a Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty,

Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,

But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head

I'll have: But how? when Antony is gone,

Through whom I might command it.—Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—

Cleo. Didst thou behold

Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome

I look'd her in the face; and saw her led

Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongu'd, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good;—he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: Dull of tongue, and dwarfish!—

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,

If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps;

Her motion and her station are as one:

She shows a body rather than a life;

A statue, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt

Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing,

I do perceive't:—There's nothing in her yet:—

The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr'ythee.

Mess. Madam,

She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow?—Charmian, hark.

Mess. And I do think, she's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is it long,

or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part too,

They are foolish that are so.—Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam: and her forehead is as low

As she would wish it.

Cleo. There is gold for thee.

Thou must not take my former sharpness ill:—

I will employ thee back again; I find thee

Most fit for business: Go, make thee ready;

Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Mess.]

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much.

That so I harry'd him. Why, methinks, by

This creature's no such thing.

Char. O, nothing, ma

Athens. A room in Antony's house.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—

That were excusable, that, and thousands more

Of semblable import,—but he hath wagg'd

Let your best love draw to that point, while

Best to preserve it: if I lose mine honour,

I lose myself: better I were not yours,

Than yours so branchless. But, as you requi

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeti

Eno. How now, friend Eros?

Eros. There's strange news come, sir.

Eno. What, man?

Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made war

Pompey.

Eno. This is old; what is the success?

Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him

'Twill be naught:
 it be.—Bring me to Antony.

Come, sir. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Rome. A room in Cæsar's house.

CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MÆCENAS.

Contemning Rome, he has done all this:
 And more;

andria,—here's the manner of it,—
 market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, tra and himself in chairs of gold publicly enthrou'd: 'at the feet, sat on, whom they call my father's son;
 l the unlawful issue, that their lust hea hath made between them. Unto her he the 'establishment of Egypt; made her er Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, to queen.

This in the publick eye?
 I'the common show-place, where they exercise.

as he there proclaim'd, The kings of kings:
 Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
 e to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Cilicia, and Phœnicia: She habiliments of the goddess Isis ay appear'd: and oft before gave audience, reported, so.

Let Rome be thus
 d.

Who, queasy with his insolence
 y, will their good thoughts call from him.
 The people know it; and have now receiv'd consultations.

Whom does he accuse?
 Cæsar: and that, having in Sicily
 Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him at o'the isle: then does he say, he lent me shipping unstor'd: lastly, he frets, epiidus of the triumvirate be depos'd; and, being, that we detain revenue.

Sir, this should be answer'd.
 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
 told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
 e his high authority abus'd,
 d deserve his change: for what I have con-
 quer'd,
 : him part; but then, in his Armenia, her of his conquer'd kingdoms, I d the like.

He'll never yield to that.
 Nor most not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA.

Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear
 Cæsar!

That ever I should call thee, cast-away!
 You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not

Cæsar's sister: The wife of Antony have an army for an usher, and ighs of horse to tell of her approach, ve she did appear: the trees by the way have borne men; and expectation fainted, g for what it had not: nay, the dust have ascended to the roof of heaven, by your populous troops: But you are come wet-maid to Rome; and have prevented tent of our love, which, left unshown a left unlov'd: we should have met you
 , and land; supplying every stage
 n augmented greeting.

Good my lord,

To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
 Ou my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony,
 Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted
 My grieved ear withal; whereon, I hegg'd
 His pardon for return.

Cæs. Which soon he granted,
 Being an obstruct 'twixen his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæs. I have eyes upon him,
 And his affairs come to me on the wind.
 Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens.

Cæs. No, my most wrouged sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
 Up to a whore; who now are levying
 The kings o'the earth for war: He hath assembled Boechus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus,
 Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king
 Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas:
 King Malchus of Arabia; king of Pont;
 Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
 Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas,
 The kings of Mede and Lycaonia, with a
 More larger list of scepters.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched,
 That have my heart parted betwixt two friends,
 That do afflict each other!

Cæs. Welcome hither:
 Your letters did withhold our breaking forth;
 Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wrong led,
 And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
 Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
 O'er your content these strong necessities;
 But let determin'd things to destiny
 Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
 Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
 Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods,
 To do you justice, make them ministers
 Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort;
 And ever welcome to us.

Ag. Welcome, lady.

Mæc. Welcome, dear madam.
 Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
 Only the adulterous Antony, most large
 In his abominations, turns you off;
 And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
 That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?

Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome: Pray you,
 Be ever known to patience: My dearest sister!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

Antony's camp, near the promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forsok me in these wars;
 And say'st, it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. Is't not? Denounce against us, why should not we
 Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—
 If we should serve with horse and mares together,
 The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
 A soldier, and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony; Take from his heart, take from his brain, from his time,

What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome,
 That Photinus an eunuch, and your maids,
 Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot.
 That speak against us! A charge we bear i'the war,
 And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
 I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done:

Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is't not strange, Canidius,
 That from Tarentum, and Brundisium,

He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd,
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men,
To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For he dares us to't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Cæsar fought with Pompey: But these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd:
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people
Ingress'd by swift impress; in Cæsar's fleet
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Cæsar. But if we fail,

Enter a Messenger.

We then can do't at land.—Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Cæsar has taken Toryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
Strange, that his power should be.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse:—We'll to our ship;

Enter a Soldier.

Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier?

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptian,
And the Phœnicians, go a ducking; we
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away.

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.]

Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i'the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows
Not in the power on't: So our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land

The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeus,
Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea:
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions, as Beguill'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls for Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour; and throes forth,
Each minute, some. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.

A plain near Actium.

Enter CÆSAR, TAURUS, Officers, and Others.

Cæs. Taurus,—

Taur. My lord.

Cæs. Strike not by land; keep wh
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll:
Our fortune lies upon this jump. [Exit.]

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on you's side o'the

In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exit.]

Enter CANIDIUS, marching with his land one way over the stage; and TAURUS, the tenant of Cæsar, the other way. After their in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alaram. Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can b
no longer:

The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods, and godd
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy pay
Scar. The greater cante of the world is lo
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence Where death is sure. You' ribald-rid nag of Whom leprosy o'ertake i'the midst o'the fight
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The hrize upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Eno. That I beheld: mi
Did sicken at the sight on't, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting m
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of bre
And sinks most lamentably. Had our gens
Been what he knew himself, it had gone w
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why the night
Indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fle
Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will at What farther comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I ren
My legions, and my horse; six kings alrea
Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet foll
The wounded chance of Antony, though my Sits in the wind against me. [Exit.]

SCENE IX.

Alexandria. A room in the palace.

Enter ANTONY and Attendants.

Ant. Hark, the land bids me tread no mor
It is asham'd to bear me!—Friends, come
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever:—I have a shi
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly
And make your peace with Cæsar.

Att. Fly!

Ant. I have fled myself; and have i cowards

To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends
I have myself resolv'd upon a course, has no need of you; be gone:

 measure's in the harbour, take it.—O,
 w'd that I blush to look upon:
 thy hairs do mutiny; for the white are the brown for rashness, and they them are and doting.—Friends, be gone; you shall letters from me to some friends, that will your way for you. Pray you, look not sad, take replies of loathness: take the hint my despair proclaims; let that be left leaves itself: to the sea-side straightway:
 possess you of that ship and treasure.
 me, I pray, a little: 'pray you now:—
 to so; for, indeed, I have lost command, ere I pray you:—I'll see you by and by.

[Sits down.]

EROS, and CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Nay, gentle madam, to him:—Comfort him.
 Do, most dear queen.
 Do! Why, what else?
 Let me sit down. O Juno!
 No, no, no, no, no.
 See you here, sir?
 O fie, fie, fie.
 Madam,—
 Madam; O good empress!—
 Sir, sir,—
 Yes, my lord, yes;—He, at Philippi, kept word even like a dancer; while I struck an and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I, he mad Brutus ended: he alone on lieutenantry, and no practice had brave squares of war: Yet now—No matter.
 Ah, stand by.
 The queen, my lord, the queen.
 Go to him, madam, speak to him;
 unqualified with very shame.
 Well then,—Sustain me:—O!
 Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches;
 and's declin'd, and death will seize her; but comfort makes the rescue.
 I have offended reputation;
 ; un noble swerving.

Sir, the queen.
 O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See, convey my shame out of thine eyes king back on what I have left behind d in dishonour.

O my lord, my lord!
 e my fearful salls! I little thought,
 ould have follow'd.

Egypt, thou knew'st too well,
 art was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
 as shouldst tow me after: O'er my spirit ll supremacy thou knew'st; and that ek might from the bidding of the gods
 and me.

O, my pardon. Now I must young man send humble treaties, dodge iter in the shifts of levness; who half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleas'd, g, and marrying fortunes. You did know, each you were my conqueror; and that wd, made weak by my affection, would t on all cause.

O pardon, pardon.
 Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
 it is won and lost: Give me a kiss;
 his repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster,
 some back!—Love, I am full of lead:—
 wise, within there, and our viands:—Fortune knows,
 om her most, when most she offers blows.

[Exit.]

SCENE X.

Cæsar's camp, in Egypt.

CÆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS,
 and Others.

Let him appear that's come from Antony.—
 you him?

Cæsar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
 ment that he is pluck'd, when hither

He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
 Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
 Not many moons gone by.

Enter Ambassador from Antony.

Cæs. Approach, and speak.

Amb. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
 I was of late as petty to his ends,
 As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
 To this grand sea.

Cæs. Be it so; Declare thine office.

Amb. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,
 He lessens his requests; and to thee sues
 To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
 A private man in Athens: This for him.
 Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
 Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
 The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
 Now hazarded to thy grace.

Cæs. For Antony,

I have no ears to his request. The queen
 Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
 From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
 Or take his life there: This if she perform,
 She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Amb. Fortune pursue thee!

Cæs. Bring him through the bands.

[Exit Ambassador.]

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time! Despatch;
 From Antony via Cleopatra: promise, [To Thyreus].
 And in our name, what she requires; add more,
 From thine invention, offers: women are not,
 In their best fortunes, strong; but want will perjure
 The ne'er-touch'd vestal: Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
 Make thine own edict for thy pains; which we Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cæsar, I go.

Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw;
 And what thou think'st his very action speaks
 In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.]

SCENE XI.

Alexandria. A room in the palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What although you fled
 From that great face of war, whose several ranges
 Frighted each other? why should he follow?
 The itch of his affection should not then
 Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point,
 When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
 The mered question: 'Twas a shame no less Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
 And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace.

Enter ANTONY, with the Ambassador.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Amb. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen
 Shall then have courtesy, so she will yield
 Us up.

Amb. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—

To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
 And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
 With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again; Tell him, he wears the rose
 Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

 Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
 May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail
 Under the service of a child, as soon

As i'th' command of Cæsar: I dare him therefore
 To lay his gay comparisons apart,
 And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
 Ourselves alone: I'll write it; follow me.

[Exit Antony and Ambassador.]

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show, Against a sworder.—I see, men's judgments are A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward Do draw the inward quality after them, To suffer all alike. That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will Answer his emptiness!—Cæsar, thou hast subdn'd His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Cæsar.
Cleo. What, no more ceremony!—See, my women!—

Against the blown rose may they stop their nose, That kneel'd unto the buds.—Admit him, sir.
Eno. Mine honesty, and I, begin to square.

[Aside.

The loyalty, well held to fools, does make Our faith mere folly: Yet, he, that can endure To follow with allegiance a fallen lord, Does conquer him that did his master conquer, And earns a place i' the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None hut friends; say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has; Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master Will leap to be his friend: For us, you know, Whose he is, we are; and that's, Cæsar's.

Thyr. So.—
Thus then, thou most renown'd; Cæsar entreats, Not to consider in what case thou stand'st, Further than he is Cæsar.

Cleo. Go on: Right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes, Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows What is most right: Mine honour was not yielded, But conquer'd merely.

Eno. To be sure of that, [Aside.
I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky, That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit Enobarbus.

Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar What you require of him? for he partly begs To be desir'd to give. It much would please him, That of his fortunes you should make a staff To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits, To hear from me you had left Antony, And put yourself under his shroud, The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger, Say to great Cæsar this, In disputation I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt To lay my crown at his feet, and there to kneel: Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course. Wisdom and fortune combating together, If that the former dare but what it can, No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in, Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!—
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One, that but performs The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipp'd.

Ant. Approach, there:—Ay, you kite!—Now gods and devils!

Authority melts from me: Of late, when I cried, Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth And cry, Your will? Have you no ears? I am Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him
Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp, Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him:—Were't twenty of the greatest taries

That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find the So saucy with the hand of she here, (What's her name, Since she was Cleopatra?)—Whip him, fellow Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face, And whine aloud for mercy: Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tug him away: being whip
Bring him again:—This Jack of Cæsar's shall Bear us an errand to him.—

[Exit Attendant with Thyreus.]
You were half blasted ere I knew you:—Ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a gem of women, to be abus'd By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:—
But when we in our viciousness grow hard, (O misery on't!) the wise gods seal our eyes; In our own filth drop our clear judgments; we Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut To our confusion.

Cleo. O, is it come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon Dead Cæsar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter he Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out:—For, I am sure, Though you can guess what temperance should You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this
Ant. To let a fellow that will take reward And say, God quit you! be familiar with My playfellow, your hand; this kindly seal, And plighter of high hearts! O, that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar The horned herd! for I have savage cause; And to proclaim it civilly, were like A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank For being yare about him.—Is he whipp'd?

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS.

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cried he? and begg'd he? 2 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: forth,

The white hand of a lady fever thee, Shake thou to look on't.—Get thee back to Tell him thy entertainment: Look, thou say He makes me angry with him: for he seem Proud and disdainful; harping on what I a Not what he knew I was: He makes me as And at this time most easy 'tis to do't; When my good stars, that were my former, Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fire Into the abism of hell. If he mislike My speech, and what is done; tell him, he Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, who He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture As he shall like, to quit me: Urge it thou: Hence with thy stripes, be gone. [Exit T.

Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Alack, our terrour Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.
Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me
Ant. Cold-hearted towards me?

my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
poison it in the source; and the first stone in my neck: as it determines, so ve my life! The next Caesarion smite!
y degrees, the memory of my womb,
er with my brave Egyptians all,
e discarding of this pelleted storm, aveless; till the flies and gnats of Nile buried them for prey!

I am satisfied.
sits down in Alexandria; where oppose his fate. Our force by land oebly held; our sever'd navy too dit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like.
s hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear,
lady?

In the field I shall return once more s these lips, I will appear in blood;
my sword will earn our chronicle:
is hope in it yet.

That's my brave lord!
ght maliciously: for when mine hours nice and lucky, men did ransom lives for jests; but now, I'll set my teeth,

And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more
Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day!
I had thought, to have held it poor; but, since my
lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We'll yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night
I'll force

The wine peep through their scars.—Come on, my
queen;

There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me; for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Attendants

Eno. Now he'll out-stare the lightning. To be furious,

Is, to be frightened out of fear: and in that mood,
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart: When valour preys on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him. [Exit.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Cæsar's camp at Alexandria.

CÆSAR, reading a letter; AGRIPPA, MÆCENAS, and Others.

He calls me boy; and chides, as he had power
t me out of Egypt: my messenger h whip'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,

to Antony: Let the old ruffian know,
many other ways to die; mean time,
at his challenge.

Cæsar must think,
one so great begins to rage, he's hunted o falling. Give him no breath, but now out of his distraction: Never anger good guard for itself.

Let our best heads
that to-morrow the last of many battles an to fight:—Within our files there are e that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
e to fetch him in. See it be done;
ast the army: we have store to do't,
ey have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!

He will not fight with me, Domitius. No.

Why should he not?
ie thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
wenty men to one.

To-morrow, soldier,

Ant. And thou art honest too.

I wish, I could be made so many men;
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony; that I might do you service,
So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night:
Scant not my cups; and make as much of me,
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. What does he mean?

Eno. To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;
May be, it is the period of your duty:
Haply, you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance, to-morrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,
I turn you not away; but, like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;
And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd: for shame,
Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!
Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus!
Grace grow, where those drops fall! My hearty
friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense:
I spake to you for your comfort: did desire you
To burn this night with torches: Know, my hearts,
I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you,
Where rather I'll expect victorious life,
Than death and honour. Let's to supper; come,
And drown consideration. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The same. Before the palace.

Enter two Soldiers, to their guard.

1 Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.
Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing: What news?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour:
Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers,
Have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you: Good night, good night.
 [The first two place themselves at their posts.]
 4 Sold. Here we: [They take their posts.] and if to-morrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
 Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
 And full of purpose.
 [Musick of hautboys under the stage.]

4 Sold. Peace, what noise?
 1 Sold. List, list!
 2 Sold. Hark!
 1 Sold. Musick i'the air.
 3 Sold. Under the earth.
 4 Sold. It signs well,

Does't not?
 3 Sold. No.
 1 Sold. Peace, I say. What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd,
 Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
 Do hear what we do. [They advance to another post.]
 2 Sold. How now, masters?

Sold. How now?
 How now? do you hear this?

[Several speaking together.]
 1 Sold. Ay; Is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;
 Let's see bow't will give off:

Sold. [Several speaking.] Content: 'Tis strange.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A room in the palace.

Enter ANTONY, and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN, and Others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.
 Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour,
 Eros!

Enter EROS, with armour.

Come, my good fellow, put thine iron on:—
 If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.
 What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art
 The armourer of my heart:—False, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well;
 We shall thrive now.—See'st thou, my good fellow?
 Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.
 Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:
 He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To doff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.—
 Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight at this, than thou: Despatch.—O love,
 That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew't

Enter an Officer, armed.

A workman in't.—Good morrow to thee; welcome:
 Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge:

To business that we love, we rise betime,
 And go to it with delight.

1 Off. A thousand, sir,
 Early though it be, have on their riveted trim,
 And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Trumpets. Flourish.]

Enter other Officers, and Soldiers.

2 Off. The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads.
 This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes.—
 So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said.

Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me:
 This is a soldier's kiss: rebukable, [Kisses her.]

And worthy shameful check it were, to stand

On more mechaick compliment; I'll leave
 Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will Follow me close; I'll bring you to't.—Adieu.

[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Officers, and Char. Please you, retire to your chamber
 Cleo.]

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar
 Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—But now,—Well, on. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

Antony's camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to
 Ant. 'Would, thou and those thy scars

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done
 The kings that have revolted, and the sold:
 That has this morning left thee, would have

Enter a Soldier of Cæsar's.

SCENE VII.

Field of battle between the camps.

Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA,
 and Others.

Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too far:
 himself has work, and our oppression
 eds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS, wounded.

O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
 we done so at first, we had driven them home
 clouts about their heads.

Thou bleed'st apace.
 I had a wound here that was like a T,
 now 'tis made an H.

They do retire.
 We'll beat 'em into bench-holes; I have yet
 a for six scotches more.

Enter EROS.

They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves a fair victory.

Let us score their backs,
 smatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind;
 sport to maul a runner.

I will reward thee
 for thy spritely comfort, and ten-fold thy good valour. Come thee on.

I'll halt after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.

Under the walls of Alexandria.

Enter ANTONY, marching; SCARUS, and Forces.

We have beat him to his camp: Run one let the queen know of our guests.—To-morrow,

 the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood

SCENE IX.

Cæsar's camp.

Sentinels on their post. Enter ENOBARBUS.

I Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
 We must return to the court of guard: The night
 Is shiny; and, they say, we shall embattle
 By the second hour i'the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to us.

O, bear me witness, night,—

3 Sold. What man is this?

2 Sold. Stand close, and list to him.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou-blessed moon,
 When men revolted shall upon record
 Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repeat!—

1 Sold. Enobarbus!

3 Sold. Peace;

Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
 The poisonous damp of night dispunge upon me;
 That life, a very rebel to my will,
 May hang no longer on me: Throw my heart
 Against the flint and hardness of my fault;
 Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
 And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
 Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
 Forgive me in thine own particular;
 But let the world rank me in register
 A master-leaver, and a fugitive:
 O Antony! O Antony! [Dies.

2 Sold. Let's speak

To him.

1 Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
 May concern Cæsar.

3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

1 Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
 Was never yet for sleeping.

2 Sold. Go we to him.

3 Sold. Awake, awake, sir; speak to us.

2 Sold. Hear you, sir?

1 Sold. The hand of death hath raght him.

Hark, the drums [Drums afar off.

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
 To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour
 Is fully out.

3 Sold. Come on then;

He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.

Between the two camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;

We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they'd fight i'the fire, or in the air;

We'd fight there too. But this it is; Our foot

Upon the hills adjoining to the city,

Shall stay with us: order for sea is given;

They have put forth the havea: Further on,

Where their appointment we may best discover,

And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

Enter CÆSAR, and his Forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by land,

Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best force

Is forth to man his gallees. To the vales,

And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

Re-enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they're not join'd; Where yonder pine doth stand,

I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word

Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers
Say, they know not,—they cannot tell;—look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and dejected; and, by starts,
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost;
This foul Egyptian hath betray'd me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore! 'tis thou
Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all:—Bid them all fly, he gone.

[Exit Scarus.]

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands.—All come to this!—The hearts,
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am:
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,— Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them
home;

Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avant.

Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?
Ant. Vanish; or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting Plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poorst diminutives, to dolts; and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleo.] 'Tis well
thou'rt gone,

If it be well to live: But better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!—
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: Teach me,
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die;
To the Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot: she dies for't.—Eros, ho! [Exit.]

SCENE XI.

Alexandria. A room in the palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.

Char. To the monument;
There lock yourself, and send him word you are
dead.

The soul and body rive not more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument:—
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was, Antony,
And word it, prythee, piteously: Hence,
Mardian; and bring me how he takes my death.—
To the monument. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XII.

The same. Another room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet beheld'st me?

Eros.

Ant. Sometime, we see a cloud that's drago
A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: Thou hast seen
signs;

They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros.

Ant. That, which is now a horse, even thought,
The rack dislimns; and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros.

Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy capt

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Dead then?

Ant. Eros, unarm; the long day's task is
And we must sleep:—That thou depart'st hen

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant.

Since Cleopat
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the god
Detest my baseness. I, that with my swor
Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune
With ships made cities, condemn myself, to
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she, which, by her death, our Cæsar
I am conqueror of myself. Thou art swor That, when the exigent should come, (which Is come, indeed,) when I should see behind
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command,
Thou then wouldst kill me: do't; the time is Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Cæsar thou defeat
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros.

The gods withhold

do that, which all the Parthian darts, enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Eros,
if thou be window'd in great Rome, and see ster thus with pleach'd arms, bending down rigible neck, his face subdued trative shame; whilst the wheel'd seat mate Caesar, drawn before him, braided ness that ensued?

I would not see't.
Come then; for with a wound I must be ar'd.
But thy honest sword, which thou hast worn useful for thy country.

O, sir, pardon me.
When I did make thee free, swor'st thou of then his when I bade thee? Do it at once; precedent services are all idents unparpos'd. Draw, and come.
Turn from me then that noble countenance,
in the worship of the whole world lies.
Lo thee. [Turning from him.

My sword is drawn. Then let it do at once ag why thou hast drawn it.

My dear master,
tain, and my emperor! let me say,
I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.
'Tis said, man;—and farewell.
Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Now, Eros.
Why, there then:—[Falls on his sword.]
'Tis do I escape the sorrow,
my's death. [Dies.

Thrice nobler than myself!
I beseech me, O valiant Eros, what I, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros by their brave instruction, got upon me

groom in my death, and run into't lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros,

[Falling on his sword.

I of thee. How! not yet dead! not dead!—
ard!—ho!—O, despatch me.

Enter DERCETAS and Guard.

What's the noise?
I have done my work ill, friends; O, make an end
I have begun.

The star is fallen.
And time is at his period.

Alas, and woe!
Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

Not I.
Nor I.
Nor any one. [Exeunt Guard.
Thy death and fortunes hid thy followers fly,
ord but shown to Caesar, with this tidings,
ster me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Where's Antony?

There, Diomed, there.
Lives he?

Do not answer, man? [Exit Dercetas.
Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me
g strokes for death.

Most absolute lord,
tress Cleopatra sent me to thee.
When did she send thee?

Now, my lord.
Where is she?

Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear

a hath come to pass: for when she saw never shall be found, you did suspect
I dispos'd with Caesar, and that your rage not be purg'd, she sent you word she was lead;

aring since how it might work, hath sent reclaim the truth; and I am come,
, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed:—Call my guard,
I pry'thee.

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what ho!
Come, your lord calls.

Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

I Guard. Woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!
Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp
fate

To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:
I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt, bearing Antony.

SCENE XIII.

The same. A monument.

Enter above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence.
Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not.
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great.

Enter DIOMEDES.

As that which makes it.—How now! is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.
Look out of the other side your monument,
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter ANTONY, borne by the guard.

Cleo. O thou sun,
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—darkling
stand

The varying shore o'the world!—O Antony!
Antony, Antony!—Charmian, help; help, Iras;
Help, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace:
Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony
Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here imp'rtune death a while, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.—

Cleo. I dare not, dear,
(Dear my lord; pardon,) I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the imperious show
Of the full-fortun'd Caesar ever shall

Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour
Demuring upon me.—But come, come, Antony,—
Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up;—

Assist, good friends.
Ant. O, quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport, indeed!—How heavy weighs
my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight: Had I great Juno's power,
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishers were ever fools;—O, come, come, come;

And welcome, welcome! die, where thou hast liv'd:
Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight!
Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.
Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,
That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen!

Of Caesar seek your honour with your safety.—O!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me: None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust; None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end, Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts, In feeding them with those my former fortunes Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world; The noblest: and do now not basely die, Nor cowardly; put off my helmet to My countryman, a Roman, by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going; I can no more. [Dies.]

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die? Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty?—O, see, my women, The crown o' the earth doth melt:—My lord!—O, wither'd is the garland of the war, The soldier's pole is fallen; young boys, and girls,

Are level now with men: the odds is gone, And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon. [She faints.]

Char. O, quietness, lady!

Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady,—

Iras.

Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Iras.

Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; an manded

By such poor passion as the maid that mil
And does the meanest chares.—It were for
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods
To tell them, that this world did equal the Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but Patience is sotchish; and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: Then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us!—How do you,
What, what? good cheer! why, how now
man?

My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! lo!
Our lamp is spent, it's out:—Good si

We'll bury him: and then, what's brave
noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come,
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! come; we have no f
But resolution, and the briefest end.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Cæsar's camp before Alexandria.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MÆCENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield; Being so frustrate, tell him, he mocks us by The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit Dolabella.]

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of Antony.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that dar'st

Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas; Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up, and spoke, He was my master; and I wore my life, To spend upon his haters: If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him, I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead.

Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack: The round world should have shook

Lions into civil streets, And citizens to their dens:—The death of Antony Is not a single doom; in the name lay A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cæsar; Not by a publick minister of justice, Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand, Which writ his honour in the acts it did, Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it, Splitted the heart.—This is his sword, I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is a tidings To wash the eyes kings.

Agr. And strange it is, That nature must compel us to lament Our most persisted deeds.

Mac. His taints and honours Waged equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.

Mac. When such a spacious mirror's in him,

He needs must see himself.

Cæs.

O Antony! I have follow'd thee to this;—But we do Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce Have shown to thee such a declining day Or look on thine; we could not stall together In the whole world: But yet let me lam With tears as sovereign as the blood of h That thou, my brother, my competitor In top of all design, my mate in empire, Friend and companion in the front of war The arm of mine own body, and the heat Where mine his thoughts did kindle,—that Unreconciliable, should divide Our equalness to this. Hear me, good fri But I will tell you at some meeter season

Enter a Messenger.

The business of this man looks out of his We'll hear him what he says. Whence Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my Confin'd in all she has, her monument, Of thy intents desires instruction; That she prepartly may frame herself To the way she's forced to.

Cæs. Bid her have go She soon shall know of us, by some of us How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her: for Cæsar cannot live To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee

Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius; Go, and We purpose her no shame: give her what The quality of her passion shall require; Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal at She do defeat us: for her life in Rome Would be eternal in our triumph: Go, And, with your speediest, bring us what And how you find of her.

Pro. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit P

Cæs. Gallus, go you along.—Where's I To second Proculeius? [Exit

Agr. Mac. Dolabella!

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember no How he's employ'd; he shall in time be: Go with me to my tent; where you shall How hardly I was drawn into this war; How calm and gentle I proceeded still In all my writings:—Go with me, and s What I can show in this.

SCENE II.

Alexandria. A room in the monument.

CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

1. My desolation does begin to make (er life: 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar;
 sing fortune, he's but fortune's knave, sister of her will; And it is great that thing that ends all other deeds;
 h shackles accidents, and bolts up change;
 h sleeps, and never palates more the dung,
 eggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, to the gates of the monument, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

2. Cæsar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt bids thee study on what fair demands mean'st to have him grant thee.

3. [Within.] What's thy name?

4. My name is Proculeius.
 5. [Within.] Antony all me of you, bade me trust you; but not greatly care to be deceiv'd, have no use for trusting. If your master
 d have a queen his beggar, you must tell him, majesty, to keep decorum, must as beg than a kingdom: if he please ve me conquer'd Egypt for my son, ves me so much of mine own, as I kneel to him with thanks.

6. Be of good cheer;
 we fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing:
 your full reference freely to my lord, is so full of grace, that it flows over d that need: Let me report to him sweet dependancy; and you shall find queror, that will pray in aid for kindness, to be for grace is kneel'd to.

7. [Within.] Pray you, tell him his fortune's vassal, and I send him greatness he has got. I hourly learn rime of obedience; and would gladly him 't' the face.

8. This I'll report, dear lady.
 comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitted
 m, that caus'd it.

9. You see how easily she may be surpris'd;
[Here Proculeius, and two of the Guard, ascend the monument by a ladder placed against a window, and having descended, come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.]

10. Enter till Cæsar come.

[To Proculeius and the Guard. Exit Gallus.]

11. Royal queen!

12. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!—

13. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a dagger.]

14. Hold, worthy lady, hold:

[Seizes und disarms her.]

15. Do yourself such wrong, who are in this

16. 'd, but not betray'd.

17. What, of death too,

18. rids our dogs of languish?

19. Cleopatra,

20. do not abuse my master's bounty by

21. undoing of yourself: let the world see

22. nobleness well acted, which your death

23. never let come forth.

24. Where art thou, death?

25. Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen

26. with many babes and beggars!

27. O, temperance, lady!

28. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;

29. he talk will once be necessary.

30. Do not sleep neither: This mortal house I'll ruin

31. Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I

32. do not wait pinion'd at your master's court;

33. once be chastis'd with the sober eye

34. all Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,

35. show me to the shouting varletry

36. snaring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt

37. gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud

38. me stark naked, and let the water-flies

39. me into abhorring! rather make

My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
 And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
 These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
 What thou hast done thy master Cæsar knows,
 And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen,
 I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
 It shall content me best: he gentle to her.—
 To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,

[To Cleopatra.]

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exit Proculeius and Soldiers.]

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams;

Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony;—

O, such another sleep, that I might see

But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck

A sun, and moon; which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm

Crested the world: his voice was propertied

As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;

But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,

He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,

There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas,

That grew the more by reaping: His delights

Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in: In his livery

Walk'd crows, and crownets; realms and islands

were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a man

As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.

But, if there be, or ever were one such,

It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuff

To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine

An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy,

Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam:

Your loss is as yourself, great: and you bear it

As answering to the weight: 'Would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,

By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots

My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.

Know you, what Cæsar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will;

I know it.

Within. Make way there,—Cæsar.

Enter CÆSAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MÆ-

CENAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. Which is the queen

Of Egypt?

Dol. 'Tis the emperor, madam.

[Cleopatra kneels.]

Cæs. Arise,

You shall not kneel:—

I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods

Will have it thus; my master and my lord

I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts.

The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o'the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear; but do confess, I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often sham'd our sex.

Cæs. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce;
If you apply yourself to our intents,
(Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall find

A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours; and we
Your 'scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,
I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;
Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam.
Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak, my
lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam,
I had rather seel my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.
Cleo. What have I kept back?
Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Cæsar! O, behold,
How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours;
And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild: O slave, of no more trust
Than love that's hir'd!—What, goest thou back?

thou shalt
Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes, Though they had wings: Slave, soul-less villain, dog!

O rarely base!
Cæs. Good queen, let us entreat you.
Cleo. O Cæsar, what a wounding shame is this;
That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness

To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Cæsar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,
Immortal toys, things of such dignity

As we greet modern friends withal; and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia, and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites me
Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence;

[To Seleucus.]
Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance:—Wert thou a
man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cæs. Forbear, Seleucus.
[Exit Seleucus.]
Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are misthought

For things that others do; and, when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.

Cæs. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,
Put we i'the roll of conquest: still be it yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,
Cæsar's no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no,
queen;

For we intend so to dispose you, as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and eat
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; and so adieu.
Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Cæs. Not so: A
[Exeunt Cæsar and his Train.]
Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, but should not

Be noble to myself: but bark thee, Charmian
[Whispers Charmian.]
Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is
And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again:
I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will.
Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?
Char. Behold, sir. [Exit Charmian.]
Cleo. Dolabella!

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria
Intends his journey; and, within three days
You with your children will he send before—
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.
Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cæsar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.]
Iras. What think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown
In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers,
Uplift us to the view; in their thick breath
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods
Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras: Saucy
Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald r
Ballad us out o'tune: the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I'the posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods!
Cleo. Nay, that is certain.

Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's t
To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.—Now, Charmian

Enter CHARMIAN.

Show me, my women, like a queen;—Go f
My best attires;—I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony:—Sirrah, Iras, go—
Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch into
And, when thou hast done this charge, I these leave

To play till dooms-day.—Bring our crowns
Wherefore's this noise?

[Exit Iras. A noise

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural

He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. How poor an ins

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit

m. Truly I have him: but I would not be ry that should desire you to touch him, for ing is immortal; those, that do die of it, do

Remember'st thou any that have died on't?
m. Very many, men and women too. I heard of them no longer than yesterday: a very woman, but something given to lie; as a he died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,

ly, she makes a very good report o'the worm:
e that will believe all that they say, shall allible, the worm's an odd worm.

. Get thee hence; farewell.

m. I wish you all joy of the worm.

. Farewell. [Clown sets down the basket.]

ew. You must think this, look you, that the

. Ay, ay; farewell.

m. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted,
e keeping of wise people; for, indeed,
is no goodness in the worm.

. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

ew. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, is not worth the feeding.

. Will it eat me?

ew. You must not think I am so simple, but the devil himself would not eat a woman:
r, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the dress her not. But, truly, these same whore-vils do the gods great harm in their women;
every ten that they make, the devils mar

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c.

. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have ortal longings in me: Now no more rice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:—
yare, good Iras; quick.—Methinks, I hear y call; I see him rouse himself aise my noble act; I hear him mock uck of Cæsar, which the gods give men use their after wrath: Husband, I come:
to that name my courage prove my title!
fire, and air; my other elements to baser life.—So,—have you done?
then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
vell, kind Charmian;—Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies.]

I the aspick in my lips? Dost fall?

m. and nature can so gently part,
stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
th hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?
is thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world not worth leave-taking.

v. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say, gods themselves do weep!

. This proves me base:

e first meet the curled Antony,
make demand of her; and spend that kiss,
th is my heaven to have. Come, mortal wretch,

[To the asp, which she applies to her breast.]

thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsecate

th at once untie: poor venomous fool, agry, and despatch. O, couldst thou speak!

I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass sicid!

v. O eastern star!

. Peace, peace!

thou not see my baby at my breast,

sucks the nurse a sleep?

v. O, break! O, break!

v. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:—

[Applying another asp to her arm.]

What should I stay— [Falls on a bed, and dies.]

Char. In this wild world?—So, fare thee well.—

Now boast thee, death! in thy possession lies

A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close;

And golden Phoebus never be beheld

Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;

I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1 Guard. Cæsar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies the asp.]

O, come; apace, despatch: I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Cæsar's beguill'd.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar;—

call him.

1 Guard. What work is here?—Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess,

Descended of so many royal kings.

Ab, soldier! [Dies.]

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this: Thyself art coming

To see perform'd the dreaded act, which thou

So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there, way for Cæsar!

Enter CÆSAR, and Attendants.

Dol. O, sir, you are too sure an augurer;

That you did fear, is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last:

She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,

Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths?

I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

1 Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs;

This was his basket.

Cæs. Poison'd then.

1 Guard. O Cæsar,

This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood, and spake:

I found her trimming up the diadem

On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,

And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cæs. O noble weakness!

If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear

By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,

As she would catch another Antony

In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,

There is a vent of blood, and something blown:

The like is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an aspick's trail: and these fig-

leaves

Have slime upon them, such as the aspick leaves

Upon the caves of Nile.

Cæs. Most probable,

That so she died; for her physician tells me,

She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite

Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed;

And bear her women from the monument:—

She shall be buried by her Antony:

No grave upon the earth shall clip in it

A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them: and their story is

No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,

In solemn show, attend this funeral;

And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see

High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

*Britain. The garden behind Cymbeline's palace.
 Enter two Gentlemen.*

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns :
 our bloods
 No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers ;
 Still seem, as does the king's.

2 Gent. But what's the matter ?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom
 He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow,
 That late he married,) hath referr'd herself
 Unto a poor but worthy gentleman : She's wedded ;
 Her husband banish'd ; she imprison'd : all
 Is outward sorrow ; though, I think, the king
 Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king ?

1 Gent. He, that hath lost her, too : so is the queen,
 That most desir'd the match : But not a courtier,
 Although they wear their faces to the bent
 Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so ?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess, is a thing

Too bad for bad report : and he that hath her,
 (I mean, that married her,—alack, good man !—
 And therefore banish'd,) is a creature such
 As, to seek through the regions of the earth
 For one like her, there would be something falling
 In him that should compare. I do not think,
 So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
 Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself ;
 Crush him together, rather than unfold
 His measure duly.

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth ?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root : His father
 Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour,
 Against the Romans, with Cassibelian ;
 But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
 He serv'd with glory and admir'd success ;
 So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus :
 And had, besides this gentleman in question,
 Two other sons ; who, in the wars o' the time,
 Died with their swords in hand ; for which their father

(Then old and fond of issue,) took such sorrow,
 That he quit being ; and his gentle lady,
 Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd

As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
 To his protection ; calls him Posthumus ;
 Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber :
 Puts to him all the learnings that his time
 Could make him the receiver of ; which he took,
 As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd ; and
 In his spring became a harvest : Liv'd in court,
 (Which rare it is to do,) most prais'd, most lov'd ;
 A sample to the youngest ; to the more mature,
 A glass that feated them ; and to the graver,
 A child that guided dotards : to his mistresses,
 For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price
 Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue ;
 By her election may be truly read,
 What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him
 Even out of your report. But, 'pray you, tell me,
 Is she sole child to the king ?

1 Gent. His only child.
 He had two sons, (if this be worth your bearing Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
 I'the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
 Were stolen ; and to this hour, no guess in knowledge

Which way they went.
2 Gent. How long is this ago ?
1 Gent. Some twenty years.

2 Gent. That a king's children should be so con-vey'd !

So slackly guarded ! And the search so slow,
 That could not trace them !

1 Gent. Howsoever 'tis strange
 Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
 Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.
1 Gent. We must forbear : Here comes the gentleman,

The queen, and princess. [Enter]

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter the Queen, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me
 daughter,

After the slander of most step-mothers,
 Evil-ey'd unto you : you are my prisoner, but
 Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
 That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
 So soon as I can win the offended king,
 I will be known your advocate : marry, yet
 The fire of rage is in him ; and 'twere good,

CYMBELINE.

Act 3 Sc. 6.

Published by W. Pickering 57 Chancery Lane. 1825.

You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:—
I'll watch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections; though the king
With chary'd you should not speak together.

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing, (Always reserv'd my holy duty,) what
His rage can do on me: You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O, lady, weep no more; lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
While the king come, I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure:—Yet I'll move him

To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends;
Pays dear for my offences.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The leathoosa to depart would grow: Adieu!
Imo. Nay, stay a little:

Were you but riding forth to stir yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another!—
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And wear up my embracements from a next
With heads of death!—Remain, remain thou here

While sense can keep it on! And sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
You your so infinite loss; so, in our trifles
I still win of you: For my sake, wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

Imo. [Putting a bracelet on her arm.
O, the gods!

When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE, and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!
E'er this command, thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest: Away!
Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you!
And bless the good remainders of the court!

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
Thou shouldst repair my youth; thou heapest
A year's age on me!

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation; I Am useless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Fast grace? obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!
Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle,

And did avoid a puttock.
Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; wouldst have made my throne
A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!
Imo. Sir,

It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my play-fellow; and he is A man, worth any woman; overlays me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What!—art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, sir: Heaven restore me!—'Would I were

A neatherd's daughter! and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.
Cym. Thou foolish thing!—
They were again together: you have done

Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. 'Beseech your patience:—Peace,
Dear lady daughter, peace:—Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort

Out of your best advice.
Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly!

Enter PISANIO.

Queen. Fie!—you must give way:
Here is your servant.—How now, sir? What news?
Pis. My lord your son draw on my master.

Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.—

To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—
I would they were in Africk both together;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back.—Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command: He would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When it pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half hour hence,
I pray you, speak with me: you shall, at least,
Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

A publick place.

Enter CLOTEN, and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt;
the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: Where air comes out, air comes in: there's a noose abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it—
Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. No, faith; not so much as his patience.
[Aside.]

1 Lord. Hurt him? his hody's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. His steel was in debt; it went o'the backside the town. [Aside.]

Clo. The villain would not stand me.
2 Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

2 Lord. As many inches as you have oceans: Puppies!

Cló. I would, they had not come between us.

2 Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Cló. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Cló. Come, I'll to my chamber: 'Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Cló. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Cló. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord.

SCENE IV.

A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven,

And question'dst every sail: if he should write, And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost

As offer'd mercy is. What was the last That he spake to thee?

Pis. 'Twas, His queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!—

And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long

As he could make me with this eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,

How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him

As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings; crack'd them, but

To look upon him; till the diminution

Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle:

Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from

The smallness of a gnat to air; and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,

How I would think on him, at certain hours,

Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray

Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd

him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

To encounter me with orisons, for then

I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,

Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them de-

spatch'd.—

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Rome. An apartment in Philario's house.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a French Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir: I have seen him in B

he was then of a crescent note; expected to so worthy, as since he hath been allowed th of: but I could then have look'd on him w

the help of admiration; though the catal his endowments had been tabled by his side to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was le nish'd, than now he is, with that which him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we ha many there, could behold the sun with eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's da

(wherein he must be weigh'd rather by her than his own), words him, I doubt not,

deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment:—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those, th

this lamentable divorce, under her colou judgment, which else an easy battery mig

flat, for taking a beggar without more o

But how comes it, he is to' sojourn with

How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers toget whom I have been often bound for no le

my life:—

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so ente amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen o

knowing, to a stranger of his quality.—I

you all, he better known to this gentleman;

I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereaft than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in C

Post. Since when I have been debtor to courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kind was glad I did atone my countryman and had been pity, you should have been put with so mortal a purpose, as then each bo importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a traveller: rather shunn'd to go even with heard, than in my every action to be gui

others' experiences: but, upon my mended ment, (if I offend not to say it is mende quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. 'Faith, yes, to be put to the arbit of swords; and by such two, that would, likelihood, have confounded one the other,

fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what v difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a conten-publick, which may, without contradiction,

the report. It was much like an argument t out last night, where each of us fell in pr

our country mistresses: This gentleman's time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloo firmation,) his to be more fair, virtuous, chaste, constant-qualified, and less atten

than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or thi tieman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'for of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in F

I would abate her nothing; though I profess her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of ha hand comparison,) had been something too and too good, for any lady in Britany. If sh before others I have seen, as that diamond of out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not b

she excell'd many : but I have not seen the precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.
W. I praise'd her, as I rated her : so do I my

8. What do you esteem it at ?

9. More than the world enjoys.

10. Either your unparagon'd mistress is dead,
's outprized by a trifle.

11. You are mistaken : the one may be sold, and ; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift : the other is not a thing to be, and only the gift of the gods.

12. Which the gods have given you ?

13. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

14. You may wear her in title yours : but, you strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds, ring may be stolen too : so, of your brace of estimable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other ; a cunning thief, or a that-way-ac-cush'd courtier, would hazard the winning of first and last.

15. Your Italy contains none so accomplish'd tier, to convince the honour of my mistress ;
the holding or less of that, you term her frail,
nothing doubt, you have store of thieves ;
standing I fear not my ring.

16. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

17. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy significant I thank him, makes no stranger of me ; we familiar at first.

18. With five times so much conversation, I get ground of your fair mistress : make her even to the yielding ; had I admittance, opportunity to friend.

19. No, no.

20. I dare, thereupon, pawn the moiety of my to your ring ; which, in my opinion, o'er-it something : But I make my wager rather your confidence, than her reputation : and, your offence herein too, I durst attempt it any lady in the world.

21. You are a great deal abused in too bold a sion ; and I doubt not you sustain what you're of, by your attempt.

22. What's that ?

23. A repulse : Though your attempt, as you deserve more ; a punishment too.

24. Gentlemen, enough of this : it came in too ly ; let it die as it was born, and, I pray better acquainted.

25. Would I had put my estate, and my star's, on the approbation of what I have

What lady would you choose to assail ?

Yours ; whom in constancy, you think,
so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats ring, that, commend me to the court where dy is, with no more advantage than the op-ty of a second conference, and I will bring ence that honour of hers, which you imagine red.

I will wage against your gold, gold to it :

I hold dear as my finger ; 'tis part of it.

You are a friend, and therein the wiser.
buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you preserve it from tainting : But, I see, you me religion in you, that you fear.

This is but a custom in your tongue ; you prayer purpose, I hope.

I am the master of my speeches ; and would what's spoken, I swear.

Will you ?—I shall but lead my diamond return :—Let there be covenants drawn us : My mistress exceeds in goodness the s of your unworthy thinking : I dare you match : here's my ring.
I will have it no lay.

By the gods it is one :—If I bring you no testimony, that I have enjoy'd the dearest part of your mistress, my ten thousand are yours ; so is your diamond too. If I leave her in such honour as you have she your jewel, this your jewel, and my yours :—provided, I have your commendamy more free entertainment.

I embrace these conditions ; let us have articles betwixt us :—only, thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate :

if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand ; a covenant : We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain ; lest the hargain should catch cold, and starve : I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]

French. Will this hold, think you ?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Britain. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers ;

Make haste : Who has the note of them ?

I Lady.

I, madams.

Queen. Despatch.— [Exeunt Ladies.]
Now, master doctor ; have you brought those drugs ?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay : here they are,
madam : [Presenting a small box.]

But I beseech your grace, (without offence ;
My conscience bids me ask ;) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,
Which are the movers of a languishing death ;
But, though slow, deadly.

Queen. I do wonder, doctor,

Thou ask'st me such a question : Have I not heard

Thy pupil long ? Hast thou not learn'd me how

To make perfumes ? distil ? preserve ? yea, so,

That our great king himself doth woo me oft

For my confections ? Having thus far succeeded,

(Unless thou think'st me devilish,) is't not meet

That I did amplify my judgment in

Other conclusions ? I will try the forces

Of these thy compounds on such creatures as

We count not worth the hanging, (but none human,)

To try the vigour of them, and apply

Allayments to their act ; and by them gather

Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness

Shall from this practice but make hard your heart :

Besides, the seeing these effects will be

Both noisome and infectious.

Queen.

O, content thee.—

Enter PISANIO.

Here comes a flattering rascal ; upon him [Aside.]

Will I first work : he's for his master,

And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio ?—

Doctor, your service for this time is ended ;

Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam ;

But you shall do no harm. [Aside.]

Queen. Hark thee, a word.—

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has

Strange lingering poisons : I do know her spirit,

And will not trust one of her malice with

A drug of such damn'd nature : Those, she has,

Will stupefy and dull the sense a while :

Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and

dogs ;

Then afterward up higher ; but there is

No danger in what show of death it makes,

More than the locking up the spirits a time,

To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd

With a most false effect ; and I the truer,

So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,

Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou ? Dost thou think, in time

She will not quench ; and let instructions enter

Where folly now possesses ? Do thou work :

When thou shalt bring me word, she loves my son,
I'll tell thee, on the instant, thou art then
As great as is thy master: greater; for
His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name
Is at last gasp: Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another;
And every day, that comes, comes to decay
A day's work in him: What shalt thou expect,
To be depend on a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new built; nor has no friends,

[The Queen drops a box; Pisanio takes it up.]
So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak'st up
Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour:
It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know
What is more cordial:—Nay, I prythee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good,
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do't, as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou chaugest on; but think
Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move the king
To any shape of thy preferment, such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my woman:
Think on my words. [Exit Pisanio.]—A sly and constant knave;

Not to be shak'd: the agent for his master;
And the remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him that,
Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers for her sweet; and which she, after,
Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

Re-enter PISANIO, and Ladies.

To taste of too.—So, so;—well done, well done:
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet:—Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words. [Exit Queen and Ladies.]
Pis. And shall do:
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself; there's all I'll do for you.

SCENE VII.

Another room in the same.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd;—O, that husband!
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: Blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome;
Comes from my lord with letters.
Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Presents a letter.]
Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich!
[Aside.]
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.]—He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust Leonatus.

So far I read aloud:
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so

In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—
What! are men mad? Hath nature given th

That tub both fill'd and running,) ravenin
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What,

Not mine to speak on't.

Either are past remedies; or, timely kno as hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood, as a labour;) then lie peeping in an eye, and unlustrous as the smoky light

all the plagues of hell should at one time enter such revolt.

My lord, I fear,
forgot Britain.

And himself. Not I,
'd to this intelligence, pronounce beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces, from my mutest conscience, to my tongue,
as this report out.

Let me hear no more.
O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my
heart

that doth make me sick. A lady in, and fasten'd to an empery, d make the great'st king double! to be partner'd tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition sh your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures,
play with all infirmities for gold
th rottenness can lend nature! such hoil'd stuff, ell might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
e, that bore you, was no queen, and you
I from your great stock.

Reveng'd!
should I be reveng'd? If this be true, have such a heart, that both mine ears not in haste abuse,) if it be true, should I be reveng'd?

Should he make me
like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets;
as he is vaulting variable ramps,
or despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
icate myself to your sweet pleasure;
noble than that runagate to your bed;
will continue fast to your affection,
close, as sure.

What ho, Pisanio!

Let me my service tender on your lips.
Away!—I do condemn mine ears, that have attended thee.—If thou wert honourable, wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not ach an end thou seek'st; as base, as strange.
wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far thy report, as thou from honour; and 'st here a lady, that disdains and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisanio!—
ing my father shall be made acquainted y assault: if he shall think it fit, cy stranger, in his court, to flirt
a Romish stew, and to expound eastly mind to us; he hath a court de cares for, and a daughter whom

He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The credit, that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit!—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That truth he is, new o'er: And he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends
Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir: Take my power i'the court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(The best feather of our wing,) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'Tis plate, of rare device; and jewels,
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage; May it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall shurt my word,
By length'ning my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow?

Iach. O, I must, madam:
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please,
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you: You're very welcome.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Court before Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CLOTEN, and two Lords.

Was there ever man had such luck! when sd the jack upon an up-cast, to be hit away!
an hundred pound on't: And then a whore-clanapes must take me up for swearing; as arowed mine oaths of him, and might not them at my pleasure.

1st. What got he by that? You have broke te with your bow!

2nd. If his wit had been like him that broke would have run all out.

[Aside.]

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?
2 Lord. No, my lord; nor [Aside.] crop the ears
of them

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction?
'Would, he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.]

Clo. I am not more vexed at any thing in the earth,—A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2 Lord. You are a cock and a capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

[Aside.]

Clo. Sayest thou?

1 Lord. It is not fit, your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that: but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I not know on't!

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit, I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Cloten and first Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest!
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd;
A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer,
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou mayst stand,
To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land!

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A bed-chamber; in one part of it a trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her bed; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady.

Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady.

Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak:—

Fold down the leaf where I have left: To bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I pry'thee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies, and the tempters of the night,
Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. Iachimo, from the trunk.]

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily!
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss; one kiss!—Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't!—'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: The flame o' the taper
Bows toward her; and would underpeep her lids,
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows: White and azure, lac'd
With blue of heaven's own tinct.—But my design?
To note the chamber:—I will write all down:—
Such, and such, pictures:—There the window:—
Such

The adornment of her bed:—The arras, figures, Why, such, and such:—And the contents o' the story.—

Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables

Would testify, to enrich mine inventory:
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her
And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off

[Taking off her bonnet.]

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard:
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drop
I' the bottom of a cowslip: Here's a vouchere
Stronger than ever law could make: this se

Why should I write this down, that's rivet
Screw'd to my memory? She hath been read
The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd
Where Philomel gave up;—I have enough;
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of Swift, swift, you dragons of the night!—that d
May bare the raven's eye: I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock.]

One, two, three,—Time, time!

[Goes into the trunk. The Scene ends.]

SCENE III.

An ante-chamber adjoining Imogen's apart

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd up a Clo. It would make any man cold to lose

1 Lord. But not every man patient at noble temper of your lordship; You are m

Clo. Winning will put any man into c

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this musick would come it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: If you can penetrate h

SONG.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate
And Phoebus' gins arise,

His steeds to water at those springs
On chalic'd flowers that lies;

And winking Mary-buds begin

To ope their golden eyes;

With every thing that pretty bin:

My lady sweet, arise;

Arise, arise.

So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will c

Enter CYMBELINE and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad, I was up so late; for th reason I was up so early: He cannot cho

Clo. I have assail'd her with musick, b

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new
She hath not yet forgot him: some more tin
Must wear the print of his remembrance out
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

er. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
see is Caius Lucius.

a. A worthy fellow,
t he comes on angry purpose now;
hat's no fault of his: We must receive him

Enter a Lady.

y. Who's there, that knocks?

A gentleman.

y. No more?

y. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

y. That's more

y. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.
y. How! my good name? or to report of you?
I shall think is good?—The princess—

Enter IMOGEN.

. Good-morrow, fairest sister: Your sweet hand.
. Good-morrow, sir: You lay out too much pains

urchasing but trouble: the thanks I give, ling you that I am poor of thanks, scarce can spare them.

. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
I swear still, your recompense is still
I regard it not.

This is no answer.

. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I'd not speak. I pray you, spare me: 'faith,
I'd unfold equal discourtesy
our best kindness: one of your great knowing I'd learn, being taught, forbearance.

. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:
not.

. Fools are not mad folks.

Do you call me fool?

. As I am mad, I do:

. I'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
cures us both. I am much sorry, sir, put me to forget a lady's manners,
sing so verbal: and learn now, for all,
I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
be very truth of it, I care not for you;
as so near the lack of charity, excuse myself, I hate you: which I had rather fail, than make't my boast.

Clo.

You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch, (Oue, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o'the court,) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,
(Yet who, than he, more mean!) to knit their souls
(On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o'the crown; and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hiding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pautler, not so eminent.

Imo.

Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated
For being preferr'd so well.

Clo.

The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer,
In my respect, than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisanio?

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman he thee presently:—

Clo. His garment?

Imo.

I am sprighted with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse:—Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel, that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's: 'shrew me,
If I would lose it for a revenue

Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night 'twas on mine arm: I kiss'd it:
I hope, it be not gone, to tell my lord,
That I kiss ought but he.

Pis.

'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go, and search. [Exit Pis.

Clo.

You have abus'd me:—
His meanest garment?

Imo.

Ay; I said so, sir.

If you will make't an action, call witness to't.

Clo.

I will inform your father.

Imo.

Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent. [Exit.

Clo.

I'll be reveng'd:—
His meanest garment?—Well. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

Rome. An apartment in Philario's house.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi.

What means do you make to him?

Post.

Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: In these fear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi.

Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission thoroughly: And, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearsages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post.

I do believe,
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be,)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Cæsar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known
To their approvers, they are people, such
That meed upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo!
Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And he false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.
Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand,
And ring, is yours: If not, the foul opinion,
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.
Iach. First, her bed-chamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not; but, profess,
Had that was well worth watching,) It was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life out was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap;

Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o'the el
With golden cherubins is fretted: Her and

Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (I thank her,) t
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: She gave it me, and
She priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it c
To send it me.

SCENE V.

The same. Another room in the same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Is there no way for men to be, but women be half-workers? We are bastards all; that most venerable man, which I call my father, was I know not where I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools me a counterfeit: Yet my mother seem'd of that time: so doth my wife appear of this.—O vengeance, vengeance!
 my lawful pleasure she restrain'd, ray'd me, oft, forbearance: did it with

 This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not?—
 Or less,—at first: perchance he spoke not; but,
 Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
 Cry'd, oh! and mounted: found no opposition
 But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
 The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
 That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
 It is the woman's part: Be it lying, note it,
 The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
 Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers;
 Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
 Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
 All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell knows,
 Why, hers, in part, or all; but, rather, all:
 For e'en to vice
 They are not constant, but are changing still
 One vice, but of a minute old, for one
 Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
 Detest them, curse them:—Yet 'tis greater skill
 In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
 The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. A room of state in Cymbeline's palace.

CYMBELINE, Queen, CLOTEN, and attendants, at one door; and at another, CAIUS LU-SIUS, and Attendants.

Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar
 with us?

When Julius Cæsar (whose remembrance yet in men's eyes; and will to ears, and tongues, and hearing ever,) was in this Britain,
 conquer'd it, Cassibelian, thine uncle,
 as in Cæsar's praises, no whit less in his feats deserving it,) for him, in succession, granted Rome a tribute, of three thousand pounds; which by these lately
 understander'd.

And, to kill the marvel,
 be so ever.

There be many Cæsars, such another Julins. Britain is sold by itself; and we will nothing pay, saving our own noses.

That opportunity,
 when they had to take from us, to resume
 us again.—Remember, sir, my liege, and yours ancestors; together with stalr bravery of your isle; which stands on a park, ribbed and paled in rocks unscalable, and roaring waters;
 sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats, and them up to the top-mast. A kind of conquest made here; but made not here his brag he, and saw, and overcame: with shame first that ever touch'd him,) he was carried off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping, ignorant haubles!) on our terrible seas,
 egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd shily 'gainst our rocks: For joy whereof, and Cassibelian, who was once at point of fortune!) to master Cæsar's sword,
 Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
 Britons strut with courage.

Come, there's no more tribute to be paid:
 kingdom is stronger than it was at that time;
 as I said, there is no more such Cæsars:
 if they may have crooked noses; but, to owe straight arms, none.

Son, let your mother end.

We have yet many among us can gripe as us Cassibelian: I do not say, I am one; but a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay it? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a hat, or put the moon in his pocket, we will no tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, we now.

You must know,
 the injurious Romans did extort

This tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar's ambition,
 (Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch
 The sides o'the world,) against all colour, here
 Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
 Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
 Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar,
 Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of Cæsar Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise,

Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
 Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmutius,
 Who was the first of Britain, which did put
 His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
 Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
 That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar (Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy:
 Receive it from me, then:—War, and confusion,
 In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
 For forty not to be resisted:—Thus defied,
 I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
 Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
 Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
 Behoves me keep at utterance: I am perfect,
 That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms: a precedent
 Which, not to read, would show the Britons cold:
 So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.
 Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, longer: If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleavase, and he mine:
 All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another room in the same.

Enter PISANIO.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not What monster's her accuser?—Leonatus!
 O, master! what a strange infection
 Is fallen into thy ear? What false Italian
 (As poisonous tongu'd, as handed,) hath prevail'd
 On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal! No:
 She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes,
 More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
 As would take in some virtue.—O, my master!
 Thy mind to her is now as low, as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her!

Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I
Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her blood?
If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted servicable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity,
So much as this fact comes to? Do! The letter, [Reading.

*That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity:—O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless bauble,
Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes.*

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord? Leonatus?
O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him.—
(Some griefs are mend'cinable;) that is one of them,
For it doth physick love;—of his content,
All but in that!—Good wax, thy leave:—Bless'd be,
You bees, that make these locks of counsel! Lovers,
And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables.—Good news, gods!

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambrius, at Milford-Haven: What your own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his row, and your, increasing in love, Leonatus Posthumus.

O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou, Pisanio?
He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day!—Then, true Pisanio,
(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O, let me 'bate,—but not like me;—yet long'st,—
But in a fainter kind!—O, not like me;
(For mine's beyond beyond.) say, and speak thick,
(Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearings,
To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: And, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
To inherit such a haven: But, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap,
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get hence:
Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score, 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution, man, Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run i' the clock's behalf:—But this is foolery:—
Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father: and provide me, presently,
A riding suit; no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor here,
Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee;
Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say:
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Thou told'st me, when we came from horse,
 the place
 near at hand:—Ne'er long'd my mother so me first, as I have now.—Pisanio! Man!
 re is Posthúmus? What is in thy mind, makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh

the inward of thee? One, but painted thus, ld be interpreted a thing perplex'd and self-explication: Put thyself a humour of less fear, ere wildness nish my staid senses. What's the matter?
 tender'st thou that paper to me, with k undertaker? If it be summer news, to't before: if wintery, thou need'st keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!
 drug-damn'd Italy hath out-crafted him, he's at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy
 tongue
 take off some extremity, which to read ld be even mortal to me.

Please you, read;
 you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
 most disdain'd of fortune.

[Reads.] *Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played rumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie ug in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; but proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I of my revenge. That part, thou, Pisanio, must r me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach
 s. Let thine own hands take away her life: I give thee opportunities at Milford-Haven: she my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear

 s, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave

This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?
 Imo. False to his bed! What is it, to be false?
 To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
 To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge
 nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him,
 And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed?
 Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—Iachimo,
 Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
 Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,
 Thy favour's good enough.—Some jay of Italy,
 Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him:
 Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
 And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
 I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O,
 Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,
 By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
 Put on for villainy; not born, where't grows;
 But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false
 Aeneas,
 Were, in his time, thought false: and Sinon's
 weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
 From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Posthúmus,
 Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;
 Goodly, and gallant, shall be false, and perjurd;
 From thy great fall.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:
 Do thou thy master's bidding: When thou see'st
 him,

A little witness my obedience: Look!
 I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
 The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
 Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
 Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
 The riches of it: Do his bidding; strike.
 Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause;
 But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;

And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
 No servant of thy master's: Against self-slaughter
 There is a prohibition so divine,
 That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart;
 Something's afore't:—Soft, soft; we'll no defence;
 Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
 The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
 All turn'd to heresy! Away, away,
 Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
 Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: Though those that be retray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
 Stands in worse case of woe.
 And thou, Posthúmus, thou that didst set up
 My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
 And make me put into contempt the suits
 Of pricely fellows, shalt hereafter find
 It is no act of common passage, but
 A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
 To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her
 That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
 Will then be pang'd by me.—Prythee, despatch:
 The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy knife?
 Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
 When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,

Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
 I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then

Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
 So many miles, with a pretence? this place?
 Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
 The time inviting thee? the perturd court,
 For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
 To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
 The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time

To lose so bad employment: in the which

I have consider'd of a course; Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard, I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtizan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bide? How live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing;
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: Pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger; you should tread a course Pretty, and full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus: so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well, then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman its pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek, Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,
('Tis in my cloak-bag,) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: Would you, in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, (which you'll make him
know,
If that his head have ear in musick,) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning, nor supplement.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:

There's more to be consider'd; but we'll eve
All that good time will give us: this attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short fare Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My noble mi
Here is a box: I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious: if you are sick at so
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this

And fit you to your manhood:—May the god
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee. [E.]

suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord.

Clot. Meet thee at Milford-Haven.—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon.—Even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would these garments were come. She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart,) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again.
She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clot. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clot. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou shalt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but dateous, and true preference shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford; 'would I had wings to follow it!—Come,
and be true.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true to thee,
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true.—To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his need!

[Exit.]

SCENE VI.

Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter IMOGEN, in Boy's clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one:
I have tir'd myself; and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me.—Milford,
When from the mountain top Pisanio show'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think,
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me,
I could not miss my way: Will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them; knowing 'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in fulness
Is sorer than to lie for need; and falsehood
Is worse in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord!
Thou art one o' the false ones: Now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food.—But what is this?
Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty, and peace, breeds cowardice; hardness ever
Of hardness is mother.—Ho! who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then I'll enter.
Best draw my sword: and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a foe, good heavens! [She goes into the cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and Are master of the feast : Cadwal, and I,
Will play the cook, and servant ; 'tis our match :
The sweat of industry would dry, and die,
But for the end it works to. Come ; our stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury : Weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself !
Gui. I am thoroughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave ; we'll browze on that.

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. Stay ; come not in :
[Looking in.]
But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir ?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel ! or, if not,
An earthly paragon !—Behold divineness
No elder than a boy !

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not :
Before I enter'd here, I call'd ; and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took : Good troth,
I have stolen nought ; nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd o' the floor. Here's money for my meat :
I would have left it on the board, so soon
As I had made my meal ; and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth ?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt !
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see, you are angry :
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound ?
Imo. To Milford-Haven, sir.

Bel. What is your name ?
Imo. Fidele, sir : I have a kinsman, who Is bound for Italy ; he embark'd at Milford ;
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pry'thee, fair youth,
Think us no churls ; nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd !
'Tis almost night : you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart ; and thanks, to stay and eat it.—
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard, but be your groom.—In honesty,
I bid for you, as I'd buy.
Arv. I'll make't my comfort,

He is a man ; I'll love him as my brother
And such a welcome as I'd give to him,
After long absence, such is yours :—Most w
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.
Imo. 'Mongst

If brothers ?—'Would it had been so, that they
Had been my father's sons ! then had my prize

Been less : and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some
Gui. 'Would, I could free't !

Arv. Or I ; whate
What pain it cost, what danger ! Gods !
Bel. Ha

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the
Which their own conscience seal'd them,
(That nothing gift of differing multitudes,
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me
I'd change my sex to be companion with Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so :
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth,
Discourse is heavy, fasting ; when we have We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw
Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arv. I pray, draw near.

SCENE VII.

Rome.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emper

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The forest, near the cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapp'd it truly. How fit his garments serve me ! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too ? the rather (saving reverence of the word)
for 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits.
Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer ; in his own chamber, I mean,) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his ; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions : yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite.
What mortality is ! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, sha this hour be cut off ; thy mistress anfor garments cut to pieces before thy face : an done, spur'd her home to her father ; w tune, put them into my hand ! This is the scription of their meeting-place ; and th dares not deceive me.

SCENE II.

Before the cave.

Enter, from the cave, BELARIUS, GUI
ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. You are not well : [To Imogen.]
here in the cave ;
We'll come to you after hunting.

Brother, stay here:
[To Imogen.]

Are not brothers?
So man and man should be;
Clay and clay differs in dignity,
The dust is both alike. I am very sick.
Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

So sick I am not;—yet I am not well:
Not so citizen a wanton, as
I am to die, ere sick: So please you, leave me;
To your journal course: the breach of custom
Each of all. I am ill; but your being by me
To amend me: Society is no comfort
To one so sociable: I'm not very sick,
I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here:
I'll none but myself; and let me die,
If I die so poorly.

I love thee; I have spoke it:
As much the quantity, the weight as much,
I love my father.

What? how? how?
If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
To your good brother's fault: I know not why
This youth; and I have heard you say,
Reason's without reason: the bier at door,
Demand who is't shall die, I'd say
Her, not this youth.

O noble strain! [Aside.]
The thinness of nature! breed of greatness!
My father cowards, and base thiugs sire
Base:

He hath meal, and bran; and contempt, and grace.
Not their father; yet who this should be,
A miracle itself, lov'd before me.—
The ninth hour o' the morn.

Brother, farewell.

I wish ye sport.
You health.—So please you, sir,
[Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods,
What lies I have heard!

Warriors say, all's savage, hut at court:
Hence, O, thou disprov'st report!
Superior seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Tributary rivers as sweet fish.
Sick still; heart-sick:—Pisania,
New taste of thy drug.

I could not stir him:
And he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Mostly afflicted, but yet honest.

Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter
I know more.

To the field, to the field:—
I leave you for this time; go in, and rest.
We'll not be long away.

Pray, be not sick,
You must be our housewife.
Well, or ill,
I'm bound to you.

And so shalt be ever.

[Exit Imogen.]
With, how'er distress'd, appears, he hath had Nocestors.

How angel-like he sings!
But his neat cookery! He cut our roots in Characters;
As'd our broths, as Juno had been sick,
Her diet.

Nobly he yokes
Me with a sigh: as if the sigh
That it was, for not being such a smile;
He mocks the sigh, that it would fly
To a divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

I do note,
Patience and patience, rooted in him both,
Their spurs together.

Grow, patience!
The stinking elder, grief, untwine
The fishing root, with the increasing vine!
It is great morning. Come; away.—Who's Here?

Enter CLOTEN.

I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hock'd me:—I am faint.

Those runagates!

Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he:—We are held as outlaws:—Hence.
Gui. He is but one: You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exit Belarius and Arviragus.]

Clo. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain: Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art:
Why I should yield to thee?

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thon injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it; were't toad, or adder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

Gui. I'm sorry for't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afraid?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear; the wise:
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:

Yield, rustick mountaineer. [Exit, fighting.]

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No company's abroad.

Arv. None in the world: You did mistake him,
sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour,
Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute,
'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear: But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with Cloten's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,
There was no money in't: not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect, what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;

Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they grew,

And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,

But, that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us: Then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threaten us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw 't into the oreck
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.

Bel. I fear, 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't! though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would, revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, tis done:—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: To gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, bow thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rud'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to us portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,

Is jollity for apes, and griefs for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMO dead, in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for!

Arv. The bird is That we have made so much on. I had Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to
To have turn'd my leaping time into a c
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest
My brother wears thee not one half so we
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, mela
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom!
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggi
Might easiest harbour in!—Thou blest Jove knows what man thou might'st ha
but I,
Thou died'st, a most rare boy, of melanc
How found you him!

Arv. Stark, as you see
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled al
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?
Arv. O'the
His arms thus leagu'd: I thought, he slep
My clouted brogues from off my feet, wh
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he b
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a be
With female fairies will his tomb be ha
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fair

I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt

With charitable bill (O bill, sore-sham
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathe
Without a monument!) bring thee all t
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowe
To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Pr'ythee, I
And do not play in wench-like words w
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave.

Arv. Say, where shall?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv.
And let us, Polydore, though now our
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to
As once our mother; use like note, and Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it w
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are v

SONG.

1. Fear no more the heat o'the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and t'en thy wages:
Olden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

2. Fear no more the frown o'the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Use no more to clothe, and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
Be sceptre, learning, physick, must
I follow this, and come to dust.

3. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-dreaded thunder stone;
4. Fear not slander, censure rash;
5. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:
6. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

7. No exorciser harm thee!
8. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
9. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
10. Nothing ill come near thee!
11. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Enter BELARIUS, with the body of Cloten.

We have done our obsequies: Come lay him down.

Here's a few flowers; but about midnight,

more;
flowers, that have on them cold dew o'the night, swings fit'st for graves.—Upon their faces:—
ere as flowers, now wither'd: even so herb'lets shall, which we upon you strow.—
on, away: apart upon our knees.

round, that gave them first, has them again:
pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exeunt Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.]

[Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven;
Which is the way?—

you.—By yon bush?—Pray, how far thither?
mistaken—can it be six miles yet?— gone all night:—'Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

soft! no bedfellow:—O, gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the body.]

flowers are like the pleasures of the world;

bloody man the care on't.—I hope, I dream;

so, I thought I was a cave-keeper,

look to bouest creatures: But 'tis not so;

but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,

in the brain makes of fumes: Our very eyes

metimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith, able still with fear: Bot if there be fit in heaven as small a drop of pity even's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!

dream's here still: even when I wake, it is out me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt, bless man!—The garments of Posthumus!

of the shape of his leg: this is his hand;

not Mercarial; his Martial thigh;

draws of Hercules: but his Jovial face—

in heaven?—How?—'Tis gone.—Pisanio, was madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks time to boot, be darted on thee; Thou,

ir'd with that irregular devil, Cloten,

here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,

oceanforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio with his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—

this most hateful vessel of the world,

the main-top!—O, Posthumus! alas, is thy head? where's that? Ah me! where's

that?

o might have kill'd thee at the heart,

left this head on.—How should this be?

Pisanio!

ce, and Cloten! malice and lacre in them said this woere. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!

rug he gave me, which, he said, was precious ordial to me, have I not found it

Murd'rous to the senses? That confirms it home:
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

Enter LUCIUS, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea; attending
You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are here in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o'the wind.

Luc. This forwardness

Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers

Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't.—Now, sir,

What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision:

(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence), Thus:—

I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd

From the spungy south to this part of the west,

There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,

(Unless my sins abuse my divination),

Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,

And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here,

Without his top? The rain speaks, that sometime

It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—

Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather:

For nature doth abhor to make his bed

With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—

Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young

one,

Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,

They crave to be demanded: Who is this,

Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,

That, otherwise than noble nature did,

Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest

In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?

What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,

Nothing to be were better. This was my master,

A very valiant Briton, and a good,

That here by mountaineers lies slain:—Alas!

There are no more such masters: I may wander

From east to occident, cry out for service,

Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth!

Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than

Thy master in bleeding: Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. If I do lie, and do

No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope [Aside.]

They'll pardon it. Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:

Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name.

Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say,

Thou shalt be so well master'd; but, be sure,

No less below'd. The Roman emperor's letters,

Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner

Than thine own worth prefer thee: Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But, first, aa't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep

As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when

With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,

Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;

And, leaving so his service, follow you,

So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;

And rather father thee, than master thee.—

My friends,

The boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
Find out the prettiest daizied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: Come, arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, and PISANIO.

Cym. Again; and bring me word, how 'tis with her.
A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger:—Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: my queen
Upon a desperate bed; and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. 'Beseech your
highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

I Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing, he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally.

For Cloten,—
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time's troublesome:
We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
[To Pisanio.

Does yet depend.

I Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast; with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son, and queen!—
I am amaz'd with matter.

I Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready:
The want is, but to put those powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: Let's withdraw;
And meet the time, as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but
We grieve at chances here.—Away. [Exeunt.]

Pis. I heard no letter from my master, since
I wrote him, Imogen was slain: 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings: Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work:
Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Before the cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us
Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life,
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hog
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure
To the king's party there's no going: new Of Cloten's death (we being not known, nor Among the bands) may drive us to a rende
Where we have liv'd; and so extort from
That which we've done, whose answer would Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a do
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both the
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am kn
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not From my remembrance. And, besides, the Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your lo
Who find in my exile the want of breeding
The certainty of this hard life; aye hope
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Then be s
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the ar
I and my brother are not known; yours
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergron
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that s
I'll thither: What thing is it, that I neve
Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on bl
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and Never bestrid a horse, save one, that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remainin
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leav
I'll take the better care; but if you will n
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I; Amen.
Bel. No reason I, since on your lives ye
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with yo
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie Lead, lead.—The time seems long; the Till it fly out, and show them princes born.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I

A field between the British and Roman camps.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd

Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you would take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves,
For wringing but a little?—O, Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:

No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if y
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults,
Had liv'd to put on this: so had you save
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck
Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance. B
You snatch some hence for little faults; th
To have them fall no more: you some per
To second ills with ills, each elder worse;
And make them dread it to the doer's thr
But Imogen is your own: Do your best w
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am broog

ing the Italian gentry, and to fight
 my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough,
 Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
 we no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me these Italian weeds, and suit myself as a Briton peasant: so I'll fight at the part I come with; so I'll die thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
 I nor hated, to the face of peril
 I'll dedicate. Let me make men know my valour in me, than my habits show.
 I put the strength o'the Leonati in me!
 I name the guise o'the world, I will begin in fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same.

at one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman army; at the other side, the British army; ONATIUS POSTHUMUS following it, like a soldier. They march over, and go out.
 Then enter again in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth and disarmeth
 IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

I. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom off my manhood: I have belied a lady, the richness of this country, and the air on't mightily enfeebles me; or could this earth, by drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me, my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne to wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
 O thy gentry, Britain, go before me out, as he exceeds our lords, the odds at we scarce are men, and you are gods.

[Exit.]
 The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline taken; then enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, IDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Stand, stand! we have the advantage of the ground;
 the lane is guarded; nothing routs us, but the villainy of our fears.

Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons; they rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then, enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save
 thyself;
 friends kill friends, and the disorder's such as were hood-wink'd.

'Tis their fresh supplies.
 It is a day turn'd strangely: Or betimes re-enforce, or fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another part of the field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Post. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

I did;

ugh you, it seems, come from the fliers.

I did.

No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,

that the heavens fought: The king himself his wings destitute, the army broken, out the backs of Britons seen, all flying through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, having the tongue with slaughtering, having work plentiful than tools to do't, struck down, and mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling through fear; that the strait pass was damn'd with dead men, hurt behind, and cowards living with lengthen'd shame.

Where was this lane?

Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—

the honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd

the name of a breeding, as his white beard came to,

and being this for his country;—athwart the lane,

He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run
 The country base, than to commit such slaughter;
 With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
 Than those for preservation eas'd, or shame,)
 Made good the passage; cry'd to those that fled,
 Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men:
 To darkness feet, souls that fly backwards! Stand;
 Or we are Romans, and will give you that
 Like beasts, which you slun beastly; and may save,
 But to look back in frown: stand, stand.—These three,
 Three thousand confident, in act as many,
 (For three performers are the file, when all
 The rest do nothing,) with this word, stand, stand,
 Accommodated by the place, more charming,
 With their own' nobleness, (which could have turn'd
 A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks, Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that some,
 turn'd coward

But by example, (O, a sin in war, Damn'd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look
 The way that they did, and to grin like lions
 Upon the pikes o'the hunters. Then began
 A stop i'the chaser, a retire; anon,
 A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith, they fly
 Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
 The strides they victors made: And now our cowards (Like fragments in hard voyages,) became
 The life o'the need; having found the back-door open
 Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens, how they wound!
 Some, slain before; some, dying; some, their friends
 O'er-borne i'the former wave: ten, chac'd by one,
 Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
 Those, that would die or ere resist, are grown
 The mortal bugs o'the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:

A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear,

Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,

And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:

Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
 Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:

For if he'll do, as he is made to do,

I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you are angry.

[Exit.]

Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery!

To be i'the field, and ask, what news, of me!

To-day, how many would have given their honours

To have sav'd their carcasses? took heel to do't,

And yet died too? I, in mine own woe charm'd,

Could not find death, where I did hear him groan;

Nor feel him, where he struck: Being an ugly monster,

'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we

That draw his knives i'the war.—Well, I will find

him:

For being now a favourer to the Roman,

No more a Briton, I have resum'd again

The part I came in: Fight I will no more,

But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall

Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Romans; great the answer he

Britons must take: For me, my ransom's death;

On either side I come to spend my breath;

Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,

But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:

'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave the affront with them.

1 Cap. So 'tis reported:

But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is there?

Post. A Roman;

Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds

Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!

A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have peck'd them here : He brags his service
As if he were of note : bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler : after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.

A prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and two Gaolers.

I Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you ;

So graze, as you find pasture.

2 Gaol.

Ay, or a stomach.

[Exeunt Gaolers.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage ! for thou art a way, I think, to liberty : Yet am I better Than one that's sick o' the gout ; since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd By the sure physician, death ; who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience ! thou art fetter'd More than my shanks, and wrists : You good gods, give me

The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt, Then, free for ever ! Is't enough, I am sorry ? So children temporal fathers do appease ; Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent ? I cannot do it better than in gyves, Desir'd, more than constrain'd : to satisfy, If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take No stricter render of me, than my all. I know, you are more clement than vile men, Who of their broken debtors take a third, A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again On their abatement ; that's not my desire : For Imogen's dear life, take mine ; and though 'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life ; you coin'd it : 'Tween man and man, they weigh not every stamp ; Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake : You rather mine, being yours : And so, great powers, If you will take this audit, take this life, And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen ! I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.]

Solemn music. Enter, as an Apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man, attended like a warrior ; leading in his hand an ancient Matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with musick before them. Then, after other musick, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sic. No more, thou thunder-master, show

Thy spite on mortal flies :

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,

That thy adulteries

Rates, and revenges,

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,

Whose face I never saw ?

I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd

Attending nature's law.

Whose father then (as men report,

Thou orphan's father art,)

Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him

From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,

But took me in my throes ;

That from me was Posthumus ript,

Came crying 'mongst his foes,

A thing of pity !

Sic. Great nature, like his ancestry,

Moulded the stuff so fair,

That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,

As great Sicilius' heir.

I Bro. When once he was mature for man,

In Britain where was he

That could stand up his parallel ;

Or fruitful object be

In eye of Imogen, that best

Could deem his dignity ?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,

To be exil'd, and thrown

From Leonati' seat, and cast

From her his dearest one,

Sweet Imogen ?

Sic. Why did you suffer Iachimo,

Slight thing of Italy,

To taint his nobler heart and brain

With needless jealousy ;

And to become the jeal and scorn

O' the other's villainy ?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we can

Our parents, and us twain,

That, striking in our country's cause,

Fell bravely, and were slain ;

Our fealty, and Tenantius' right,

With honour to maintain.

I Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath

To Cymbeline perform'd :

Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,

Why hast thou thus adjourn'd

The graces for his merits due ;

Being all to dolours tur'd ?

Sic. Thy crystal window ope ; look out

No longer exercise,

Upon a valiant race, thy harsh

And potent injuries :

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,

Take off his miseries.

Sic. Peep through thy marble mansion ;

Or we poor ghosts will cry

To the shining synod of the rest,

Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter ; or we appeal,

And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, upon an eagle : he throws a thunder-bolt. Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region I

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know

Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts !

Re-enter Gaolers.

1. Come, sir, are you ready for death?
2. Over-roasted rather: ready long ago.
3. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready at, you are well cook'd.

1. So, if I prove a good repast to the spec-dish pays the shot.

1. A heavy reckoning for you, sir: But the rt is, you shall be called to no more pay-fear no more tavern bills; which are often dness of parting, as the procuring of mirth:
me in faint for want of meat, depart reeling too much drink; sorry that you have paid and brain both empty: the brain the heavier quit.—O the charity of a penny cord! it up thousands in a trice: you have no true and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and me, the discharge:—Your neck, sir, is pen, and counters; so the acquaintance follows.

1. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

1. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the uch: But a man that were to sleep your and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, uld change places with his officer: for, look ir, you know not which way you shall go.

1. Yes, indeed, do I, fellow.

1. Your death has eyes in's head then; I not seem him so pictured: you must either be led by some that take upon them to know; or pon yourself that, which I am sure you do now; or jump the alter-enquiry on your own and how you shall speed in your journey's think, you'll never return to tell one.

1. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want to direct them the way I am going, but such ak, and will not use them.

1. What an infinite mock is this, that a man have the best use of eyes, to see the way odness! I am sure, hanging's the way of ing.

Enter a Messenger.

1. Knock off his manacles; bring your prito the king.

2. Thoo bring'st good news;—I am call'd to nde free.

1. I'll be hang'd then.

1. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler: no for the dead. [Exeunt Post. and Mess.]

1. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, conscience, there are verier knaves desire to or all he be a Roman: and there be some of too, that die against their wills; so should were one. I would we were all of one mind, ne mind good; O, there were desolation of s, and gallowses! I speak against my present
; but my wish hath a preferment in't.

SCENE V.

Cymbeline's tent.

CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, VIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and endants.

1. Stand by my side, you, whom the gods have made versers of my throne. Woe is my heart, the poor soldier, that so richly fought,

Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast
Stepp'd before targe of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?
Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,

But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; which I will add
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,

[To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.]
By whom, I grant, she lives: 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are:—report it.

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast, were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Arise, my knights o' the battle; I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!
To soar your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd,
I will report, so please you: These her women
Can trip me, if I err; who, with wet cheeks,
Were present, when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bare in hand to love
With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she had
For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and ling'ring,
By inches waste you: In which time she purpos'd,
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show: yes, and in time,
(When she had fitted you with her craft), to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown.

But failing of her end by his stragge absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious,
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; POSTHUMUS, behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that

The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit, That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter Of you their captives, which ourself have granted: So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day Was yours by accident; had it gone with us, We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficient, A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer: Augustus lives to think on't: And so much For my peculiar care. This one thing only I will entreat; My boy, a Briton born, Let him be ransom'd: never master had A page so kind, so duteous, diligent, So tender over his occasions, true, So feart, so nurse-like: let his virtue join With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm, Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, sir, And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him; His favour is familiar to me.— Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace, And art mine own.—I know not why, nor wherefore, To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live: And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it; Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad; And yet, I know, thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: alack, There's other work in hand; I see a thing Bitter to me as death: your life, good master, Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me, He leaves me, scorns me: Briefly die their joys, That place them on the truth of girls and boys.— Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy? I love thee more and more; think more and more What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak,

Will he have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me, Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal, Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?
Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart, And lend my best attention. What's thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page; I'll be thy master: Walk with me; speak freely.

[Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart.
Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arn. One said another Not more resembles: That sweet rosy lad, Who died, and was Fidele:—What think you?
Gul. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;
Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure He would have spoke to us.

Gul. But we saw him dead.
Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. It is my mistress: [Aside. Since she is living, let the time run on, To good, or bad. [Cym. and Imo. come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side; Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To Imo.] step you forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely; Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it, Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render Of whom he had this ring.

Does the world go round?

How come these staggers on me?

Wake, my mistress!

If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me with mortal joy.

How fares my mistress?

O, get thee from my sight;

gav't me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
 he not where princes are.

The tune of Imogen!

Lady,

gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if clous thing: I had it from the queen.

 New matter still?

It poison'd me.

O gods!—

out one thing, which the queen confess'd, must approve thee honest: If Pisanio said she, given his mistress that confection
 I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd would serve a rat.

What's this, Cornelius?

The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me mper poisons for her; still pretending satisfaction of her knowledge, only ling creatures vile, as cats and dogs, esteem: I, dreading that her purpose of more danger, did compound for her ain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease present power of life; but, in short time, fices of nature should again their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Most like I did, for I was dead.

My boys,

was our error.

This is, sure, Fidele.

Why did you throw your wedded lady from
 you?

that you are upon a rock; and now

me again. [Embracing him.

Hang there like fruit, my soul,

the tree die!

How now, my flesh, my child?

mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?

thou not speak to me?

Your blessing, sir.

[Kneeling.

Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
 had a motive for't.

[To Gui. and Arv.

My tears, that fall,

holy water on thee! Imogen, mother's dead.

I am sorry for't, my lord.

O, she was naught; and long of her it was,
 we meet here so strangely: But her son

we, we know not how, nor where.

My lord,

fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten

my lady's missing, came to me his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
 It was my instant death: By accident,
 I had a feigned letter of my master's
 Then in my pocket; which directed him
 To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
 Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
 Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts
 With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
 My lady's honour: what became of him,
 I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the story:

I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forbid!

I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
 Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth,
 Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gui. A most uncivil one: The wrongs he did me
 Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
 With language that would make me spurn the sea,
 If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;
 And am right glad, he is not standing here
 To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:

By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law: Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man

I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,

And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king:

This man is better than the man he slew.

As well descended as thyself; and hath

More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens

Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone;

[To the Guard.

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,

Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,

By tasting of our wrath? How of descent

As good as we?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three:

But I will prove, that two of us are as good

As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,

For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,

Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger is Ours.

Gui. And our good is his.

Bel. Have at it then.—

By leave;—Thou had'st, great king, a subject, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is

A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He is it, that hath

Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;

I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;

The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:

First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;

And let it be confiscate all, so soon

As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy: Here's my knee;

Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;

Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,

These two young gentlemen, that call me father,

And think they are my sons, are none of mine;

They are the issue of your loins, my liege,

And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:

Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd,

Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes

(For such, and so they are,) these twenty years

Have I train'd up: those arts they have, as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as

Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,

Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;

Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then: Beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them: But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world:—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st: I lost my children;
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who bath upon him still that natural stamp:
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more:—Bless'd may you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by't.—O my gentle brothers,
Have we thus met? O never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arr. Ay, my good lord.

Gui. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgement

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv'd
you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met
them?

Why fled you from the court? and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place,
Will serve our long interrogatories. See,
Posthūmus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother; So we'll hold thee ever.

[To Belarius.
Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The souldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd:—That I was he, Speak, Iachimo; I had you down, and might

Have made you finish.

Iach. I am down again: [Kneels]
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee
As then your force did. Take that life, 'beseec'd,
Which I so often owe: but, your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me;
The power that I have on you, is to spare ye
The malice towards you, to forgive you: Lie
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arr. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good morn of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer: As I slept, methinks
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shews
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it: let him shew
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philharmonus,
Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning Sooth. [Reads.] When as a lion's whelp is himself unknown, without seeking find, and braced by a piece of tender air; and when stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches, which dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Post end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and in peace and plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine
Is this most constant wife; [To Post.] who, at Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd al
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some sense
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches
Thy two sons forth: who, by Belarius stol
For many years thought dead, are now restor'd
To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin:—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her, and
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere this
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd: For the Roman eagle
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which fore-shew'd our prince
The imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we th
And let our crook'd smokes climb to th
From our bless'd altars! Publish we this
To all our subjects. Set we forward: Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together: so through Lud's town
And in the temple of great Jupiter

Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there:—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

SATURNINUS, son to the late emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared emperor himself.
BASSIANUS, brother to Saturninus; in love with Lavinia.
TITUS ANDRONICUS, a noble Roman, general against the Goths.
MARCUS ANDRONICUS, tribune of the people; and brother to Titus.
LUCIUS,
QUINTUS, MARTIUS,
MUTIUS,
 Young LUCIUS, a boy, son to Lucius.

PUBLIUS, son to Marcus the tribune.
ÆMILIUS, a noble Roman.
ALARBUS, CHIRON,
DEMETRIUS, } sons to Tamora.
AARON, a Moor, beloved by Tamora.
A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown; Romans.
Goths and Romans.
TAMORA, queen of the Goths.
LAVINIA, daughter to Titus Andronicus.
A Nurse, and a black Child.

Kinsmen of Titus, Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Scene,—Rome, and the country near it.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Rome. Before the Capitol.

The tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft, as in the Senate. Enter, below, SATURNINUS and his Followers, on one side; and BASSIANUS and his Followers, on the other; with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, defend the justice of my cause with arms; And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords: I am his first-born son, that was the last That wore the imperial diadem of Rome; Then let my father's honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Ans. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right,—

If our Bassianus, Cæsar's son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep then this passage to the Capitol; And suffer not dishonour to approach The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence, and nobility: But let desert in pure election shine; And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS aloft, with the crown.

Mar. Princes,—that strive by factions, and by friends, Ambitiously for rule and empery,— Know, that the people of Rome, for whom we stand A special party, have, by common voice, In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius For many good and great deserts to Rome; A nobler man, a braver warrior, Loves not this day within the city walls: As by the senate is accented home, From weary wars against the barbarous Goths; That, with his sons, a terror to our foes, Hath yet'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms. Five years are spent, since first he undertook This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms Our enemies' pride: Five times he hath return'd Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons In outline from the field; And now at last, laden with honour's spoils, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Honour'd Titus, flourishing in arms. Let us retreat,—By honour of his name, Whom, worthily, you would have new succeed,

And in the Capitol and senate's right, Whom you pretend to honour and adore,— That you withdraw you, and abate your strength; Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should, Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy In thy uprightness and integrity, And so I love and honour thee and thine, Thy noble brother Titus, and his sons, And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled all, Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament, That I will here dismiss my loving friends; And to my fortunes, and the people's favour, Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exit the Followers of Bassianus.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,

I thank you all, and here dismiss you all; And to the love and favour of my country Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exit the Followers of Saturninus.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me, As I am confident and kind to thee.— Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes! and me, a poor competitor.

[Sat. and Bas. go into the Capitol, and exeunt with Senators, Marcus, &c.]

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter a Captain, and Others.

Cap. Romans, make way; The good Andronicus, Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, Successful in the battles that he fights, With honour and with fortune is return'd, From where he circumscrib'd with his sword, And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Flourish of trumpets, &c. enter MUTIUS and MARTIUS; after them, two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then QUINTUS and LUCIUS. After them, TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People, following. The bearers set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds! Lo, as the bark, that hath discharg'd her freight, Returns with precious lading to the bay,

From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears;
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!—
Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
Half of theumber that king Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These, that survive, let Rome reward with love;
These, that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors:
Here Goths have given me leave to sheath my sword.
Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?—
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,
That we may hew his limbs, and, on a pile,
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren;—Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs, and return,
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and common-weal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge;
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld Alive, and dead; and for their brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:

To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.]

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,
The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,
(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen),
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffins laid in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here, are no
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter LAVINIA.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons
Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.
Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart—
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Others.

Mar. Long live lord Titus, my beloved
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother!

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your arms:
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance, in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been Send thee by me, their tribune, and their
This palliant of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness.
What! should I don this robe, and trouble
Be chosen with proclamations to-day;
To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully
And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a scepter to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou
Tit. Patience, prince Saturnine.

Sat. Romans, do me a meed:
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them:
Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor:—
Andronicus, 'would thou wert shipp'd to Rather than rob me of the people's hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore
The people's hearts, and wean them from thee.
Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die;
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friend
I will most thankful be: and thanks, to
Of noble minds, is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribune
I ask your voices, and your suffrages;
Will you bestow them friendly on Andron
Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope
Reflect on Rome, as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this common-weal:
Then if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say,—Long live our emperor!

Mar. With voices and applause of every ians, and plebeians, we create Saturninus, Rome's great emperor;

ay,—Long live our emperor Saturnine!
[A long flourish.]

Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done in our election this day, thee thanks in part of thy deserts, fill with deeds requite thy gentleness: for an onset, Titus, to advance name, and honourable family, as will I make my empress, my royal mistress, mistress of my heart, as the sacred Pantheon her espouse: see, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee? It doth, my worthy lord; and, in this match, me highly honour'd of your grace: are, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,—and commander of our common-weal, the world's emperor,—do I consecrate word, my chariot, and my prisoners; as well worthy Rome's imperial lord: see them then, the tribute that I owe, honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life! proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts, shall record; and, when I do forget east of these unspokeable deserts, as, forget your fealty to me.

Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;

[To Tamora.]
That for your honour and your state, see you nobly, and your followers. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue would choose, were I to choose anew.—O, fair queen, that cloudy countenance; a chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer, som't not to be made a scorn in Rome: thy shall be thy usage every way. O my word, and let not discontent all your hopes; Madam, he comforts you, as you are not displeas'd with this?

Not I, my lord; sith true nobility rests these words in princely courtesy. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go: unless here we set our prisoners free: in our honours, lords, with trump and drum.
Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.

[Seizing Lavinia.]
How, sir? Are you in earnest then, my lord? Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal, myself this reason and this right.

[The emperor courts Tamora in dumb show.]
Sum cuique is our Roman justice: since in justice seizeth but his own. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?

As, my lord; Lavinia is surpris'd. Surpris'd! By whom?

By him that justly may be betroth'd from all the world away.
[Re-enter Marcus and Bassianus, with Lavinia.]
Brothers, help to convey her hence away, with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.]
Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.
My lord, you pass not here.

What, villain boy! Help, Lucius, help!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

My lord, you are unjust; and, more than so, ogal quarrel you have slain your son. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine; as would never so dishonour me: restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife, another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.]
No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not, nor thee, nor any of thy stock: st, by leisure, him that mocks me once; ever, nor thy traitorous haughty sons, trace all this to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale of, But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus, Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine, That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece To him that flourish'd for her with his sword: A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy; One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons, To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.
Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths.— That, like the stately Phoebe 'mongst her nymphs, Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome,— If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice, Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride, And will create thee empress of Rome.

Spek, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice? And here I swear by all the Roman gods,— Sith priest and holy water are so near, And tapers burn so bright, and every thing In readiness for Hymeneus stand,— I will not re-salute the streets of Rome, Or climb my palace, till from forth this place I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear, If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths, She will a handmaid be to his desires, A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon:—Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride, Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine, Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered: There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt Saturninus, and his Followers; Tamora, and her Sons; Aaron, and Goths.]

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride;— Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone, Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Mar. O, Titus, see, O, see, what thou hast done! In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,— Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed That hath dishonour'd all our family; Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes; Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb. This monument five hundred years hath stood, Which I have sumptuously re-edified: Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors, Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls:— Bury him where you cast, he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you: My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him; He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany.
Tit. And shall? What villain was it spoke that word!

Quin. He that would vouch't in any place but here.
Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite?

Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded: My foes I do repute you every one; So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself; let us withdraw.
Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[Marcus and the sons of Titus kneel.]
Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead.
Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.
Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—
Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—
Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, That died in honour and Lavinia's cause. Thou art a Roman, he not barbarous. The Greeks, upon advice, did bury Ajax

That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals.
Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise!—
The dismal'st day is this, that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!—
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[Mutius is put into the tomb.]
Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb!—

All. No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it, that the subtle queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but, I know, it is;
Whether by device, or no, the heavens can tell:
Is she not then beholden to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?
Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, SATURNINUS, attended; TAMORA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, and AARON: at the other, BASSIANUS, LA-VINIA, and Others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize;
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride.

Bas. And you of yours, my lord: I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true-betrothed love, and now my wife?
But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Mean while I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir: You are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give you grace to know,—
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,
Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:

Receive him then to favour, Saturnine;
That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,
A father, and a friend, to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds;
'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me:
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What! madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord: The gods of Rome forefend,
I should be author to dishonour you!

But, on mine honour, dare I undertake
For good lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his grief:
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.
My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last,
Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest then the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant us for ingratitude,
(Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin.)
Yield at entreats, and then let me alone:
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction, and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitor sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know, what 'tis to let a
queen

Knelt in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.—

Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andron,
Take up this good old man, and cheer the
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath pray'd
For thee: I thank your majesty, and her, my

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;—
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you

For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable—
And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia;—
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven, and
highness,

That, what we did, was mildly, as we may
Tend'ring our sister's honour, and our own

Mar. That on mine honour here I do pray
Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no
Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look hie

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous fault

Stand up.
Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend; and sure as death I swor
I would not part a bachelor from the priest
Come, if the emperor's court can feast two
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majes
To hunt the panther and the hart with me
With horn and hound, we'll give you grace t

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The same. Before the palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning's flash;
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiack in his glistening coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.—
Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,

To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch; whom thou in triu
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous ch
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eye
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds, and idle though
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and go
To wait upon this new-made empress.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this quee
This goddess, this Semiramis;—this quee
This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturn
And see his shipwreck, and his commonwe
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS, br
Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wa manners, to intrude where I am grac'd ;

 may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.
Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all ;
 so in this to bear me down with braves.
 not the difference of a year, or two,
 me less gracious, thee more fortunate :
 as able, and as fit, as thou,
 erve, and to deserve my mistress' grace ;
 that my sword upon thee shall approve,
 plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

r. Clubs, clubs ! these lovers will not keep the peace.
u. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd, you a dancing-rapier by your side,
 you so desperate grown, to threat your friends ?
 ; have your lath glued within your sheath,
 you know better how to handle it.

Mean while, sir, with the little skill I have,
 will shall thou perceive how much I dare.

u. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave ? [They draw.]

Why, how now, lords ?
 ar the emperor's palace dare you draw,
 maintain such a quarrel openly ?

well I wot the ground of all this grudge ;
 did not for a million of gold,

asse were known to them it most concerns :
 would your noble mother, for much more, dishonour'd in the court of Rome.

hame, put up.

u. Not I ; till I have sheath'd apier in his bosom, and, withal,
 it these reproachful speeches down his throat,
 he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,— spoken-coward ! that thunder'st with thy
 tongue,

with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

r. Away, I say.—
 by the gods, that warlike Goths adore, petty brabble will undo us all.—

, lords,—and think you not how dangerous to jut upon a prince's right ?

t, is Lavinia then become so loose,
 assianus so degenerate,

for her love such quarrels may be broach'd,
 out controlment, justice, or revenge ?

g lords, beware—an should the empress know discord's ground, the mnsic would not please.

I care not, I, knew she and all the world ;
 Lavinia more than all the world.

a. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice :

dia is thine elder brother's hope.

u. Why, are ye mad ? or know ye not, in Rome furious and impatient they be,
 cannot brook competitors in love ?

you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
 as device.

r. Aaron, a thousand deaths
 I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

To achieve her !—How ?

a. Why mak'st thou it so strange ?
 a woman, therefore may be woo'd ;

a woman, therefore may be won ;
 a Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.

t, man ! more water glideth by the mill wots the miller of ; and easy it is cut loaf to steal a shive, we know :

gh Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
 r than he have yet worn Vulcan's badge.

u. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.
 [Aside.]

u. Then why should he despair, that knows to court it

words, fair looks, and liberality ?
 t, hast thou not fall often struck a doe,
 some her cleanly by the keeper's nose ?

r. Why then, it seems, some certain snatch or so ld serve your turns.

Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

u. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

'Would you had hit it too ;
 should not we be tir'd with this ado.

hark ye, hark ye,—And are you such fools, ware for this ? Would it offend you thea both should speed ?

Chi.

Dem.

So I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends ; and join for that you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do
 That you affect : and so must you resolve ;

That what you cannot, as you would, achieve,
 You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
 Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than lingering languishment
 Must we pursue, and I have found the path.

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand ;
 There will the lovely Roman ladies troop :

The forest walks are wide and spacious ;
 And many unfrequented plots there are,
 Fitted by kind for rape and villainy :

Single you thither then this dainty doe,
 And strike her home by force, if not by words :

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
 Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit,
 To villainy and vengeance consecrate,
 Will we acquaint with all that we intend ;
 And she shall file our engines with advice,
 That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
 But to your wishes' height advance you both.

The emperor's court is like the house of fame,
 The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears :

The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull ;
 There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns :

There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's eye,
 And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.
Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
 To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
 Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A forest near Rome. A lodge seen at a distance ; horns and a cry of hounds heard.

*Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, &c.
 MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MAR-TIUS.*

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
 The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green :

Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
 And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
 And rouse the prince ; and ring a hunter's peal,
 That all the court may echo with the noise.

Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
 To tend the emperor's person carefully :

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
 But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Horns wind a peal. Enter SATURNINUS, TA-MORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, and Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty ;—
 Madam, to you as many and as good !—
 I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,
 Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you ?

Lav. I say, no ;
 I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us have,
 And to our sport :—Madam, now shall ye see
 Our Roman hunting. [To Tamora.]

Mar. I have dogs, my lord,
 Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
 And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
 Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
 But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A desert part of the forest.

Enter AARON, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He, that had wit, would think that I had none,
 To bury so much gold under a tree,

And never after to inherit it.
 Let him, that thinks of me so abjectly,
 Know, that this gold must coin a stratagem;
 Which, cunningly effected, will beget
 A very excellent piece of villainy:
 And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest,
 [Hides the gold.]
 That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,
 When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?
 The birds chaunt melody on every bush;
 The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun;
 The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
 And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground:
 Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
 And—whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
 Replying shrilly to the well-run'd horns,
 As if a double hunt were heard at once,—
 Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise:
 And—after conflict, such as was suppos'd
 The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
 When with a happy storm they were surpriz'd,
 And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,—
 We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
 Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
 Whilst hounds, and horns, and sweet melodious birds,

Be unto us, as is a nurse's song
 Of lullaby, to bring her babe asleep.
 Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
 Saturn is dominator over mine:
 What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
 My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?
 My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
 Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
 To do some fatal execution?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs;
 Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
 Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
 Hark, Tamora,—the empress of my soul,
 Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,—
 This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
 His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day:
 Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
 And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
 Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
 And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll:—
 Now question me no more, we are espied;
 Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
 Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus comes:
 Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
 To back thy quarrels, whatsoever they be. [Exit.]

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,
 Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop?
 Or is it Dian, habited like her;
 Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
 To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
 Had I the power, that, some say, Dian had,
 Thy temples should be planted presently
 With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds
 Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
 Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
 'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
 And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
 Are singled forth to try experiments:
 Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day!
 'Tis pity, they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian
 Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
 Spotted, detested, and abominable.
 Why are you sequester'd from all your train?
 Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
 And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
 Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
 If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport,
 Great reason that my noble lord be rated

For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence,
 And let her 'joy her raven-colour'd love;
 This valley fits the purpose passing well.
 Bas. The king, my brother, shall have notes of Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him long:

Good king! to be so mightily abus'd!
 Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our
 cious mother,

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?
 Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look
 These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place,
 A barren detested vale, you see, it is:
 The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and led O'ercome with moss, and haleful mistletoe.
 Here never shines the sun; here nothing breezes
 Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven.

And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
 They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
 A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
 Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins
 Would make such fearful and confused cries,
 As any mortal body, hearing it,
 Should straight fall mad, or else die sudden:
 No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
 But straight they told me, they would bind me
 Unto the body of a dismal yew;
 And leave me to this miserable death.
 And then they call'd me, foul adulteress,
 Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
 That ever ear did hear to such effect.

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
 This vengeance on me had they executed:
 Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
 Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bass.]

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show strength.

[Stabbing him like]

Lav. Ay come, Semiramis,—nay, barbarous mora!

For no name fits thy nature but thy own!

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know boys,

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to
 First, thrash the corn, then after burn the stub.

This minion stood upon her chastity,
 Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
 And with that painted hope braves your might,
 And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch
 Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
 And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when you have the honey you
 Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam; we will make sure—

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
 That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach

O, do not learn her wrath; she taught it me.
 The milk, thou suck'dst from her, did turn to me.
 Even at thy teat thou had'st thy tyranny.—
 Yet every mother breeds not sons alike;
 Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.

I know not what it means; away with her.

O, let me teach thee: for my father's sake, gave thee life, when well he might have slain
thee,

obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,

for his sake am I pitiless:—

Over, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain, to your brother from the sacrifice;

For Andronicus would not relent:

Go away with her, and use her as you will;

Go to her, the better lov'd of me.

O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,

With thine own hands kill me in this place:

It is not life that I have begg'd so long;

It was slain, when Bassianus died.

What begg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go.

This present death I beg; and one thing
more,

Womanhood denies my tongue to tell:

Keep me from their worse than killing lust,

Unbleed me into some loathsome pit;

Never man's eye may behold my body:

Be, and be a charitable murderer.

So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:

Let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Away; for thou hast staid us here too long.

No grace? no womanhood? Ah beastly creature!

Set and enemy to our general name!

Go fall—

Nay, then I'll stop your mouth:—Bring thou her husband; [Dragging off Lavinia.]

To the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Exeunt.]

Farewell, my sons: see, that you make her
sure:

Let my heart know merry cheer indeed,

That the Andronici be made away.

Will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,

That my spleenful sons this trull devour. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

The same.

AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Come on, my lords; the better foot before:

It will I bring you to the loathsome pit,

I spy'd the panther fast asleep.

My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

And mine, I promise you; were't not for
shame,

Could I leave our sport to sleep a while.

[Martius falls into the pit.]

What, art thou fallen? What subtle hole
is this,

Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briars;

Whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood,

Whose morning's dew distill'd on flowers?

Whose fatal place it seems to me:—

Brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

O, brother, with the smallest object under my eye, with sight, made heart lament.

[Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find him here;

Which thereby may give a likely guess,

Whence were they that made away his brother.

[Exit Aaron.]

Why dost not comfort me, and help me out of this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?

I am surpris'd with an uncouth fear:

My sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints;

My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,

And thou look down into this den,

Which a fearful sight of blood and death.

Aaron is gone; and my compassionate
heart

Doth permit mine eyes once to behold whereat it trembles by surmise:

Let me know how it is; for ne'er till now

Did I, to fear I know not what.

Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,

As a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,

In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear

A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,

Which, like a taper in some monument,

Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,

And shows the ragged entrails of this pit:

So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,

When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,—

As fearful hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—

Out of this fell devouring receptacle,

As hateful as Cocythus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee
out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,

I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb

Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.

I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose again,

Till thou art here aloft, or I below:

Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee.

[Falls in.]

Enter SATURNINUS and AARON.

Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole is here,

And what he is, that now is leap'd into it.

Say, who art thou, that lately didst descend

Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;

Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,

To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead? I know, thou dost but jest:

He and his lady both are at the lodge,

Upon the north side of this pleasant chace;

'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

Mart. We know not where you left him all alive,

But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants: TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound;

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a letter.]

The complot of this timeless tragedy;

And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold

In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis, we mean,—

Do thou so much as dig the grave for him;

Thou know'st our meaning: Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder tree,

Which overshades the mouth of that same pit,

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.

Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.

O, Tamora! was ever heard the like?

O, this is the pit, and this the elder tree:

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,

That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.
[Showing it.]

Sat. Two of thy whelps, [To Tit.] fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life:—

Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;

There let them bide, until we have devis'd

Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee

I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,

That this fell fault of my accursed sons,

Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see, it is apparent.—

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail:

For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them; see, thou follow me.
Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers:
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain;
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king;
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE V.

The same.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;

And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scowl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou had'st hands to help thee knit the cord.
[Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.]

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; Where is your husband?—

If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wakeme!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,

That I may slumber in eternal sleep!—

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands

Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare

Of her two branches? those sweet ornaments
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in;

And might not gain so great a happiness,
As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me

Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,

Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind

Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,

Coming and going with thy honey breath.

But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee

And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame

And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,

As from a conduit with three issuing spouts

Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face,

Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.

Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so

O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the bottom

That I might rail at him to ease my mind!

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,

Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,

And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind;

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee

A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,

And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,

That could have better sew'd than Philomela

O, had the monster seen those lily hands

Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,

And make the silken strings delight to kiss

He would not then have touch'd them for his life

Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,

Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.

Come, let us go, and make thy father blind

For such a sight will blind a father's eye:

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant

What will whole months of tears thy father

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with

O, could our mourning ease thy misery!

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Rome. A street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the place of execution; TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;

For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;

For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;

And for these bitter tears, which now you see

Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;

Be pitiful to my condemned sons,

Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought!

For two and twenty sons I never wept,

Because they died in honour's lofty bed.

For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write

[Throwing himself on the ground.]

My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears.

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;

My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, &c. with the prisoners.]

O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain,

That shall distil from these two ancient urns,

Than youthful April shall with all his showers:

In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still;

In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow,

And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,

So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn.

O, reverend tribunes! gentle aged men!

Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;

And let me say, that never wept before,

My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father, you lament in vain
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune he speaks.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they'd

They would not mark me; or, if they did

All bootless to them, they'd not pity me.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;

Who, though they cannot answer my distress

Yet in some sort they're better than the air

For that they will not intercept my tale:

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet

Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me

And, were they but attired in grave weeds

Rome could afford no tribune like to these.

A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard stones:

A stone is silent, and offendeth not;

And tribunes with their tongues doom men to

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their

For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd

My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive

That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?

Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey

But me and mine: How happy art thou that

From these devourers to be banish'd?

But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep

Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break;

I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it

1. This was thy daughter.
 Why, Marcus, so she is.
 Ah me! this object kills me!
 Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her:—
 my Lavinia, what accursed hand made thee handless in thy father's sight? Fool hath added water to the sea? ought a faggot to bright-burning Troy? grief was at the height before thou cam'st, now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.— me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too; they have nurs'd this woe, and all in vain; they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life; useless prayer have they been held up, they have serv'd me to effectless use:— all the service I require of them at the one will help to cut the other.— well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands; hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.
 Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
 O, that delightful engine of her thoughts, blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence, a from forth that pretty hollow cage; so, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung its varied notes, enchanting every ear!
 O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?
 O, thus I found her, straying in the park, to hide herself; as doth the deer, hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.
 It was my deer; and he, that wounded her, hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead: now I stand as one upon a rock, and with a wilderness of sea; marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave, rising ever when some envious surge in his brinish howels swallow him. way to death my wretched sons are gone; stands my other son, a banish'd man; here my brother, weeping at my woes; hat, which gives my soul the greatest spur, or Lavinia, dearer than my soul.— I but seen thy picture in this plight, could have madd'd me; What shall I do I behold thy lively body so? hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears; anque, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee: husband he is dead; and, for his death, brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this:— Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her! a I did name her brothers, then fresh tears on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew a gather'd lily almost wither'd.
 Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband:
 nance, because she knows them innocent.
 If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful, use the law hath ta'en revenge on them.— so, they would not do so foul a deed; ess the sorrow that their sister makes.— te Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips; ask some sign how I may do thee ease: thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius, thou, and I, sit round about some fountain; ing all downwards, to behold our cheeks they are stain'd; like meadows, yet not dry; my slime left on them by a flood? In the fountain shall we gaze so long, the fresh taste be taken from that clearness, made a brine-pit with our bitter tears? Shall we cut away our hands, like thine? Shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows the remainder of our hateful days? Shall we do? let us, that have our tongues, some device of further misery, make us wonder'd at in time to come.
 Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief, how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
 Patience, dear niece!—good Titus, dry thine eyes.
 Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot, napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.
 Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say That to her brother which I said to thee; His napkin, with his true tears all beswet, Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks. O, what a sympathy of woe is this! As far from help as limbo is from bliss!

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor Sends thee this word,—That, if thou love thy sons, Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus, Or any one of you, chop off your hand, And send it to the king: he for the same, Will send thee hither both thy sons alive; And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron! Did ever raven sing so like a lark, That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise? With all my heart, I'll send the emperor My hand;

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc. Stay, father; for that noble hand of thine, That hath thrown down so many enemies, Shall not be sent; my hand will serve the turn: My youth can better spare my blood than you; And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe, Writing destruction on the enemy's castle? O, none of both but are of high desert: My hand hath been but idle; let it serve To ransom my two nephews from their death; Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go along, For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go. Tit. Sirs, strive no more; such wither'd herbs as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son, Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care, Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand. Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll receive them both; Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest, And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:— But I'll deceive you in another sort, And that you'll say, ere half an hour can pass.

[Aside.]

[He cuts off Titus's hand.]

Enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now, stay your strife; what shall be, is despatch'd.—

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand: Tell him, it was a hand that warded him From thousand dangers; bid him bury it; More hath it merited, that let it have.

As for my sons, say, I account of them As jewels purchas'd at an easy price; And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand, Look by and by to have thy sons with thee;— Their heads, I mean.—O, how this villainy Aside. Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it! Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace, Aaron will have his soul black like his face. [Exit.]

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven, And bow this feeble roin to the earth: If any power pities wretched tears,

To that I call:—What, wilt thou kneel with me? Do then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim, And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds,

When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. O! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,

Then into limits could I bind my woes:

When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'er-flow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,

Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?

I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow!

She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:

Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;

Then must my earth with her continual tears

Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd:

For why? my bowels cannot hide her woes,

But like a drunkard must I vomit them.

Then give me leave; for losers will have leave

To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid

For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.

Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;

And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back;

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd:

That woe is me to think upon thy woes,

More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.

Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,

And be my heart an ever-burning hell!

These miseries are more than may be borne!

To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal,

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a

wound,

And yet detested life not shrink thereat!

That ever death should let life bear his name,

Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

[Lavinia kisses him.

Mar. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless,

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful sound have an end?

Mar. Now, farewell, flattery: Die, Andronicus;

Thou dost not slumber: see, thy two sons' heads;

Thy warlike hand; thy mangled daughter here;

Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight

Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs:

Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand

Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes!

Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha!

Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:

Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,

And would usurp upon my watry eyes,

And make them blind with tributary tears;

Then which way shall I find revenge's cave?

For these two heads do seem to speak to me;

And threaten me, I shall never come to bliss,

Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,

Even in their throats that have committed them.

Come, let me see what task I have to do.—

You heavy people, circle me about;

That I may turn me to each one of you,

And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.

The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head;

And in this hand the other will I bear:

Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;

Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;

Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:

Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:

And, if you love me, as I think you do,

Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;

The wofull'st man that ever liv'd in Rome!

Farewell, proud Rome! till Lucius come ag

He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.

Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;

O, 'would thou wert as thou 'fore hast be

But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives,

But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;

And make proud Saturninus and his empres

Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen

Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power

To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

Mar. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on
him,
He takes false shadows for true substances.
Tit. Come, take away.—Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.—
Come, boy, and go with me; thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.
[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same. Before Titus's house.

TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young
LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.

g. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia ows me every where, I know not why:—
d uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes!
y, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.
er. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.
t. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.
y. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.
er. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?
t. Fear her not, Lucius:—Somewhat doth she
mean:

Lucius, see, how much she makes of thee:
whither would she have thee go with her.
boy, Cornelia never with more care d to her sons, than she hath read to thee, et poetry, and Tully's Orator.
st thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?
y. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess, ess some fit or frenzy do possess her:
I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
remity of griefs would make men mad;
I have read, that Hecuba of Troy mad through sorrow: That made me to fear;
ough, my lord, I know, my noble aunt es me as dear as e'er my mother did,
would not, but in fury, fright my youth:
ich made me down to throw my books, and fly;
eless, perhaps: But pardon me, sweet aunt:
y, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
ll most willingly attend your ladyship.
er. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over the books which Lucius has let fall.]

t. How now, Lavinia?—Marcus, what means
this?
e book there is that she desires to see:—
ich is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—
thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
e, and take choice of all my library,
so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
eal the damn'd contriver of this deed.—
y lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?
er. I think, she means, that there was more than one federate in the fact;—Ay, more there was:— else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

t. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?
y. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis;
mother gave't me.

er. For love of her that's gone, haps she cull'd it from among the rest.

t. Soft! see, how busily she turns the leaves!
p her:—
at would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read?
s is the tragick tale of Philomel, treats of Terens' treason, and his rape;
rape, I fear, was root of thine annoyance.

er. See, brother, see; note, how she quotes the leaves.
t. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpriz'd, sweet girl, ish'd, and wrong'd, as Philomela was,
'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?—
see!—
such a place there is, where we did hunt, bad we never, never, hunted there!
ern'd by that the poet here describes,

By nature made for murders, and for rapes.

Mar. O, why should nature build so foul a den,
Unless the gods delight in tragedies!

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl,—for here are none but friends, —

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed:
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Mar. Sit down, sweet niece;—brother, sit down by me.—

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!—
My lord, look here;—look here, Lavinia:

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,
This after me, when I have writ my name

Without the help of any hand at all.

[*He writes his name with his staff, and guides
it with his feet and mouth.*]

Curs'd be that heart, that forc'd us to this shift!—
Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last,
What God will have discover'd for revenge:
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the traitors, and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]

Tit. O, do you read, my lord, what she hath writ?

Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius.

Mar. What, what!—the lustful sons of Tamora
Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?

Tit. Magne Dominator poli,

Tam lentus audis sceleris? tam lentus vides?

Mar. O, calm thee, gentle lord! although, I know,
There is enough written upon this earth,
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,
And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.

My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;
And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;
And swear with me,—as with the woful fere,
And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,—
That we will prosecute, by good advice,
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how,
But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware:

The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list.
You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind
Will blow these ssons, like Sibyl's leaves; abroad,
And where's your lesson then?—Boy, what say you?

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad-hondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft
For this ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;

Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy

Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents, that I intend to send them both:
Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grand-sire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come:—Marcus, look to my house;
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;
Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.
[Exeunt Titus, Lavinia, and Boy.]
Mar. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan,
And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy;
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
Than fee-men's marks upon his batter'd shield:
But yet so just, that he will not revenge:—
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus! [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room in the palace.

Enter AARON, CHIRON, and DEMETRIUS, at one door; at another door, young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verse writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver to us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus;—
And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: What's the news?
Boy. That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,
For villains mark'd with rape. [Aside.] May it please you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well:
And so I leave you both, [Aside.] like bloody villains.

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see:

*Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus,
Non eget Mauri jaculis, neque arcu.*

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just!—a verse in Horace;—right, you have it.

Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt;

And sends the weapons wrapp'd about
with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.

But were our witty empress well a-foot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit.
But let her rest in her unrest a while.—
And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and, more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good, before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would, we had a thousand Roman dames
At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.
Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us o'er. [Aside. Flourish.]

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish
thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft; who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a black-a-moor child in her arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords:
O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!
Now help, or wee betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwalling dost thou!
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine!

Nur. O, that which I would hide from her eye,

Our empress's shame, and stately Rome's disgra—
She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she's brought to bed.

Aar. Well
Give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nur. A
Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam; a issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful
issue:

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.

The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy

Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow to dispose this treasure in mine arms, secretly to greet the empress' friends.—

is you that puts us to our shifts:

a warrior, and command a camp. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. A publick place.

TITUS, bearing arrows, with letters at the of them; with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Come, Marcus, come;—Kinsmen, this is the way:—

r. now let me see your archery; ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight:

Arctura reliquit:—

a. remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

like you to your tools. You, cousins, shall and the ocean, and cast your nets;

ly you may find her in the sea;

ere's as little justice as at land:—

Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;

ou must dig with mattock, and with spade,

ere the inmost centre of the earth:

when you come to Pluto's region,

you, deliver him this petition:

im, it is for justice, and for aid;

but it comes from old Andronicus,

Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—

Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable,

What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me.—

Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,

And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd;

This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence,

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O Publius, is not this a heavy case,

To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,

By day and night to attend him carefully;

And feed his humour kindly as we may,

Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.

Join with the Goths; and with revenged war

Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,

And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now? how now, my masters?

What,

Have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you

word

If you will have revenge from hell, you shall:

Marry, for justice, she is so employ'd,

He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else,

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong, to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below,

And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—

Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;

No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclops' size:

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back;

Yet wrong with wrongs, more than our backs can bear:—

And, sith there is no justice in earth nor hell,

We will solicit heaven; and move the gods,

To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs:

Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus.

[He gives them the arrows.]

Ad Jovem, that's for you:—Here, ad Apollinem:—

Ad Martem, that's for myself:—

Here, boy, to Pallas:—Here to Mercury:

To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine.—

You were as good to shoot against the wind.—

To it, boy. Marcus, loose when I bid:

O' my word, I have written to effect;

There's not a god left unsolicited.

Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court:

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.

Mar. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon;

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done!

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Mar. This was the sport, my lord; when Pub-lius shot,

The hull being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock

That down fell both the ram's horns in the court;

And who should find them but the empress' villain?

She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give your lordship joy.

Enter a Clown, with a basket and two pigeons.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?

Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clow. Ho! the gibbet-maker! he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?

Clow. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clow. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clow. From heaven? alas, sir, I never came there:

God forbid, I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor for you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tu. Sirrah, come hither; make no more ado, but give your pigeons to the emperor: By me thou shalt have justice at his hands. Hold, hold;—mean while, here's money for thy charges.

Give me a pen and ink.—

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach, you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.

Tu. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration; For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant:—And when thou hast given it to the emperor, knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let's go:—Publius, follow me. [Escunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. Before the palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, Lords, and Others: SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand, that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne
Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of equal justice, us'd in such contempt?
My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods,
However these disturbers of our peace
Buz in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd,
But even with law, against the wilful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress:
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war:
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
What's this, but libelling against the senate,
And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But, if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that justice lives
In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,
He'll so awake, as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scarr'd his heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight,
Than prosecute the meanest, or the best,
For these contempts. Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood out: if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.—

Enter Cloon.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Plains near Rome.LUCIUS, and Goths, with drum and colours.

Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I received letters from great Rome,
Which signify, what hate they bear their emperor,
How desirous of our sight they are.
Fore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Loyal, and impatient of your wrongs;
Wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
I can make treble satisfaction.

Alc. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort;
Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds,
Which saved Rome requites with foul contempt,
I'd in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,—
Following bees in hottest summer's day,
To thy master to the flower'd fields,—
To avenge'd on cursed Tamora.

Alc. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.
I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
He comes here, led by a lusty Goth!

Enter a Goth, leading AARON, with his child in his arms.

Alc. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,

And upon a ruinous monastery;
As I earnestly did fix mine eye
On the wasted building, suddenly

I saw a child cry underneath a wall:
I ran unto the noise; when soon I heard
A crying babe controll'd with this discourse:

Alc. towny slave; half me, and half thy dam!
Alc. thy hue betray whose brat thou art,
Alc. stare lent thee but thy mother's look,
Alc. thy, thou mightst have been an emperor:
Alc. here the bull and cows are both milk-white,
Alc. never do beget a coal-black calf.

Alc. villain, peace!—even thus he rates the babe,—
Alc. must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Alc. when he knows thou art the empress' babe,
Alc. odd thee dearly for thy mother's sake.

Alc. This, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
And smote him suddenly; and brought him hither,
As you think needful of the man.

O worthy Goth! this is the incarnate devil,
Whom I'd Andronicus of his good hand:

Behold the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye;
Behold the base fruit of his burning lust.—
Call-eyed slave, whither wouldst thou convey
This rawing image of thy fiend-like face?

Do not speak? What! deaf? No; not a word?

Or, soldiers; hang him on this tree,
To show his side his fruit of bastardy.

Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood.
Too like the sire for ever being good.—
Hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
And vex the father's soul withal.

Alc. A ladder.

[A ladder brought, which Aaron is obliged to ascend.]

Lucius, save the child;
If I do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
Which might advantage thee to hear:

It will not, befall what may befall,
I can no more; But vengeance rot you all!

Say on; and, if it please me which thou speak'st,
I will shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

And if please thee? why, assure thee, Lucius,
Vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
Of black night, abominable deeds,
Of plots of mischief, treason; villainies
Which I do hear, yet piteously perform'd:

Which shall all be buried by my death,
Which thou swear to me, my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear, that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believ'st no god;

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not:

Yet,—for I know thou art religious,

And hast a thing within thee, called conscience;

With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies;

Which I have seen thee careful to observe,—

Therefore I urge thy oath;—For that, I know,

An idiot holds his hauble for a god,

And keeps the oath, which by that god he swears;

To that I'll urge him:—Therefore, thou shalt vow

By that same god, what god soe'er it be,

That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,—

To save my boy, to nourish, and bring him up;

Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god, I swear to thee, I will.

Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress.

Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut, Lucius! this was but a deed of charity,

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.

'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus:

They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands; and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O, detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O, barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them;

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set;

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,

As true a dog as ever fought at head.—

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.

I train'd thy brethren to that gulleful hole,

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay:

I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,

Confederate with the queen, and her two sons;

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand;

And, when I had it, drew myself apart,

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,

When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,

That both mine eyes were rainy like to his;

And when I told the empress of this sport,

She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,

And, for my tidings, gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day, (and yet, I think,

Few come within the compass of my curse,)

Wherein I did not some notorious ill:

As kill a man, or else devise his death;

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it;

Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself:

Set deadly enmity between two friends;

Make poor men's cattle break their necks;

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,

And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,

Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;

And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,

Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,

Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.

Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things,

As willingly as one would kill a fly;

And nothing grieves me heartily indeed,

But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil; for he must not die

So sweet a death, as hanging presently.

Mar. If there be devils, 'would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire;
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my hither tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome,
Desires to be admitted to your presence.
Luc. Let him come near.—

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome, Æmilius; what's the news from Rome?
Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,
The Roman emperor greets you all by me:
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

1 Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come.—March away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Rome. Before Titus's house.

Enter TAMORA, CHIRON, and DEMETRIUS, disguis'd.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus;
And say, I am Revenge, sent from below,
To join with him, and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies. [They knock.]

Enter TITUS, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick, to make me ope the door;
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?

You are deceiv'd: for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No; not a word: How can I grace my talk,
Wanting a hand to give it action?
Thou hast the odds of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk
with me.

Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, these crimson lines;
Witness these trenches, made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day, and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora:
Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou, sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:
I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;
Confer with me of murder and of death:
There's not a hollow cave, or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity, or misty vale,
Where bloody murder, or detested rape,
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offenders quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape, and Murder, stands;
Now give some surance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels;
And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globes.
Provide thee proper palfrics, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And, when thy car is loaden with their heads,

I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long;
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,
Until his very downfall in the sea.

And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come!

Tit. Are they thy ministers? what are the

SCENE III.

The same. A pavilion, with tables, &c.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and Goths, with AARON, prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind,
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

I Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,
This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;

Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the empress' face,

For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong:

I fear, the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!—
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—

[Exit Goths, with Aaron. Flourish.
The trumpets show, the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with Tribunes, Senators, and Others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee, to call thyself a sun?
Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will.

[Hautboys sound. The company sit down at table.

Enter TITUS, dressed like a cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread
queen;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius;
And welcome, all: although the cheer be poor,
'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were My lord the emperor, resolve me this;

Was it well done of rash Virginius,
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and defour'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched to perform the like:—
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

[He kills Lavinia.

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woful as Virginius was:
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage;—and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell, who did the deed.

T. Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter
thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sot. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pye;
Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.
'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

Sat. Die, frantick wretch, for this accursed deed.
[Killing Tamora.
Killing Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed?

[Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse. Marcus, Lucius, and their partisans ascend the steps before Titus's house.

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,
By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O, let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.

Sen. Lest Rome herself be hane unto herself;
And she, whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,
Do shameful execution on herself.
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,— Speak, Rome's dear friend; [To Lucius.] as erst
our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse,
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,
The story of that baleful burning night,
When subtle Greeks surpriz'd king Priam's Troy;
Tell us, what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,
That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.—
My heart is not compar of flint, nor steel;
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
And break my very utterance; even i'the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration:
Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;
And they it were that ravished our sister:
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded;
Our father's tears despis'd; and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel out,
And sent her enemies unto the grave.

Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend:
And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood;
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body.
Alas! you know, I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just, and full of truth.
But, soft; methinks, I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me;
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak; Behold this child, [Pointing to the child in the arms of an Attendant.

Of this was Tamora delivered;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and ploter of these woes:
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge, what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans?
Have we done aught amiss? Show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remanoder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,

And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak; and, if you say, we shall,
Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for, well I know,
The common voice do cry, it shall be so.
Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail; Rome's royal emperor!

Lucius, &c. descend.

Mar. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house;
[To an Attendant.

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.
Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail; Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; May I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim a while,—
For nature puts me to a heavy task:—
Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk:—
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, [Kisses Titus.

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
The last true duties of thy noble son!

Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us

To melt in showers: Thy grandsire lov'd thee well:
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow:
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet, and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:
Friends should associate friends in grief and woe:
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart

'Would I were dead, so you did live again!—
O lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Enter Attendants, with AARON.

I Rom. You sad Andronici, have doze with woes;
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and fannish him;
There let him stand, and rave and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay, to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?

I am no baby, I, that, with base prayers,
I should repent the evils I have done;
Ten thousand, worse than ever yet I did,
Would I perform, if I might have my will;
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor
hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave:
My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts, and birds of prey:
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done to Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state;
That like events may ne'er it ruinate. [Exeunt.

ACT THE FIRST.

Enter GOWER.

Before the palace of Antioch.

To sing a song of old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come;
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves, and holy-ales;
 And lords and ladies of their lives
 Have read it for restoratives;
 'Purpose to make men glorious;
Et quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
 And that to hear an old man sing,
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.—
 This city then, Antioch the great
 Built up for his chiefest seat;
 The fairest in all Syria;
 (I tell you what mine authors say)
 This king unto him took a pheere,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke:
 Bad father! to entice his own
 To evil, should be dour by none.
 By custom, what they did begin,
 Was, with long use, account no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
 Which to prevent, he made a law,
 (To keep her still, and men in awe,)
 That whose ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life:
 So for her many a wight did die,
 As you grim looks do testify.
 What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
 I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.]

SCENE I.

Antioch. A room in the palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
 The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul
 Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
 Think death no hazard, in this enterprize. [Music.]
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
 For the embracements even of Jove himself;
 At whose conception, (till Lucina reign'd,
 Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
 The senate-house of planets all did sit,
 To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
 Of every virtue gives renown to men!
 Her face, the book of praises, where is read
 Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever ras'd, and testy wrath
 Could never be her mild companion.
 Ye gods that made me man, and sway in love,
 That have inflam'd desire in my breast,
 To taste the fruit of you celestial tree,
 Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
 As I am son and servant to your will,
 To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
 With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
 For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
 Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
 A countless glory, which desert must gain:
 And which, without desert, because thine eye
 Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
 Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
 Drawn by report, advent'rous by desire,
 Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance pale,
 That, without covering, save yon field of stars,
 They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
 And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
 For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
 My frail mortality to know itself,
 And by those fearful objects to prepare
 This body, like to them, to what I must:
 For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
 Who tells us, life's but breath; to trust it, error.
 I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
 Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
 Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did;
 So I bequeath a happy peace to you,
 And all good men, as every prince should do;
 My riches to the earth from whence they came;

But my unspotted fire of love to you.

[To the Daughter of Antiochus.]

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus,
Scorning advice.

Ant. Read the conclusion then;
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. In all, save that, mayst thou prove prosperous!

In all, save that, I wish thee happiness!

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

[He reads the Riddle.]

*I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh, which did me breed:
I sought a husband, in which labour,
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.*

Sharp physick is the last: but O you powers!
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,

[Takes hold of the hand of the Princess.]

Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill:
But I must tell you,—now, my thoughts revolt;
For he's no man on whom perfections wait,
That knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings;
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful musick,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken;

But, being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime:
Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd;
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould 'braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a hook of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut, than shown;
For vice repeated, is like the wand'ring wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind male casts

Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell, the earth is wrong'd
By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for't.

Kings are earth's gods: in vice their law's their will
And if Jove stray, who dares say, Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.
All love the womb that their first beings bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning:—
But I will gloze with him. [Aside.] Young prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do despise you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son:
And until then, your entertain shall be,
As doth best fit our honour, and your worth.

[Exeunt Antiochus, his Daughter, and Attendants.]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin!
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight.

If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain, you were not so bad,
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely clasplings with your child
(Which pleasure fits an husband, not a father,
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed;
And both like serpents are, who though the
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the
One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame:
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for that we mean
To have his head.
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy
Nor tell the world, Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner:
And therefore instantly this prince must die
For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends on us there?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness
Ant. Thaliard, you're of our chamber, and Partakes her private actions to your secrecy
And for your faithfulness we will advance:
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's
We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord,
'Tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough;
Lest your breath cool yourself, telling your Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is dead.

Ant. [Exit Messenger]
Wilt live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
From a well-experienc'd archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return,
Unless thou say, Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I
Can get him once within my pistol's length
I'll make him sure: so farewell to your high

Ant. Thaliard, adieu! till Pericles be dead.
My heart can lend no succour to my head.

SCENE II.

Tyre. A room in the palace.

Enter PERICLES, HELICANUS, and Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: Why this thoughts?

The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so us'd a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night
(The tomb where grief should sleep,) can be quiet!

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine
shun them.

And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-deeds
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me;—The great Antiochus,
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act

3. I think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
 boots it me to say, I honour him,
 I suspect I may dishonour him:
 I what may make him blush in being known,
 I'll stop the course by which it might be known;
 with hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
 I with the ostent of war will look so huge,
 my men shall drive courage from the state;
 my men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
 my subjects punish'd, that ne'er thought offence:
 I'll care of them, not pity of myself,
 I'll be no more but as the tops of trees, which fence the roots they grow by, and defend
 them.)
 I'll care both my body pine, and soul to languish,
 I'll punish that before, that he would punish.
 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!
 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us, careful and comfortable!
 Hel. Peace, peace, my lords, and give experience
 tongue.
 I'll do abuse the king, that flatter him:
 flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
 thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark, which that breath gives heat and stronger glowing;
 I'll receive reproof, obedient, and in order,
 my kings, as they are men, for they may err.
 my signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
 flatters you, makes war upon your life:
 I'll see, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
 I'll not be much lower than my knees.
 Hel. All leave us else; but let your cares o'erlook at shipping, and what lading's in our haven,
 I'll then return to us. [Exit Lords.] Helicanus,
 I'll then
 I'll moved us: what seest thou in our looks?
 Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.
 Hel. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,
 I'll durst thy tongue move anger to our face?
 Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence
 I'll have their nourishment?
 Hel. Thou know'st I have power
 I'll take thy life.
 Hel. [Kneeling.] I have ground the axe myself;
 I'll you but strike the blow.
 Hel. Rise, pry'thee rise;
 I'll down, sit down; thou art no flatterer:
 I'll mak thee for it; and high heaven forbid,
 I'll if kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!
 I'll counsellor, and servant for a prince,
 I'll so by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
 I'll what wouldst thou have me do?
 Hel. With patience bear
 I'll thy griefs as you do lay upon yourself.
 Hel. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus;
 I'll so minister'st a potion unto me,
 I'll that thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
 I'll mak me then: I went to Antioch,
 I'll here, as thou know'st, against the face of death,
 I'll sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
 I'll on whence an issue I might propagate,
 I'll my arms to princes, and to subjects joys.
 I'll my face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
 I'll my heart (hark in thine ear,) as black as incest:
 I'll which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
 I'll m'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st
 I'll this,
 I'll a time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.
 I'll which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
 I'll der the covering of a careful night,
 I'll so seem'd my good protector; and being here
 I'll thought me what was past, what might succeed.
 I'll new him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
 I'll crease not, but grow faster than their years:
 I'll I'd should he doubt it, (as no doubt he doth,)
 I'll that I should open to the listening air,
 I'll how many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
 I'll how keep his bed of blackness unalaid ope,—
 I'll how I'd should that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms,
 I'll and make pretence of wrong that I have done him;
 I'll how he'll be all, for mine, if I may call't offence,
 I'll how I'll feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
 I'll how high love to all (of which thyself art one,

Who now reprov'st me for it)——
 Hel. Alas, sir!
 Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
 Musings into my mind, a thousand doubts
 How I might stop this tempest, ere it came;
 And finding little comfort to relieve them,
 I thought it princely charity to grieve them.
 Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,
 Freely I'll speak. Antiochus you fear,
 And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
 Who either by publick war, or private treason,
 Will take away your life.
 Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
 Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
 Or Destinies do cut his thread of life.
 Your rule direct to any; if to me,
 Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.
 Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
 But should he wrong my liberties in absence—
 Hel. We'll mingle bloods together in the earth,
 From whence we had our being and our birth.
 Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus
 Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
 And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
 The care I had and have of subjects' good,
 On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
 I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
 Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both:
 But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
 That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
 Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince.
 [Exit.

SCENE III.

Tyre. An ante-chamber in the palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court.
 Here must I kill Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: 'tis dangerous.—
 Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets.
 Now do I see he had some reason for it: for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush, here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
 Further to question of your king's departure.
 His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
 Doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. Hew! the king gone! [Aside.]

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
 Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
 He would depart. I'll give some light unto you.
 Being at Antioch—

Thal. What from Antioch? [Aside.]

Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not),
 Took some displeasure at him; at least he judg'd so:
 And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
 To show his sorrow, would correct himself;
 So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
 With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive [Aside.]

I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
 But since he's gone, the king it sure must please,
 He 'scap'd the land, to perish on the seas.—
 But I'll present me. Peace to the lords of Tyre!

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come

With message unto princely Pericles;
 But, since my landing, as I have understood
 Your lord has took himself to unknown travels,
 My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, since Committed to our master, not to us:
 Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire.—
 As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.
 [Exit.

SCENE IV.

Tharsus. A room in the Governor's house.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest as here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire, in hope to quench it;
For who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one mountain, to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord, even such our griefs;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mistful eyes,
But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger, till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep our woes
Into the air; our eyes do weep, till lungs
Fetch breath that may proclaim them louder; that,
If heaven slumber, while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have government,

(A city, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches, strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by;
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on, as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O, 'tis too true.

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,
These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea, and air,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates, who not yet two summers younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it;
Those mothers, who, to nurse up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now,
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle. O, let those cities, that of Plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st
haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbour shore,

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir,

That may succeed as his inheritor;

And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,

Taking advantage of our misery,

Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their po,

To beat us down, the which are down already

And make a conquest of unhappy me,

Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for, by the sembl
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to re
Who makes the fairest show, means most des
But bring they what they will, what need we
The ground's the low'st, and we are half
there.

Go tell their general, we attend him here,

To know for what he comes, and whence he o
And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace cons
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you ar
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fir'd, to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships you happily may think
Are, like the Trojan horse, war-stuff'd within
With bloody views, expecting overthrow.
Are stor'd with corn, to make your needy br
And give them life, who are hunger-starv'd
dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!

And we'll pray for you.

Per. Rise, I pray you, r
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and m
Cle. The which when any shall not gratif
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their t Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast while,

Until our stars, that frown, lend us a smile.

ACT THE SECOND.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring;
A better prince, and benign lord,
Prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation
(To whom I give my benizon,)
Is still at Tharsus, where each man Thinks all is writ he spoken can:
And, to remember what he does,
Gild his statue glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with ON; all the Train with them. Enter at o door, a Gentleman, with a letter to Pericles ricles shows the letter to Cleon; then gives the senger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt Pe Cleon, &c. severally.

Gow. Good Helicane hath staid at hor
Not to eat honey, like a drone,
From others' labours; forth he strive
To killen had, keep good alive;
And, to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
And hid intent, to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best Longer for him to make his rest:

le knowing so, put forth to seas,
 Where when men been, there's seldom ease;
 For now the wind begins to blow;
 Hunder above, and deeps below;
 Take such unquiet, that the ship
 Would house him safe, is wreck'd and split;
 And he, good prince, having all lost,
 By waves from coast to coast is tost:
 Will perish of man, of self;
 He ought escapen but himself;
 Will fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
 Brew him ashore, to give him glad:
 And here he comes: what shall he next,
 My lord old Gower; this long's the text.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.

Antapolis. An open place by the sea side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven!
 No rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
 Is a substance that must yield to you;
 As fits my nature, do obey you:
 The sea hath cast me on the rocks,
 And led me from shore to shore, and left me breath
 To think on, but ensuing death:
 Suffice the greatness of your powers,
 We bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
 Having thrown him from your watry grave,
 To have death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1st. What, ho, Pilche!
 2nd. Ho! come, and bring away the nets.
 3rd. What, Patch-breech, I say!
 1st. What say you, master?
 2nd. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, fetch thee with a wannion.
 3rd. 'Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor that were cast away before us, even now.
 1st. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to what pitiful cries they made to us, to help when, well-a-day, we could scarce help res.
 2nd. Nay, master, said not I as much, when the porpus, how he bounced and tumbled?
 say, they are half fish, half flesh: a plague
 on, they ne'er come, but I look to be wash'd.
 1st. I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.
 2nd. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones the little ones: I can compare our rich mi-nothing so fitly as a whale; 'a plays and us, driving the poor fry before him, and at vows them all at a mouthful. Such whales heard on a'the land, who never leave gaping, y've swallowed the whole parish, church,
 bells and all.
 1st. A pretty moral.
 2nd. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I have been that day in the belfry.
 3rd. Why, man?
 1st. Because he should have swallowed me and when I had been in his belly, I would kept such a jangling of the bells, that he never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, and parish, up again. But if the good imonides were of my mind—
 Simonides!
 2nd. We would purge the land of these drones, the bee of her honey.
 1st. How from the finny subject of the sea fishers tell the infirmities of men;
 from their watry empire recollect at may men approve, or men detect!
 be at your labour, honest fishermen.
 3rd. Honest! good fellow, what's that! if it lay fits you, scratch it out of the calendar,
 a body will look after it.
 1st. Nay, see, the sea hath cast upon your coast—
 2nd. What a drunken knave was the sea, to see in our way!
 1st. A man whom both the waters and the wind, the vast tennis-court, hath made the ball to play upon, entreats you pity him;

He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve sure; for here's nothing to be got now a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know;
 But what I am, want teaches me to think on;
 A man shrunk up with cold: my veins are chill,
 And have no more of life than may suffice
 To give my tongue that heat, to ask your help;
 Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
 For I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and more'er puddings and flap-jacks;
 and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipp'd, I would wish no better office, than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit two of the fishermen.]

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, sir! do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pen-tapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so call'd, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since from his subjects
 He gains the name of good, by his government.
 How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to just and tourney for her love.

Per. Did but my fortunes equal my desires,
 I'd wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter the two Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help; here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! hots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turn'd to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.
 Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all my crosses,
 Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself;
 And, though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,
 Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
 With this strict charge, (even as he left his life,)
 Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield
 'Twixt me and death; (and pointed to this brace:)
 For that it sav'd me, keep it; to like necessity,
 Which gods protect thee from! it may defend thee.
 It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it;
 Till the rough seas, that spare not any man,
 Took it in rage, though calm'd, they give't again:
 I thank thee for't; my shipwreck's now no ill,
 Since I have here my father's gift by will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,
 For it was sometime target to a king;
 I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,
 And for his sake, I wish the having of it;
 And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,
 Where with't I may appear a gentleman;
 And if that ever my low fortunes better,
 I'll pay your boonties; till then, rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.
1 Fish. Why, do ye take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe't, I will.
 Now, by your furtherance, I am cloth'd in steel; And spite of all the rupture of the sea, This jewel holds his hiding on my arm; Unto thy value will I mount myself Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.— Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will; This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A publick way, or platform, leading to the lists. A pavilion by the side of it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph? 1 Lord. They are, my liege; And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter, In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.]

Thai. It pleaseth you, my father, to express My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are A model, which heaven makes like to itself: As jewels lose their glory, if neglected, So princes their renown, if not respected. 'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain The labour of each knight, in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the stage, and his squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself? Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father; And the device he bears upon his shield Is a black Æthiop, reaching at the sun; The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well, that holds his life of you.

[The second Knight passes.]

Who is the second, that presents himself? Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father; And the device he bears upon his shield Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady: The motto thus, in Spanish, Fiu per dulciora que per fuerca. [The third Knight passes.]

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third, of Antioch; And his device, a wreath of chivalry: The word, Me pompæ prorexit apex.

[The fourth Knight passes.]

Sim. What is the fourth? Thai. A burning torch, that's turned upside down; The word, Quod me alit, me extinguit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will, Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes.]

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds; Holding out gold, that's by the touchstone tried: The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes.]

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd? Thai. He seems a stranger; but his present is A wither'd branch, that's only green at top; The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral; From the dejected state wherein he is,

He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish

SCENE III.

The same. A hall of state.—A banquet prepar

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights, To say you are welcome, were superfluous. To place upon the volume of your deeds, As in a title-page, your worth in arms Were more than you expect, or more than's fit. Since every worth in show commends itself. Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast. You are my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and To whom this wreath of victory I give, And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is y And here, I hope, is none that envies it. In framing artists, art hath thus decreed, To make some good, but others to exceed; And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, quest feast, Sim. Your presence glads our days; homo love, For who hates honour, hates the gods above. Marsh. Sir, yond's your place.

Per. Some other is m I Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gent That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights. Sim. Sit, sit, sit Thai. By Juno, that is queen Of marriage, all the viands that I eat Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat: Sure he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but A country gentleman; He has done no more than other knights have Broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to gl Per. You king's to me, like to my father's p Which tells me, in that glory once he was; Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne, And he the sun, for them to reverence.

 ink this standing-bowl of wine to him.
 Alas, my father, it befits not me
 A stranger knight to be so hold;
 My proffer take for an offence,
 Men take women's gifts for impudence.

How!

I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

[Aside.]

And further tell him, we desire to know,
 Once he is, his name and parentage.

The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
 I thank him.

Wishing it so much blood unto your life,
 I thank both him and you, and pledge him
 Myself.

And further he desires to know of you,
 Once you are, your name and parentage.

A gentleman of Tyre—(my name, Pericles;
 My calling being in arts and arms;)—

Seeking for adventures in the world,
 On the rough seas left of ships and men,
 My shipwreck, driven upon this shore.

He thanks your grace; names himself Pe-ricles

A man of Tyre, who only by
 The use of the seas has been bereft

Of men, and cast upon this shore.
 Now by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
 Will awake him from his melancholy.

Gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
 Let us rise, and seek for other revels.

Put on your armour, as you are address'd,
 For you will become a soldier's dance.

Do not have excuse, with saying, this
 Is too usick is too harsh for ladies' heads;

They love men in arms, as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.]

As was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
 I see

A lady that wants breathing too:
 She has often heard, you knights of Tyre
 Excellent in making ladies trip;

And their measures are as excellent.
 I wish those that practise them, they are, my lord.

O, that's as much, as you would be denied
 To see them.

[The Knights and Ladies dance.]

A fair courtesy.—Unclasp, unclasp,
 Gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
 The best. [To Pericles.] Pages and lights,
 Conduct

Them unto their several lodgings: Yours, sir,
 I have given order to be next our own.

I am at your grace's pleasure.
 Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
 'Tis the mark I know you level at:

Let each one betake him to his rest;
 I will, now, all for speeding do their best.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Tyre. A room in the Governor's house.

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

O, no, my Escanes; know this of me,
 I am from incest liv'd not free;

Which, the most high gods not minding longer
 Hold the vengeance that they had in store,
 His heinous capital offence;

Which the height and pride of all his glory,
 He was seated, and his daughter with him,
 In riot of inestimable value,

From heaven came, and shrivell'd up
 In ashes, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
 Those eyes ador'd them, ere their fall,
 Now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though
 This king were great, his greatness was no guard
 To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter three Lords.

1 Lord. See, not a man in private conference,
 Or council, has respect with him but he.

2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve, without reproof.

3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it.

1 Lord. Follow me then: Lord Helicane, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome: Happy day, my lords.

1 Lord. Know, that our griefs are risen to the top,
 And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs, for what? wrong not the prince you love.

1 Lord. Wrong not yourself then, noble Helicane;
 But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
 Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
 If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
 And he resolv'd, he lives to govern us,
 Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
 And leaves us to our free election.

2 Lord. Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our censure:

And knowing this kingdom, if without a head,
 (Like goodly buildings left without a roof),
 Will soon to ruin fall, your noble self,
 That best know'st how to rule, and how to reign,
 We thus submit unto,—our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. Try honour's cause; forbear your suffrages:
 If that you love prince Pericles, forbear.

Take I your wish, I leap into the sea,
 Where's hourly trouble, for a minute's ease.

A twelvemonth longer, let me then entreat you
 To forbear choice i' the absence of your king;

If in which time expir'd, he not return,
 I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love,
 Go search like noblemen, like noble subjects,
 And in your search spend your adventurous worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
 You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;
 And, since lord Helicane joineth us,
 We with our travels will endeavour it.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clas
 hands;

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Pentapolis. A room in the palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a letter; the Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.
Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know.

That for this twelvemonth, she'll not undertake
 A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
 Which from herself by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?

Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied her

To her chamber, that it is impossible.
 One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
 And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3 Knight. Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt.]

Sim. So
 They're well despatch'd; now to my daughter's letter:

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
 Or never more to view nor day nor light.

Mistress, 'tis well, your choice agrees with mine;
 I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in't,

Not minding whether I dislike or no!
 Well, I commend her choice;

And will no longer have it be delay'd.
 Soft, here he comes:—I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholden to you
 For your sweet music this last night: my ears,
 I do protest, were never better fed
 With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
 Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.
Sim. Let me ask one thing. What do you think,
 sir, of
 My daughter?

Per. As of a most virtuous princess.
Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.
Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you;
 Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master,
 And she'll your scholar be; therefore look to it.
Per. Unworthy I to be her schoolmaster.
Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.
Per. What's here!

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre?
 'Tis the king's subtilty, to have my life. [Aside.]
 O, seek not to intrap, my gracious lord,
 A stranger and distressed gentleman,
 'That never aim'd so high, to love your daughter,
 But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
 A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not, sir.
 Never did thought of mine levy offence;
 Nor never did my actions yet commence
 A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor! Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor, sir.
Per. Even in his throat, (unless it be the king,)
 That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I do applaud his

Per. My actions are as noble as my thought;
 That never relish'd of a base descent.
 I came unto your court, for honour's cause,
 And not to be a rebel to her state;
 And he that otherwise accounts of me,
 This sword shall prove, he's honour's enemy.
Sim. No!—
 Here comes my daughter, she can witness it

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair
 Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
 Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
 To any syllable that made love to you?

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,
 Who takes offence at that would make me
Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory
 I am glad of it with all my heart. [Aside.]
 I tame you;

I'll bring you in subjection.—
 Will you, not having my consent, bestow
 Your love and your affections on a stranger
 (Who, for aught I know to the contrary,
 Or think, may be as great in blood as I.)
 Hear therefore, mistress; frame your will to
 And you, sir, hear you.—Either he rul'd by
 Or I will make you—man and wife.—
 Nay, come; your hands and lips must seal
 And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes deal
 And for a further grief,—God give you joy!
 What, are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love
Per. Even as my life, my blood that fost
Sim. What, are you both agreed?

Both. Yes, 'please your
Sim. It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you Then, with what haste you can, get you to

ACT THE THIRD.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep ys-laked bath the rout;
 No din but snores, the house about,
 Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
 Of this most pompous marriage feast.
 The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
 Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;
 And crickets sing at th' oven's mouth,
 As the blither for their drouth.
 Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
 Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
 A babe is moulded:—Be attent,
 And time that is so briefly spent,
 With your fine fancies quaintly eche;
 What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Dumb show.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door,
 with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter. Pericles shows it to Simonides; the Lords kneel to the former. Then enter Thaisa with child, and Lychorida. Simonides shows his daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and depart.
 Then Simonides, &c. retire.

Gow. By many a dearn and painful perch,
 Of Pericles the careful search
 By the four opposing coignes,
 Which the world together joins,
 Is made, with all due diligence,
 That horse, and sail, and high expence,
 Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre (Fame answering the most strong inquire,)
 To the court of king Simonides
 Are letters brought; the tenour these:
 Antiochus and his daughter's dead;
 The men of Tyrus, on the head
 Of Helicanus would set on
 The crown of Tyre, but he will none:

The mutiny there he hastes 't appease;
 Says to them, if king Pericles
 Come not, in twice six moons, home,
 He obedient to their doom,
 Will take the crown. The sum of this Brought hither to Pentapolis,
 Y-ravished the regions round,
 And every one with claps, 'gan sound,
 Our heir apparent, is a king:
 Who dream'd, who thought of such a thi
 Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
 His queen with child, makes her desir
 (Which who shall cross?) along to go:
 (Omit we all their dole and woe:)
 Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
 And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
 On Neprune's billow; half the flood
 Hath their keel cut; but fortune's moo
 Varies again: the grizzled north
 Disgorges such a tempest forth
 That, as a duck for life that dives,
 So up and down the poor ship drives.
 The lady shrieks, and, well-a-nea
 Doth fall in travail with her fear:
 And what ensues in this fell storm,
 Shall, for itself, itself perform.
 I will relate; action may Conveniently the rest convey:
 Which might not what by me is told.
 In your imagination hold
 This stage, the ship, upon whose deck
 The sea-tost prince appears to speak.

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on a ship at sea.

Per. Thou God of this great vast, rebul surges,
 Which wash both heaven and hell; and th hast

ie winds command, bind them in brass, call'd them from the deep! O still thy causing,
sadful thunders; gently quench thy nimble,

yes my queen!—Thou storm, thou! venomously
ou spit all thyself?—The seaman's whistle whisper in the ears of death,
L.—Lychorida!—Lucina, O
patroness, and midwife, gentle that cry by night, convey thy deity our dancing boat; make swift the panga queen's travails!—Now, Lychorida—

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Here is a thing
ing for such a place, who if it had would die as I am like to do.
your arms this piece of your dead queen.
How! how, Lychorida!
Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
all that is left living of your queen,— daughter; for the sake of it,
ly, and take comfort.

O you gods!
o you make us love your goodly gifts,
uch them straight away? We, here below, ot what we give, and therein may

Patience, good sir,
r this charge.
Now, mild may be thy life!
ore blust'rous birth had never babe:
od gentle thy conditions!
rt the rudest welcom'd to this world,
r was prince's child. Happy what follows!
st as chiding a nativity,
air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
ld thee from the womb: even at the first,
s is more than can thy portage quit,
l thou canst find here.—Now the good gods
heir best eyes upon it!

Enter two Sailors.

What courage, sir? God save you.
ourage enough: I do not fear the flaw;
done to me the worst. Yet, for the love your infant, this fresh-new sea-farer,
it would be quiet.

Slack the bolins there; thou wilt not,
a? Blow, and split thyself.

But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy
iss the moon, I care not.

Sir, your queen must overboard; the sea igh, the wind is loud, and will not lie till be cleared of the dead.

That's your superstition.
Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it still e observed; and we are strong in earnest.
e briefly yield her; for she must overboard

Be it as you think meet.—Most wretched seen!

Here she lies, sir.
terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear;
e, no fire: the unfriendly elements
hee utterly; nor have I time thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight st thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;
for a monument upon thy bones,
-remaining lamps, the belching whale,
urning water must o'erwhelm thy corpse, with simple shells. Lychorida, nor bring me spices, ink and paper,
et and my jewels; and bid Nicander
e the satin coffer: lay the babe
e pillow; hie thee, whiles I say ly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

[Exit Lychorida.]

Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, and bitumed ready.
I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is it?

We are near Tharsus.
Thither, gentle mariner,

Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O make for Tharsus.
There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus: there I'll leave it
At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner;
I'll bring the body presently. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON, a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call!
Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men;
It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as
this,
Till now, I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return;
There's nothing can be minister'd to nature,
That can recover him. Give this to the 'pothecary,
And tell me how it works. [To Philemon.]

[Exit Philemon, Servant, and those who had been shipwrecked.]

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow, sir.
2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?
1 Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook, as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple; pure surprize and fear
Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;
'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well.
1 Gent. But I much marvel of your lordship, having

Rich tire about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
It is most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physick, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have Together with my practice, made familiar
To me and to my aid, the blest infusions
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures; which gives me
A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd
forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:
And not your knowledge, personal pain, but even
Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never—

Enter two Servants with a chest.

Serv. So; lift there.
Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest;
'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set 't down, let's look on it.
2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight;
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,
It is a good constraint of fortune, that
It belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.
Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitum'd!—
Did the sea cast it up?

Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open;
Soft, soft!—it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.
Cer. As ever hit my nostril; so,—up with it.
O you most potent gods! what's here? a corpse!

1 Gent. Most strange!
Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasur'd

With bags of spices full! A passport too!
Apollo, perfect me i'the characters!

[Unfolds a scroll.

Here I give to understand, [Reads.
(If e'er this coffin drive a-land),
I, king Pericles, have lost
This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying,
She was the daughter of a king;
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe!—This chanc'd to-night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look, how fresh she looks!—They were too rough,

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within;
Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.
Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The overpressed spirits. I have heard
Of an Egyptian, had nine hours lien dead,
By good appliance was recovered.

Enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.
Well said, well said; the fire and the cloths.—
The rough and woful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, 'beseech you.
The viol once more;—How thou stirr'st, thou block!—

The music there.—I pray you, give her air:—
Gentlemen,
This queen will live: nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her; she hath not been entranc'd
Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens, sir,
Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive; behold,
Her eye-lids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Appear, to make the world twice rich. O live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana,
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours;
Lend me your hands: to the next chamber bear
her.

Get linen; now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come, come;
And Æsculapius guide us!

[Exeunt, carrying Thaisa away.

ACT THE FOURTH.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles at Tyre,
 Welcom'd, to his own desire,
 His woful queen leave at Ephesus,
 To Dian there a votaress.
 Now to Marina bend your mind,
 Whom our fast-growing scene must find
 At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd
 In musick, letters; who hath gain'd
 Of education all the grace,
 Which makes her both the heart and place
 Of general wonder. But alack!
 That monster envy, oft the wrack
 Of earned praise, Marina's life
 Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
 And in this kind hath our Cleon
 Oo daughter, and a wench full grown,
 Even ripe for marriage fight; this maid
 High Philoten: and it is said
 For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be:
 Be't when she weav'd the sleided silk
 With fingers, long, small, white as milk;
 Or when she would with sharp needl wound
 The cambrick, which she made more sound
 By hurting it; or when to the lute
 She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
 That still records with moan; or when
 She would with rich and constant pen
 Vail to her mistress Dian; still
 This Philoten contends in skill
 With absolute Marina; so
 With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vis feathers white. Marina gets
 All praises, which are paid as debts,
 And not as given. This so darks
 In Philoten all graceful marks,
 That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
 A present murderer does prepare
 For good Marina, that her daughter
 Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
 The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
 Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
 And curs'd Dionysa hath
 The pregnant instrument of wrath
 Frest for this blow. The unborn event
 I do commend to your content:
 Only I carry winged time
 Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
 Which never could I so convey,
 Unless your thoughts went on my way.—
 Dionysa does appear,
 With Leonine, a murderer.

[Exit.

SCENE I.

Tharsus. An open place near the sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do it:
 but a blow, which never shall be known,
 canst not do a thing i'th' world so soon, yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience, which is but cold, inflame love in thy bosom, come too nicely; nor let pity, which a woman have cast off, melt thee, but be soldier to thy purpose.
Leon. I'll do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.
Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here spring she comes for her old nurse's death.
 a art resolv'd?
Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, no, I will rob Tellus of her weed, strew thy green with flowers: the yellows, blues,
 purple violets, and marigolds,
 As, as a chaplet, hang upon thy grave,
 the summer days do last. Ah me! poor maid,
 in a tempest, when my mother died,
 a world to me is like a lasting storm,
 turning me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?
 How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have
 A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's chang'd
 With this unprofitable woe! Come, come;
 Give me your wretch of flowers, ere the sea mar it.
 Walk forth with Leonine; the air is quick there,
 Piercing, and sharpens well the stomach. Come,— Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
 I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;
 I love the king your father, and yourself,
 With more than foreign heart. We every day
 Expect him here: when he shall come, and find
 Our paragon to all reports, thus blasted,
 He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
 Blame both my lord and me, that we have ta'en
 No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you,
 Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
 That excellent complexion, which did steal
 The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
 I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
 But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.
 Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least;
 Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.
Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while;
 Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood:
 What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—
 [Exit Dionysa.]

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.
Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?
Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
 But cry'd, good seamen, to the sailors, galling
 His kingly hands with hauling of the ropes;
 And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
 That almost burst the deck, and from the ladder-tackle
 Wash'd off a canvas-climber: Ha! says one,
Will out! and, with a dropping industry,
 They skip from stem to stern: the boatwain whistles,
 The master calls, and trembles their confusion.

Leon. And when was this?
Mar. It was, when I was born:
 Never was waves nor wind more violent.

Leon. Come, say your prayers speedily.
Mar. What mean you?
Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
 I grant it: Pray; but be not tedious,
 For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
 To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?
Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
 Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
 I never did her hurt in all my life;
 I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
 To any living creature: believe me, la,
 I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:
 I trod upon a worm against my will,
 But I wept for it. How have I offended,
 Wherein my death might yield her profit, or
 My life imply her danger?

Leon. My commission
 Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.
 You are well-favour'd, and your looks foreshow
 You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
 When you caught hurt in parting two that fought:
 Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now:
 Your lady seeks my life; come you between,
 And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
 And will despatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst Marina is struggling.
 1 Pirate. Hold, villain! [Leonine runs away.]

2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!
3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with Marina.]

SCENE II.

The same.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;
And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,
And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see further;
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd, must by me be slain.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.

Mitylene. A room in a brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pandar. Boul't.
Boul't. Sir.
Pandar. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.
Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and with continual action are even as good as rotten.
Pandar. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.
Bawd. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought up some eleven—Boul't. Ay, to eleven, and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?
Bawd. What else, man! The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.
Pandar. Thou say'st true; they're too unwholesome o' conscience. The poor Transilvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.
Boul't. Ay, she quickly poop'd him; she made him roast-meat for worms:—but I'll go search the market.
Pandar. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.
Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you! is it a shame to get when we are old?
Pandar. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods, will be strong with us for giving over.
Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.
Pandar. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade;—it's no calling;—but here comes Boul't.

Enter the Pirates, and BOULT dragging in MARINA.

Boul't. Come your ways. [To Marina.]—My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O sir, we doubt it not.

Boul't. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul't, has she any qualities?

Boul't. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul't?

Boul't. I cannot be hated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pandar. Well, follow me, my masters; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.]

Bawd. Boul't, take you the marks of her; the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, warrant of her virginity; and cry, He that will have most, shall have her first. Such a maidenhead is no cheap thing, if men were as they have.

Get this done as I command you.

Bawd. Performance shall follow. [Exit B.]

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so! (He should have struck, not spoke;) or that pirates,

(Not enough barbarous,) had not overboard

Thrown me, to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their

you.
Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault,

To 'scape his hands, where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste of men of all fashions. You shall fare well; you all have the difference of all complexions. Why do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, as I a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosing! I think I have something to do with you. Come, you young foolish sapling, and must be bowen would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up.—Boul't's return'd.

Enter BOULT.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow his best ruff on.

SCENE IV.

Tharsus. A room in Cleon's house.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

n. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?
O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter an and moon ne'er look'd upon!
s. I think
I turn a child again.
Were I chief lord of all the spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady, less in blood than virtue, yet a princess and any single crown o' the earth, justice of compare! O villain Leonine, in thou hast poison'd too!
n hadst drunk to him, it had been a kindness

o noble Pericles shall demand his child?
s. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates, died by night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?

s you play the impious innocent,
or an honest attribute, cry out,
led by foul play.

s. O, go to. Well, well,
I the faults beneath the heavens, the gods be this worst.

s. Be one of those, that think pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence, open this to Pericles. I do shame link of what a noble strain you are,
of how cow'd a spirit.

To such proceeding
ever but his approbation added, gh not his pre-consent, he did not flow honourable courses.

Be it so then:
one does know, but you, how she came dead,
none can know, Leonine being gone.
did disdain my child, and stood between and her fortunes: None would look on her, ast their gazes on Marina's face;
st ears was blurted at, and held a malkin, worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;
though you call my course unnatural, set your child well loving, yet I find,
ness me, as an enterprise of kindness,
rmd'd to your sole daughter.

Heavens forgive it!
s. And as for Pericles,
t should he say? We wept after her hearse, even yet we mourn: her monument
most finish'd, and her epitaphs littering golden characters express veral praise to her, and care in us hese expence 'tis done.

Thou art like the harpy,
th, to betray, doth wear an angel's face,
with an eagle's talons.

s. You are like one, that superstitiously swear to the gods, that superstitiously ret I know you'll do as I advise. [Exit.

GOWER, before the monument of Marina at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
hail seas in cockles, have, and wish but for't;
faking, (to take your imagination,) from bourn to bourn, region to region.

By you being pardon'd, we oommit no crime
To use one language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you,
To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
(Attended on by many a lord and knight,)
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late,
Advac'd in time to high and great estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have brought

This king to Tharsus, (think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,)
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like moats and shadows see them move a while;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

Enter at one door, PERICLES with his Train;
CLEON and DIONYZA, at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the tomb of Marina; whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then Cleon and Dionyza retire.

Gow. See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears
o'ershow'r'd,

Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs;
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He hears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.

The fairest, sweet'st, and best, lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year.
She was of Tyrus, the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter:
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the earth:
Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd,
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:
Wherefore she does (and swears she'll never stint,)
Make raging battery upon shores of fint.

No visor does become black villainy,
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By lady fortune; while our scenes display
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,
In her unholy service. Patience then,
And think you now are all in Mitylen. [Exit.

SCENE V.

Mitylene. A street before the brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being oocce gone.
1 Gent. But to have divinity preach'd there! did you ever dream of such a thing?
2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdyhouses: Shall we go hear the vestals sing?
1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous;
but I am out of the road of rutting, for ever. [Exit.

SCENE VI.

The same. A room in the brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her; she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation.
We must either get her ravish'd, or be rid of her.
When she should do for clients her fitment, and do the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Bault. 'Faith I must ravish her, or she'll dis-furnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Baud. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lysimachus, disguis'd.

Bault. We should have both lord and low, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now? How a dozen of virginities?

Baud. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Bault. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity? Have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Baud. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Baud. Your honour knows what 'tis to say, well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Bault. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, pr'ythee?

Bault. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter MARINA.

Baud. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never pluck'd yet, I can assure you. Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. 'Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you;—leave us.

Baud. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Baud. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man. [To Marina, whom she takes aside.]

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Baud. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he governs the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Baud. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Baud. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.

[Exeunt Baud, Pandar, and Bault.]

Lys. Go thy ways.—Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. What I cannot name but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offeended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in, proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that set and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have something of my power, and so stand aloof serious wooing. But I protest to thee, prevent my authority shall not see thee, or else, look upon thee. Come, bring me to some private house.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it; if put upon you, make the judgment good. That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more sage.

Mar. For me, That am a maid, though most ungentele forth; Hath plac'd me here within this loathsome court. Where, since I came, diseases have been so dearer than physick,—O that the good gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place! Though they did change me to the meanest That flies i'the purer air!

Lys. I did not think Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er didst thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee. Persever still in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you the same. That I came with no ill intent; for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely.

Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble. Hold; here's more gold for thee.—

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou from me, It shall be for thy good.

[As Lysimachus is putting up his purse, enters.]

Bault. I beseech your honour, one piece for you. Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper!

house, But for this virgin that doth prop it up, Would sink, and overwhelm you all. Away!

[Exit Lysimachus.]
Bault. How's this? We must take another with you. If your peevish chastity, which worth a breakfast in the cheapest country the cope, shall undo a whole household, let gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Bault. I must have your maidenhead take or the common hangman shall execute it, your way. We'll have no more gentlemen away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Baud.

Baud. How now! what's the matter?
Bault. Worse and worse, mistress; she has spoken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Baud. O abominable!
Bault. She makes our profession as it were stink afore the face of the gods.

Baud. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Bault. The nobleman would have dealt with like a nobleman, and she sent him away as a snow-ball; saying his prayers too.

Baud. Bault, take her away; use her pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, make the rest malleable.

Bault. An if she were a thornier piece of gold than she is, she shall be plough'd.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Baud. She conjures away with her. She had never come within my doors! Marry you! She's born to undo us. Will you not way of women-kind? Marry come up, my chastity with rosemary and bays!

[Exit Bault.]

Bault. Come, mistress; come your way with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Bault. To take from you the jewel you have dear.

Mar. Pr'ythee, tell me one thing first.

Bault. Come now, your one thing.

v. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?
 ult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, ther, my mistress.
 v. Neither of these are yet so bad as thou art,
 they do better thee in their command.
 ult. I had 'st a place, for which the pained 'st fiend all would not in reputation change:
 't the damn'd door-keeper to every coystrel hither comes enquiring for his tib;
 's choleric fisting of each rogue thy ear ble; thy very food is such
 'th been helch'd on by infected lungs.
 ult. What would you have me do? go to the would you? where a man may serve seven for the loss of a leg, and have not money in the end to buy him a wooden one?
 v. Do any thing but this thou doest. Empty receptacles, common sewers, of filth;
 ' by indenture to the common hangman;
 of these ways are better yet than this:
 hat which thou professes, a baboon,
 't he but speak, would own a name too dear.

O that the gods would safely from this place
 Deliver me! Here, here is gold for thee.
 If that thy master would gain aught by me,
 Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,
 With other virtues, which I'll keep from hoast;
 And I will undertake all these to teach.
 I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?
 Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,
 And prostitute me to the basest groom
 That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee;
 if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brotbel 'scapes, and chances into an honest house, our story says.
 she sings like one immortal, and she dances
 as goddess-like to her admired lays:
 Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her need composes
 Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry;
 That even her art sisters the natural roses;
 Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry;
 That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
 Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain
 the gives the curs'd bawd. Here we her place;
 and to her father turn our thoughts again,
 Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost:
 Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast
 suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd to Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship spies,
 His hammers sable, trimm'd with rich expence;
 and to him in his barge with fervour hies.
 't he your supposing once more put your sight;
 't heavy Pericles think this the bark:
 Where, what is done in action, more, if might,
 't shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark.
 [Exit.]

SCENE I.

Pericles' ship, off Mitylene. A close pa-on a deck, with a curtain before it; Pericles kin it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying be-the Tyrian vessel.

two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel,
 other to the barge; to them HELICANUS.

v. Sail. Where's the lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. [To the Sailor of Mitylene.]
 he is.

There's a barge put off from Mitylene,
 in it is Lysimachus the governor,
 't craves to come aboard. What is your will?

l. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

v. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two Gentlemen.

l. Gent. Doth your lordship call?

l. Gentlemen,

there is some of worth would come aboard; I pray you,
 meet them fairly.

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.]

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS, and Lords;
 the Tyrian Gentlemen, and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,

This is the man that can, in aught you would,
 Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
 And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.
 Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
 Seeing this godly vessel ride before us,
 I made it to, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, sir, what is your place?

Lys. I am governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
 A man, who for this three months hath not spoken
 To any one, nor taken sustenance,
 But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. Sir, it would be too tedious to repeat;

But the main grief of all springs from the loss
 Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?

Hel.

You may indeed, sir,
 But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
 To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him, sir: [Pericles discovered.] this was a goodly person,

Till the disaster, that, one mortal night,
 Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir, king, all hail! the gods preserve you! Hail,
 Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

l. Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,

Would win some words of him.

Lys.

'Tis well bethought.

She, questionless, with her sweet harmony

And other choice attractions, would allure,

And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,

Which now are midway stopp'd:

She, all as happy as of all the fairest,

Is, with her fellow maidens, now within

The leafy shelter that abuts against
 The island's side.

[He whispers one of the attendant Lords.]

Exit Lord, in the barge of Lysimachus.

Hel. Sure all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit

That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you further,

That for our gold we may provision have,

Wherein we are not destitute for want,

But weary for the staleness.

Lys.

O, sir, a courtesy,

Which if we should deny, the most just God

For every graff would send a caterpillar,

And so inflict our province.—Yet once more

Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it;—
But see, I am prevented.

Enter, from the barge, Lord, MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. A gallant lady.
Lys. She's such, that were I well assur'd she came
Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous-artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physick shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous! [Marina sings.]

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Lys. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lead ear:—

Per. Hum! ha!
Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on comet-like: she speaks
My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings:
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and aukward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers mine ear, Go not till he speak.

[Aside.]
Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so.
I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—
You are like something that—What country-woman?
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores:
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square
brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly: in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech.—Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe?

Mar. Should I tell my history,
'Twould seem like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Pr'ythee speak;
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st
Modest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in: I'll believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation,
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st
Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back,
(Which was when I perceiv'd thee,) that thou cam'st
From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st

Thou hadst been tосe'd from wrong to injure
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal
If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing indeed
I said, and said no more but what my thought
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost loo

Like Patience, gazing on kings' graves, and Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind Recount, I do beseech thee; come, sit by me.
Mar. My name, sir, is Marina.

Per. O, I am t
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, g
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient;
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle m
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name Marina,
Was given me by one that had some power
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's da

I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blo

And wherefore call'd Marina?
Mar. Call'd Marina
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea? thy mothe

As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft

Per. O, stop there a little!
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull slee
Did mock sad fools withal; this cannot be.
My daughter's buried. [Aside.] Well—were you bred?

Mar. The king, my father, did in Tharsule
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn,
A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, now good Whither will you have me? Why do you

It may be,
You think me an impostor; no, good faith,
I am the daughter to king Pericles,
If good king Pericles be!

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my gracios

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsel
Most wise in general: Tell me, if thou can
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep!

Hel. I know n
Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd si
Give me a gash, put me to present pain;
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O, come
Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Thar
And found at sea again!—O Helicanus,

n on thy knees, thank the holy gods, as loud under threatens us: This is Marina.— it was thy mother's name? tell me but that, truth can never be confirm'd enough,
 if doubts did ever sleep.

sr. First, sir, I pray,
 it is your title?

r. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now in the rest thou hast been godlike perfect, crown'd queen's name, thou art the heir of kingdoms,

another life to Pericles thy father.
sr. Is it no more to be your daughter, than ay, my mother's name was Thaisa?
 is was my mother, who did end, minute I began.

r. Now, blessing on thee, rise; thou art my child.

cl. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
 o, hearing of your melancholy state,
 come to see you.

sr. I embrace you, sir.
 e me my robes; I am wild in my beholding.
 avens bless my girl! But hark, what musick?—
 Helicanus, my Marina, tell him point by point, for yet he seems to doubt, sure you are my daughter.—But what musick?
cl. My lord, I hear none.

sr. None?
 musick of the spheres: list, my Marina.
rs. It is not good to cross him; give him way.
r. Rarest sounds!
 ye not hear?

rs. Musick? My lord, I hear—
sr. Most heavenly musick:
 lips me into list'ning, and thick slumber ops on mine eye-lids; let me rest. [He sleeps.]
rs. A pillow for his head;

[The curtain before the pavilion of Pericles is closed.] leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends, his but answer to my just belief,
 well remember you.

[Exeunt Lis. Hel. Mor. and attendant Lady.]

SCENE II.

The same.

PERICLES on the deck asleep; DIANA appearing to him as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; hie thee
 thither,
 d do upon mine altar sacrifice.
 ere, when my maiden priests are met together,
 ve the people all,
 veal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:
 mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call,
 d give them repetition to the life.
 orform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe:
 't, and be happy, by my silver bow.
 vake, and tell thy dream. [Diana disappears.]
Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine, will obey thee!—Helicanus!

Enter LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir,
Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike se inhospitable Cleon; but I am or other service first: toward Ephesus ran our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why.—
 [To Helicanus.]

all we refresh us, sir, upon your shore, nd give you gold for such provision s our intents will need?

Lys. With all my heart, sir; and when you come ashore,
 have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail, veze it to woo my daughter; for it seems on have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend your arm.
Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER, before the temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;
 More a little, and then done.

This, as my last boon, give me,
 (For such kindness must relieve me,)
 That you aply will suppose
 What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
 What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
 The regent made in Mitylin,
 To greet the king. So he has thriv'd,
 That he is promis'd to be wiv'd
 To fair Marina; but in no wise,
 'Till he had done his sacrifice,
 As Dian bade: whereto being bound,
 The interim, pray you, all confound.
 In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
 And wishes fall out as they're will'd.
 At Ephesus, the temple see,
 Our king, and all his company,
 That he can hither come so soon,
 Is by your fancy's thankful boon. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The temple of Diana at Ephesus; THAISA standing near the altar, as High Priestess; a number of Vir-gins on each side; CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMA-CHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail Dian! to perform thy just command,
 I here confess myself the king of Tyre;
 Who, frighted from my country, did wed
 The fair Thaisa, at Pentapolis.
 At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
 A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess,
 Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus
 Was nurs'd with Cleon; whom at fourteen years
 He sought to murder: but her better stars
 Brought her to Mitylene; against whose shore
 Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,
 Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour!—
 You are, you are—O royal Pericles!— [She faints.]
Per. What means the woman? she dies! help, gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir,
 If you have told Diana's altar true,
 This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no;
 I threw her o'erboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady;—O, she's but o'erjoy'd.
 Early, one blin'string morn, this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin, and Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd
 her

Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,
 Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is Recover'd.

Thai. O, let me look!

If he be none of mine, my sanctity
 Will to my sense head no licentious ear,
 But curb it, spite of seecing. O, my lord,
 Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak,
 Like him you are: Did you not name a temple,
 A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead,
 And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.—
 When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
 The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.]
Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness

Makes my past miseries sport: You shall do well,
 That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O come, be buried

A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to Thaisa.]

Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,
For she was yielded there.

Thai. Bless'd, and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I left behind an ancient substitute.

Can you remember what I call'd the man?

I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Helicanus thea.

Per. Still confirmation;

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found;
How possibly preserv'd; and whom to thank,
Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man,
Through whom the gods have shown their power;
that can

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,

The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord.

Beseech you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her;
How she came placed here within the temple;
No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Diana!

I bless thee for thy vision, and will offer

My night oblations to thee. Thaisa,

This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,

Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament that makes me look so dismal,
Will I, my lov'd Marina, clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit,
Sir, that my father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet thine,
my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days;

Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,

To hear the rest untold.—Sir, lead the way.

[Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER.

Gow. In Antioch, and his daughter, you here heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward;

In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen

(Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,

Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,

Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.

In Helicanus may you well descry

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:

In reverend Cerimon there well appears,

The worth that learned charity eye wears.

For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame

Had spread their oraed deed, and honour'd

name

Of Pericles, to rage the city turu;

That him and his they in his palace burn.

The gods for murder seemed so content

To punish them; although not done, but meant.

So, on your patience evermore attending,

New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

A room of state in King Lear's palace.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weigh'd, that curiosity in neither can make choice of other's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-wombed; and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some years older than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again:—The king is coming.

[Trumpets sound within.]

Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloster and Edmund.]

Lear. Mean-time we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have divided,

In three, our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age; Conferring them on younger strengths, while we

Unburden'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy, Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn, And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my daughters, (Since now we will devest us, both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state,) Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most? That we our largest bounty may extend Where merit doth most challenge it.—Goneril, Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I

Do love you more than words can wield the matter, Dearer than eye-sight, space and liberty; Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare; No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour: As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found. A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable; Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd, With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads, We make thee lady: To thine and Albany's issue Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter, Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart I find, she names my very deed of love; Only she comes too short,—that I profess Myself an enemy to all other joys, Which the most precious square of sense possesses; And find, I am alone felicitate In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia! [Aside.]

And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's

More richer than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever, Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom; No less in space, validity, and pleasure, Than that confirm'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy, Although the last, not least; to whose young love The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy, Strive to be interest'd; what can you say, to draw A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing!

Cor. Nothing.
Lear. Nothing can come of nothing : speak again.
Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
 My heart into my mouth : I love your majesty
 According to my bond ; nor more, nor less.
Lear. How, how, Cordelia ? mend your speech a little,
 Lest it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,
 You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me : I
 Return those duties back as are right fit,
 Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
 Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,
 They love you, all ? Haply, when I shall wed,
 That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
 Half my love with him, half my care, and duty :
 Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
 To love my father all.

Lear. But goes this with thy heart ?
Cor. Ay, good my lord.
Lear. So young, and so untender ?
Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so.—Thy truth then be thy dower :
 For, by the sacred radiance of the sun ;
 The mysteries of Hecate, and the night ;
 By all the operations of the orbs,
 From whom we do exist, and cease to be ;
 Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
 Propinquity and property of blood,
 And as a stranger to my heart and me
 Hold thee, from this, for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation messes
 To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
 Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
 As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,— Lear. Pesce, Kent !

Come not between the dragon and his wrath :
 I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
 On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight !—
 [To Cordelia.]

So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her !—Call France ;—Who stirs ?

Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany,
 With my two daughters' dowers digest this third :
 Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
 I do invest you jointly with my power,
 Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
 That troop with majesty.—Ourself, by monthly
 course,

With reservation of an hundred knights,
 By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
 Make with you by due turns. Only we still retain
 The name, and all the additions to a king ;
 The sway,

Revenue, execution of the rest,
 Beloved sons, be yours : which to confirm,
 This coronet part between you. [Giving the crown.]

Kent. Royal Lear,
 Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
 Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
 As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
 The region of my heart : be Kent unmannerly,
 When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old
 man ?

Think'st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak,
 When power to flattery bows ? To plainness hon-our's bound,

When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom ;
 And, in thy best consideration, check
 This hideous rashness : answer my life my judgment,

Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least ;
 Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
 Reverbs no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
 To wage against thine enemies ; nor fear to lose it,
 Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight !

Kent. See better, Lear ; and let me still
 The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,—

Kent. Now, by Apollo,
 Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O, vassal ! misc-

Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throats

That monsters it, or your fore-voch'd affect

Could never plant in me.

r. I yet beseech your majesty, as I want that glib and oily art, speak and purpose not; since what I well intend, do't before I speak, that you make known no vicious blot, murder, or foulness, unchaste action, or dishonour'd step, hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour: even for want of that, for which I am richer; ill-soliciting-eye, and such a tongue I am glad I have not, though, not to have it, a lost me in your liking.

sr. Better thou art not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better.

uac. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature, which often leaves the history unspoke, it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy, it say you to the lady! Love is not love, as it is mingled with respects, that stand off from the entire point. Will you have her? is herself a dowry.

r. Royal Lear, but that portion which yourself propos'd, here I take Cordelia by the hand, possess of Burgundy.

sr. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.
sr. I am sorry then, you have so lost a father, you must lose a husband.

r. Peace be with Burgundy! that respects of fortune are his love, all not be his wife.

uac. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;

choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd! and thy virtues here I seize upon: lawful, I take up what's cast away. O, gods! 'tis strange, that from their cold neglect love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance, seen of us, of ours, and our fair France: all the dukes of wat'rish Burgundy I buy this unpris'd precious maid of me.—them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind: I losest here, a better where to find.

sr. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine; for we do so such daughter, nor shall ever see face of hers again:—Therefore be gone, quit our grace, our love, our benison.—o, noble Burgundy.

Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloucester, and Attendants.

uac. Bid farewell to your sisters.
r. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes ella leaves you: I know you, what you are; like a sister, am most loath to call faults as they are nam'd. Use well our father: our professed bosoms I commit him: yet, alas! stood I within his grace, would prefer him to a better place. Well to you both.

w. Prescribe not us our duties.
g. Let your study to content your lord; who hath receiv'd your nature's alms.—You have obedience scanted, well are worth the want that you have wanted.
r. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides; discover faults, at last shame them derides.
sr. I may you prosper!

uac. Come, my fair Cordelia.
[Exeunt France and Cordelia.]

a. Sister, it is not a little I have to say, of most nearly appertains to us both. I think, rather will hence to-night.

g. That's most certain, and with you; next I wish us.

a. You see how full of changes his age is; the reason we have made of it hath not been little: always loved our sister most; and with what judgment he hath now cast her off, appears woefully.

g. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath but slenderly known himself.

a. The best and soundest of his time hath but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and eboleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: If our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i'th' heat.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A hall in the Earl of Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law My services are bound: Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom; and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base? When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base? Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take More composition and fierce quality, Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops, Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund, As to the legitimate: Fine word,—legitimate! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:—Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choler parted! And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his power! Confin'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad!—Edmund! How now? what news?
Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.]

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? What needed then that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.
Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your over-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find on idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar.—Humph.—Conspiracy!—Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue.—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in!—When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord: But I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain!—Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him:—Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom: I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses of the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond crack'd between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollownness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully:—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banish'd: his offence, honesty!—Strangers! strange! [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and traitors, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whore-master man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under ursa major; so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—

Enter EDGAR.

and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o'Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction read this other day, what should follow eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness betwixt the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolution of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces, maledictions against king and nobles; needful fidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of horts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you displeasure in him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty, forbear presence, till some little time hath qualified heat of his displeasure; which at this instant rageth in him, that with the mischief of your son it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a patient forbearance, till the speed of his rage be slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodgings, from whence I will fity bring you to hear my speak: Pray you, go; there's my key:—If you stir abroad, go arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best arm'd; I am no honest man, if there be any meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the end and horror of it: 'Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.— [Exit.]

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none; on whose foolish horn
My practices ride easy!—I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit.

SCENE III.

A room in the Duke of Albany's palace

Enter GONERIL and Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night! he wrongs me; even he flashes into one gross crime or other, that sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it! His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids every trifle:—When he returns from his wars, I will not speak with him; say, I am sick: If you come slack of former services, you shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. He's coming, madam; I hear him. [Horns.]

Gon. Put on that weary negligence you put on you and your fellows; I'd have it come to you: If he dislike it, let him to my sister, whose mind and mine, I know, in that are not to be over-ruled. Idle old man, that still would manage those authorities, that he hath given away!—Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again; and must be used with checks, as flatteries,—when they are abus'd.

Remember what I have said.

Stew. Very well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks than you;

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows: I would breed from hence occasions, and I will that I may speak:—I'll write straight to my brother, to hold my very course:—Prepare for dinner. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

A hall in the same.Enter KENT, disguised.

ent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
 I can my speech diffuse, my good intent
 I carry through itself to that full issue which I read my likeness.—Now, banish'd Kent,
 how canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
 may it come to thy master, whom thou lov'st,
 to find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

ear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go, get ready. [Exit on Attendant.] How now, what thou?

ent. A man, sir.

ear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou wish us?

ent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to eat, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

ear. What art thou?

ent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor the king.

ear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

ent. Service.ear. Who wouldst thou serve?ent. You.ear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

ent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

ear. What's that?ent. Authority.ear. What services canst thou do?

ent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, march merrily in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

ear. How old art thou?

ent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for a pig; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: save years on my back forty-eight.

ear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner!—Where's my knave? fool? Go you, and call my fool hither:

Enter Steward.

you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Stew. So please you,— ear. What says the fellow there? Call the poll back.—Where's my fool, ho?—I think the lord's asleep.—How now? where's that mongrel?

Stew. He says, my lord, your daughter is not here.

ear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I call'd him?

Stew. Sir, he answer'd me in the roundest manner, he would not.

ear. He would not!

Stew. My lord, I know not what the matter is; to my judgment, your highness is not enter'd with that ceremonious affection as you were at; there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the court himself also, and your daughter.

ear. Ha! say'st thou so?

Stew. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I am mistaken; for your duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness is wrong'd.

ear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own reputation; I have perceived a most faint neglect at me; which I have rather blamed as mine own curious curiosity, than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—Where's my fool? I have not seen him this many days.

Stew. Since my young lady's going into France, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter Steward.

O, you sir, you sir, come you hither: Who am I, sir?

Stew. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of this, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.]

Stew. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Lear. Nor tripp'd neither; you have foot-ball player.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Lear. Come, sir, arise, away; I'll teach you differences; away, away: If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away: go to; Have you wisdom? so. [Pushes the Steward out.]

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service. [Giving Kent money.]

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too;—Here's my coxcomb. [Giving Kent his cap.]

Lear. How now, my pretty knave? how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.Lear. Why, fool?

Fool. Why? For taking one's part that is out of favour: Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: There, take my coxcomb: Why, this fellow has banish'd two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, uncle? 'Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself: There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog that must to kennel; he must be whipp'd out, when Lady, the brach, may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.Lear. Do.Fool. Mark it, uncle:—

Have more than thou showest,
 Speak less than thou knowest,
 Lend less than thou owest,
 Ride more than thou goest,
 Learn more than thou trowest,
 Set less than thou throwest;
 Leave thy drink and thy whore,
 And keep in-a-door,
 And thou shalt have more
 Than two tens to a score.

Lear. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfeeling lawyer; you gave me nothing for't: Can you make no use of nothing, uncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool. [To Kent.]

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.Fool. That lord, that counsel'd thee

To give away thy land,
 Come place him here by me,—

Or do thou for him stand:
 The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;
 The one in motley here,

The other fond out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i'the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i'the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou bestest thine ass on thy back over the dirt: Thou had'st little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped, that first finds it so.

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year; [Singing.]
For wise men are grown foppish;
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.]
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. If you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipp'd.
Fool. I marvel, what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipp'd for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipp'd for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing in the middle: Here comes one o'the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter? what makes that frontlet on? Methinks, you are too much of late i'the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou had'st no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing.—Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face [To Gon.] bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum,

He that keeps nor crust nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some.—

That's a sheal'd peaced. [Pointing to Lear.]

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool,
But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir,
I had thought, by making this well known unto you,
To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,
By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep;
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you trow, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had its head bit off by its young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling:

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. Come, sir, I would you would make use of that good wisdom whereof I know you are fraught; and put away these dispositions, which of late transform you from what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me?—Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his dis-cernings are lethargied.—Sleeping or waking?—sure 'tis not so.—Who is it that can tell me what am I?—Lear's shadow? I would learn that; for the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason should be false persuaded I had daughters.—

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentleman?

Gon. Come, sir;

This admiration is much o'the favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright:
As you are old and reverend, you should be wiser.
Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires,
Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd, and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,
Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel,
Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth open
For instant remedy: Be then desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disquantity your train;
And the remainder, that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your age,
And know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!
Saddle my horses; call my train together.—
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee;
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—O, sir,
you come!
Is it your will? [To Alb.] Speak, sir.—Pray my horses.

Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a cell
Than the sea-monster!

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient

Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To Gon.]
My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know;
And in the most exact regard support
The worship of their name.—O most small fiend!
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of man
From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,

And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my people!
Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may not be so, my lord.—Hear, noble heart;

Dear goddess, hear! Suspend thy purpose, if Thou didst intend to make this creature fruitful
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away, away!

Alb. Now, gods, that we adore, whereof consist this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause:
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers, at a clap
Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee;—Life and death! I am a-sham'd

That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus

That these hot tears, which break from me per-

all make thee worth them.—Blasts and fogs upon thee!

untented woundings of a father's curse
ce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes, weep this cause again, I'll pluck you out;
I cast you, with the waters that you lose, temper clay.—Ha! is it come to this?
it be so:—Yet have I left a daughter,
o, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
as she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find,
'll resume the shape which thou dost think re cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.

[Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attendants.]

as. Do you mark that, my lord?
B. I cannot be so partial, Generil, the great love I bear you,—

as. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho!
sir, more knave than fool, after your master.
[To the Fool.]

M. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, and take fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;
So the fool follows after. [Exit.]

as. This man hath had good counsel:—A hundred knights!
politick, and safe, to let him keep point, a hundred knights. Yes, that on every dream,

huz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
may engnard his dotage with their powers, hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!—
B. Well, you may fear too far.

as. Safer than trust:
me still take away the harms I fear,
fear still to be taken. I know his heart:
at he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister;
to sustain him and his hundred knights,
as I have show'd the unfitness,—How now, Oswald?

Enter Steward.

at, have you writ that letter to my sister?

as. Ay, madam.
as. Take you some company, and away to horse:
rn her full of my particular fear;
thereto add such reasons of your own,
may compact it more. Get you gone;
hasten your return. [Exit Stew.] No, no,
my lord,

milky gentleness, and course of yours,
ugh I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
are much more attack'd for want of wisdom,
n prais'd for harmful mildness.

B. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell;
ving to better, oft we mar what's well.

as. Nay, then—
B. Well, well; the event. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

Court before the same.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters:
acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter:
If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.]

Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I pr'y'thee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly: for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, my boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell, why one's nose stands i'the middle of his face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep his eyes on either side his nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong:—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!
—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again, perforce!—Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old, before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!
Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that is maid now, and laughs at my departure,

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Court within the castle of the Earl of Gloster.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father;
given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall,
Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the s abroad; I mean the whisper'd ones, for they yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I; 'Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward,
at the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, sir.
[Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better!
Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business!
My father hath set guard to take my brother;
And I have one thing, of a queazy question,
Which I must act:—Briefness, and fortune, work!—
Brother, a word;—descend:—Brother, I say;

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches:—O sir, fly this place;
Intelligence is given where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night:—
Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall?
He's coming hither; now i'the night, i'the haste,
And Regan with him; Have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany?
Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming,—Pardon me:—

In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:— Draw: Seem to defend yourself: Now quit you
well.

Yield:—come before my father;—Light, ho, here!—
Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.—
[Exit Edgar.]

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion
[Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards
Do more than this in sport.—Father! father!
Stop, stop! No help!

Enter GLOSTER, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword
out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand his auspicious mistress:—

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after.—[Exit Serv.]

By no means,—what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;

But that I told him, the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;
Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond,
The child was bound to the father;—Sir, in fine,
Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion,
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm:
But when he saw my best alarm'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far:

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;
And found—Despatch.—The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night:
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;
He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him: He replied,
Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,
(As this I would; ay, though thou didst produce Aly very character,) I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.

Glo. Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter?—I never got him.

[Trumpets within.]

Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes:—

All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape;
The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural hoy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither,
(Which I can call but now,) I have heard strange
news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!
Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life?
He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?

Glo. O, lady, lady, shame would have it hid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous
knights,

That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam.

It is too bad, too bad.—

Edm. Yes, madam, he
Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill affe-
'Tis they have put him on the old man's seat
To have the waste and spoil of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such caution
That, if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your face
A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice; and receiv-
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. Ay, my good lord,

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own pur-
How in my strength you please.—For you, Edm.,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours;
Natures of such deep trust we shall much ne-
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank you.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit y-
Reg. Thus out of season; threading dark-
night.

Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poize,
Wherein we must have use of your advice:—
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several mess-
From hence attend despatch. Our good old f-
Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,
Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, ma-
Your graces are right welcome. [R.]

SCENE II.

Before Gloster's castle.

Enter KENT and Steward, severally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend: Art house?

Kent. Ay.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I'll mire.

Stew. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave; a rascal, an eater of broken a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited dred-pound, filthy worsted-stocking knave; a liver'd, action-taking knave; a whorson, gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; oneinheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bar-way of good service, and art nothing but the position of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one who will beat into clamorous whining, if thou the least syllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou to rail on one, that is neither known of nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou deny thou know'st me? Is it two days ago,
I tripp'd up thy heels, and beat thee, before king? Draw, you rogue: for, though it be the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moon of you; Draw, you whorson cullionly barber-m-draw. [Drawing his sword.]

Stew. Away; I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with against the king; and take vanity the pu-against the royalty of her father: Draw, you e, or I'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, rascal; come your ways.

sw. Help, ho! murder! help!

mf. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand;
neat slave, strike. [Beating him.]

sw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

ster EDMUND, CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

lm. How now? What's the matter? Part.

mf. With you, Goodman boy, if you please;
I'll flesh you; come on, young master.

o. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?

vn. Keep peace, upon your lives;

dies, that strikes again: What is the matter?

g. The messengers from our sister and the king.

rn. What is your difference? speak.

mf. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

mf. No marvel, you have so bestir'd your
ur. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in ; a tailor made thee.

rn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make m?

mf. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter, or a ter, could not have made him so ill, though had been but two hours at the trade.

vn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

sw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd,

ait of his grey beard,—

mf. Thou whorson zed! thou unnecessary letter!
y lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you
all!

vn. Peace, sirrah!

heavily knave, know you no reverence?

mf. Yes, sir; but anger has a privilege.

rn. Why art thou angry?

mf. That such a slave as this should wear a
sword,

wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

rats, oft bite the holy cords in twain ch are too intrinsic t' unloose: smooth every passion

in the natures of their lords rebels;
g oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;

age, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
every gale and vary of their masters, nowing nought, like dogs, but following.— ague upon your epileptick visage!

le you my speeches, as I were a fool?
se, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

vn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?
fo.

How fell you out?
that.

mf. No contraries hold more antipathy,
n I and such a knave.

vn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's his offence?

mf. His countenance likes me not.

vn. No more, perchance, does mine, or his, or hers.

mf. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain;
ve seen better faces in my time,
o stands on any shoulder that I see oe me at this instant.

vn. This is some fellow,
o, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect uey roughness; and constrains the garb, to from his nature: He cannot flatter, he!— honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth:
they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.

se kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness
baur more craft, and more corrupter ends,
a twenty silly ducking observants,
t stretch their duties nicely.

mf. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity, let the allowance of your grand aspect,
ose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire lickering Phœbus' front,—

vn. What mean'st by this?
mf. To go out of my dialect, which you dis-commend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer:

he that beguiled you in a plain accent, was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though
I should win your displeasure to entreat me to it.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?
Stew. Never any:

It pleas'd the king his master, very late,
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthy'd him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards,
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks, ho!
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,
We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;
On whose employment I was sent to you:

You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks?
As I've life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.
[Stocks brought out.]

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of:—Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for't: your purpos'd low correction
Is such, as basest and contemned'st wretches,
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he's so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—
[Kent is put in the stocks.]

Come, my good lord; away.
[Exeunt Regan and Cornwall.]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for thee.

Kent. 'Pray, do not, sir: I have watch'd, and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:
Give you good morrow!

Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be ill taken. [Exit.]

Kent. Good kings, that must approve the common saw!
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun!

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter!—Nothing almost sees miracles,
But misery;—I know, 'tis from Cordelia;
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time
From this enormous state,—seeking to give Losses their remedies:—All weary and o'erwath'd,
Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel! [He sleeps.]

SCENE III.

A part of the heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And, by the happy hollow of a tree,
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,

That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. While I may 'scape,
I will preserve myself: and am betought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth;
Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in knots;
And with presented nakedness out-face
The winds, and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,
Enforce their charity.—Poor Turlygood! poor Tom!
That's something yet;—Edgar I nothing am. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Before Gloster's castle.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange, that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. How!

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.
Fool. Ha, ha; look! he wears cruel garters!
Horses are tied by the heads; dogs, and bears, by the neck; monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he, that hath so much thy place mistook

To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,

Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do't;
They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place, that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Generil his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,
(Being the very fellow that of late Display'd so saucily against your highness,)
Having more man than wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries:
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers, that wear rags,
Do make their children blind;
But fathers, that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—

But for all this, thou shalt have as many dol for thy daughters, as thou canst tell in a year.
Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward
heart!

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow.
Thy element's below!—Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me.

Stay here.
Gent. Made you no more offence than what speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?
Fool. An thou hadst been set i'the stocks for question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to thee there's no labouring in the winter. All follow their noses are led by their eyes, but men; and there's not a nose among twenty can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy when a great wheel runs down a hill, leat it thy neck with following it; but the great one goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. Now a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me again: I would have none but knaves follow since a fool gives it.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain

And follows but for form,

Will pack, when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The knave turns fool, that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i'the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOSTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are they are weary?

They have travell'd hard to-night? Mere fe

The images of revolt and flying off!

Fetch me a better answer.

Glo.

My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremoveable and fix'd he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster

I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall, and his Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did eels, when she put them i'the paste alive:

yd'em o'the coxcombs with a stick, and cry'd, in, wantons, down: 'Twas her brother, that, in a kindness to his horse, butter'd his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

car. Good morrow to you both.

bra. Hail to your grace!
 [Kent is set at liberty.]

eg. I am glad to see your highness.
car. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason we to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad,
 could divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
 such r'ing an adulthood.—O, are you free?

[To Kent.]
 Is other time for that.—Beloved Regan, thy sister's naught: O Regan, she hath tied thy tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture here,—

[Points to his heart.]
 in scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe, how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!

eg. I pray you, sir, take patience; I have hope,
 I less know how to value her desert,
 in she to scant her duty.

car. Say, how is that?
eg. I cannot think, my sister in the least old fail her obligation: If, sir, perchance,
 I have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
 on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
 shears her from all blame.

car. My curses on her!

eg. O, sir, you are old;
 in you stands on the very verge thy confine: you should be rul'd, and led some discretion, that discerns your state more than you yourself: Therefore, I pray you, to our sister you do make return;
 if you have wrong'd her, sir.

car. Ask her forgiveness?
 thy daughter, I confess, that I am old;
 'tis unnecessary: on my knees I beg, [Kneeling.]
 if you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.

eg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:
 am you to my sister.

car. Never, Regan:
 hath abated me of half my train;
 I'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue,
 it serpent-like, upon the very heart—
 the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones, if taking airs, with lameness!

bra. Fie, fie, fie!
car. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
 on her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty, with fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
 fall and blast her pride!

eg. O the blest gods!
 will you wish on me, when the rash mood's on.

car. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse; tender-hefted nature shall not give a o'er to harshness; her eyes are fierce, but thine comfort, and not burn: 'Tis not in thee to grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train, bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
 I, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt against my coming in: thou better know'st
 the offices of nature, bond of childhood, ties of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
 and half o'the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
 wherein I thee endow'd.

eg. Good sir, to the purpose.
 [Trumpets within.]

car. Who put my man i'the stocks?
bra. What trumpet's that?

Enter Steward.

eg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter, it she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?
car. This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd pride fills in the sickle grace of her he follows:— a varlet, from my sight!

bra. What means your grace?
car. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope

Thou didst not know o't.—Who comes here? O
 heavens,

Enter GONERIL.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
 Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
 Make it your cause; send down, and take my part!
 Art not asham'd to look upon this beard?—

[To Goneril.]
 O, Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offend'd?

All's not offence, that indiscretion finds,
 And dotage terms so.

Lear. O, sides, you are too tough!
 Will you yet hold?—How came my man i'the stocks?
Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders
 Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
 If, till the expiration of your month,
 You will return and sojourn with my sister,
 Dismissing half your train, come then to me;
 I am now from home, and out of that provision
 Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?
 No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
 To wage against the enmity o'the air;
 To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
 Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her?

Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
 To keep base life afoot:—Return with her?
 Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
 To this detested groom. [Looking on the Steward.]

Gon. At your choice, sir.

Lear. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad;
 I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell:
 We'll no more meet, no more see one another:—
 But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;
 Or, rather, a disease that's in my flesh,
 Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
 A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
 In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;
 Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
 I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
 Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove:
 Mend, when thou canst; be better, at thy leisure:
 I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
 I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so, sir;
 I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
 For your fit welcome: Give ear, sir, to my sister;
 For those that mingle reason with your passion,
 Must be content to think you old, and so—
 But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken now?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: What, fifty followers?
 Is it not well? What should you need of more?
 Yes, or so many? sith that both charge and danger
 Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
 Should many people, under two commands,
 Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you,

We could control them: If you will come to me,
 (For now I spy a danger,) I entreat you
 To bring but five and twenty; to no more
 Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries;
 But kept a reservation to be follow'd

With such a number: What, must I come to you
 With five and twenty, Regan? said you so?

Reg. And speak it again, my lord; no more
 with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look wellfavour'd,

When others are more wicked; not being the worst,
 Stands in some rank of praise:—I'll go with thee;

[To Goneril.]

Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord;
What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?
Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's: thou art a lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm.—But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger!
O, let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you unnatural hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things,—
What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think, I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep:—
I have full cause of weeping; but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or ere I'll weep:—O, fool, I shall go mad!

[Exit Lear, Gloucester, Kent, and Fool.]
Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.
[Storm heard at a distance.]

Reg. This he
Is little; the old man and his people cannot
Be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; he hath
Himself from rest, and must needs taste his fall.
Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my lord of Gloucester?

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth:—he is turn'd.

Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he gone?
Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads self.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir, to wilful men,
The injuries, that they themselves procure,
Must be their schoolmasters: Shut up your door,
He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a
night;
My Regan counsels well: come out o'the storm.
[Exit.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A heath.

A storm is heard, with thunder and lightning.

Enter KENT, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?
Gent. One minded like the weather, most un-quietly.

Kent. I know you; Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curved waters 'bove the main,
That things might change, or cease: tears his white hair;

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?
Gent. None but the fool; who labours to outjest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my art,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover'd
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Thron'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less;
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes;
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but furnishings;—
But true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find

Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding;
And, from some knowledge and assurance, of
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, d
For confirmation that I am much more Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains: If you shall see Cordelia
(As fear not but you shall,) show her this ring
And she will tell you who your fellow is,
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm
I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand: Have you no to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than a That, when we have found the king, (in which pain
That way; I'll this); he, that first lights on Holla the other. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Another part of the heath. Storm continues.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks!
blow!

You cataracts, and hurricanes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd cocks!

You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunder-bolts, Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking der,

Strike flat the thick rotundity o'the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germs spill at
That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry is better than this rain-water out o'door.
nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters blessing;
a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyfull! Spit, fire!
rain!

Not rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daugh-
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness

er gave you kingdom, call'd you children, owe me no subscription; then let fall
horrible pleasure: here I stand, your slave, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man:—
yet I call you servile ministers, have with two pernicious daughters join'd high-engender'd battles, 'gainst a head and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!
He that has a house to put his head in,
good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house,
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall louse;—
So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry woe,
And turn his sleep to wake.

there was never yet fair woman, but she mouths in a glass.

Enter KENT.

7. No, I will be the pattern of all patience, I say nothing.

8. Who's there?

9. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece; that's a man, and a fool.

10. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love
night,

not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
w the very wanderers of the dark,
make them keep their caves: Since I was man, sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder, groans of roaring wind and rain, I never ember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry affliction, nor the fear.

11. Let the great gods,
keep this dreadful power o'er our heads,
out their enemies noth. Tremble, thou wretch, bust within thee undrugged crimes,
upp'd of justice: Hide thee, thou bloody hand;
perjur'd, and thou simular man of virtue art incestuous: Caitiff, to pieces shake, under covert and convenient seeming practis'd on man's life!—Close pent-up guilts, your concealing continents, and cry dreadful summoners grace.—I am a man, sinn'd against, than sinning.

12. Alack, bare-headed!
ous my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;
see you there: while I to this hard house,
hard than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd;
sh even but now, demanding after you,
d me to come in,) return, and force scanted courtesy.

13. My wits begin to turn.— on, my boy: How dost, my boy? Art cold?
old myself.—Where is this straw, my fellow?
at of our necessities is strange, can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel, fool and knave, I have one part in my heart s sorry yet for thee.

14. He that has a little tiny wit,—

With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—
Must make content with his fortunes fit;
For the rain it raineth every day.

15. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exeunt Lear and Kent.]

16. This is a brave night to cool a courtesan.
speak a prophecy ere I go:—

When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
To hereticks burn'd, but wenches' suitors:
When every case in law is right;
To squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cuppurses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i' the field;
And bawds and whores do churches build;—
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion.

Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A room in Gloucester's castle.

Enter GLOSTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their love that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor in any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that:
I have received a letter this night;—'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have lock'd the letter in my closet:
these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed; we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived:
If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threaten'd me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. [Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke instantly know; and of that letter too:—
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all:
The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

A part of the heath, with a hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; and good my lord,
enter:

The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Will break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own: Good my lord,
enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear:
But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea, Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free,

The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there.—Filiial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to't?—But I will punish home:—
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure:—
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.— Good my lord, enter here.

Kent. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease;

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:
In, boy; go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,—
Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.—
[Fool goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en Too little care of this! Take physick, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel;
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the hovel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit. Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i'th' straw?
Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.—Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch'd bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor!—Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold.—O, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: There could I have him now,—and there,—and there,—and there again, and there.

[Storm continues.]

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters! Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.—Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers Should have thus little mercy on their flesh? Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock's-hill;—Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o'the foul fiend: Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curl'd my hair; wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, outparamour'd the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women: Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says suum, mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy, sessa; let him trot by.

[Storm continues.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume:—Ha! here's three of us here sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings:—Come; unbutton here.—

[Tearing off his clothes.]

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; this naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a spark, all the rest of his body cold.—Look, comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock gives the web and the pin, squints the eye makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat hurts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Withold footed thrice the wold;

He met the night-mare, and her nine-fo-

Bid her alight,

And her troth plight,

And, aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER, with a torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the velt that in the fury of his heart, when the foul rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green man the standing pool; who is whipp'd from ty to tything, and stock'd, punish'd, and imprison who hath had three suits to his back, six sh his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear.

2. How, my lord, I may be censured, that thus gives way to loyalty, something fears think of.

3. I now perceive, it was not altogether your r's evil disposition made him seek his death; provoking merit, set a-work by a reproveable is in himself.

4. How malicious is my fortune, that I must be just! This is the letter he spoke of, approves him an intelligent party to the adges of France. O heavens! that this treason out, or not I the detector!

5. Go with me to the duchess.

6. If the matter of this paper be certain, you mighty business in hand.

7. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of r. Seek out where thy father is, that he may fy for our apprehension.

[Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will perin my course of loyalty, though the conflict between that and my blood.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Here is better than the open air; take it ally: I will piece out the comfort with what a I can: I will not be long from you.

9. All the power of his wits has given way to patience:—The gods reward your kindness! [Exit Gloucester.]

10. Frateretto calls me; and tells me, Nero is ler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, ware the foul fiend.

11. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a mad-e a gentleman, or a yeoman?

12. A king, a king!

13. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman son: for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his gentleman before him.

14. To have a thousand with red burning spits sizing in upon them:—

15. The foul fiend bites my back.

16. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's

17. It shall be done, I will arraign them straight:—

18. sit thou here, most learned justicer.— [To Edgar.]

19. sapient sir, sit here. [To the Fool.—Now, you she foxes!—

20. Look, where he stands and glares!—Wanest res at trial, madam!

21. Come o'er the boarn, Bessy, to me:—

22. Her boat hath a leak,
And she must not speak

23. Why she dares not come over to thee.

24. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's for two white herring. Croak not, black I have no food for thee.

25. How do you, sir? Stand you not scamaz'd: too lie down and rest upon the cushions?

26. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robed man of justice, take thy place:—

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To Edgar.] Bench by his side:—You are of the commission,
Sit you too. [To Kent.]

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shephér?d?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy miokin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is gray.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Generil. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kick'd the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Generil?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her there! Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place! False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much, They'll mar my counterfeiting. [Aside.]

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them:—Avaunt, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, grey-hound, mongrel grim,

Hound, or spaniel, brach, or lym;

Or hobtail tike, or trundle-tail;

Tom will make them weep and wail;

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de de. Sessa. Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market towns:—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature, that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred: only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed. [To Edgar.]

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest a while.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: So, so, so: We'll go to supper i'th morning: So, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend: Where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I pr'ythee take him in thy arms; I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him:

There is a litter ready; lay him in't,

And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: If thou shouldst daily half an hour, his life,

With thine, and all that offer to defend him,

Stand in assured loss: Take up, take up;

And follow me, that will to some provision

Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:—

This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses, Which, if convenience will not allow,

Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master;

Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.]

Glo. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt Kent, Gloucester, and the Fool, bearing off the King.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.

Who alone suffers, suffers most i' the mind ;
Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind ;
But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that, which makes me bend, makes the king
bow ;

He childed, as I father'd !—Tom, away :
Mark the high noises ; and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles
thee,

In thy just proof, repeals, and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king !
Lurk, lurk. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.

A room in Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL,
EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband ; show him this letter :—the army of France is landed :—Seek out the villain Gloucester.

[Exit some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.—Edmund, keep you our sister company ; the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation ; we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister ;— farewell, my lord of Gloucester.

Enter Steward.

How now ? Where's the king ?

Stew. My lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence :
Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate ;
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,
Are gone with him towards Dover ; where they boast
To have well-arm'd friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—Go, seek the traitor Gloucester.

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us :

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice ; yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who's there ? The traitor ?

Re-enter Servants, with GLOSTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox ! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What mean your graces ?—Good my friends, consider

You are my guests ; do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard :—O filthy traitor !

To pluck me by the beard.

Will quicken, and accuse thee ; I am your host ;

With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours

You should not ruffie thus. What will you do ?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France ?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The heath.

Enter EDGAR.

g. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
I still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst, lowest, and most dejected thing of fortune,
as still in esperance, lives not in fear:
lamentable change is from the best;
worst returns to laughter. Welcome then, unsubstantial air, that I embrace!
wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst,
nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes here?—

Enter GLOSTER, led by an Old Mad.

o. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone:
comforts can do me no good at all,
they may hurt.

d Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.
I have no way, and therefore want no eyes;
unbled when I saw: Full oft 'tis seen, mean secures us; and our mere defects
our commodities.—Ah, dear son Edgar, food of thy abused father's wrath!

it I but live to see thee in my touch,
say, I had eyes again!

d Man. How now? Who's there?

g. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, I am at the worst?

worse than e'er I was.

d Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

g. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: The worst is not,

ing as we can say, This is the worst.

d Man. Fellow, where goest?

g. Is it a beggar-man?

d Man. Madman and beggar too.

o. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

last night's storm I such a fellow saw;

master!

o. Is that the naked fellow?

d Man. Ay, my lord.

o. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: If, for my sake,

a wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,

way to Dover, do it for ancient love;

bring some covering for this naked soul,
om I'll entreat to lead me.

d Man. Alack, sir, he's mad.

the blind:

as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;

we the rest, be gone.

Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibber- tigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see

Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;
So distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined deep;

Bring me hut to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,

With something rich about me: from that place
I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm;
Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

*Before the Duke of Albany's palace.*Enter GONERIL and EDMUND; Steward meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild
husband

Not met us on the way:—Now, where's your master?

Stew. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd:
I told him of the army that was landed;

He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;
His answer was, The worse: of Gloster's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot;

And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side out:—
What most he should dislike, seems pleasant to him;

What like, offensive.

Gon. Then shall you go no further.
[To Edmund.

It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs,
Which tie him to an answer: Our wishes, on the way,

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;

Hasten his musters, and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,

A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech; [Giving a favour.

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air;—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster!
[Exit Edmund.

O, the difference of man, and man! To thee
A woman's services are due; my fool

Usurps my bed.

Stew. Madam, here comes my lord.
[Exit Steward.

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face.—I fear your disposition:

That nature, which contemns its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;

She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Filth's savour but themselves. What have you done?

Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
 A father, and a gracious aged man,
 Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
 Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madd'd.
 Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
 A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
 If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
 Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
 'Twill come,
 Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
 Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
 That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
 Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
 Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,
 Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless land;
 With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
 Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and cry'st,
 Attack! why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, devil!
 Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
 So horrid, as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!
 Alb. Thou chang'd and self-cover'd thing, for shame,

Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
 To let these hands obey my blood,
 They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
 Thy flesh and bones.—How'er thou art a fiend,
 A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord, the duke of Cornwall's
 dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
 The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
 Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
 To his great master; who, threath enrag'd,
 Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead:
 But not without that harmful stroke, which since Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
 You justicers, that these our nether crimes
 So speedily can vengeance!—But, O poor Gloucester!
 Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.—
 This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
 'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
 But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
 May all the building in my fancy pluck
 Upon my hateful life: Another way,
 The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;

And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment

Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live
 To thank thee for the love thou show'st the king,
 And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend;
 Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The French camp, near Dover.

Enter KENT, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
 Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,

That his personal return was most requir'd,
 And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general
Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
 Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
 Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
 Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd
Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow:
 Who should express her goodliest. You have Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
 Were like a better day: Those happy smiles
 That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
 What guests were in her eyes; which parted th'

 The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
 And clamour moisten'd: then away she star-
 To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
 The stars above us, govern our conditions;
 Else one self mate and mate could not beget
 Such different issues. You spoke not with her?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No.

Kent. Well, sir; The poor distress'd I i't the town:

Who sometime, in his better tune, remember
 What we are come about, and by no means
 Will yield to see his daughter.

Kent. Why, good

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn
 To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
 To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things
 His mind so venomously, that burning shame
 Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentl

But are my brother's powers set forth?

 Madam, with much ado:
 sister is the better soldier.
 Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at

 No, madam.
 What might import my sister's letter to him?
 I know not, lady.
 Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
 s great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out,

 I must needs avert him, madam, with my letter.
 Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us;

 Why should she write to Edmund? Might

Madam, I had rather—
 I know, your lady does not love her husband;
 sure of that: and, at her late being here, ave strange oillads, and most speaking looks ble Edmund; I know, you are of her bosom.
 I, madam!

I speak in understanding; you are, I know it:
 fore, I do advise you, take this note:
 ord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd;
 more convenient is he for my hand,
 for your lady's:—You may gather more.
 u do find him, pray you, give him this;
 when your mistress hears thus much from you,
 y, desire her call her wisdom to her.
 are you well.

u do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
 rment falls on him that cuts him off.
 'Would I could meet him, madam! I would show
 a party I do follow.

Fare thee well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

The country near Dover.

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR, dressed like a peasant.

When shall we come to the top of that same hill?

You do climb up it now: look, how we labour.

Methinks, the ground is even.

Horrible steep:
 do you hear the sea?

No, truly.
 Why, then your other senses grow imperfect your eyes' anguish.

Glo. So may it be, indeed:
 Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
 In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. You are much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd,
 But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.
Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place:—stand still.—How fearful

And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
 The crows, and choughs, that wing the midway air,
 Show scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down
 Hangs one that gathers samphire; dreadful trade!
 Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head:
 The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
 Appear like mice; and yon' tall anchoring bark,
 Diminish'd to her cock; her cock, a buoy
 Almost too small for sight: The murmuring surge,
 That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
 Cannot be heard so high:—I'll look no more;
 Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
 Topple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand: You are now within a foot

Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
 Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.
 Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel
 Well worth a poor man's taking: Fairies, and gods,
 Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;
 Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir. [Seems to go.]

Glo. With all my heart.
Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair,
 Is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods!
 This world I do renounce; and, in your sights,
 Shake patiently my great affliction off:
 If I could bear it longer, and not fall
 To quarrel with your great opposelless wills,
 My snuff, and leathard part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—
 Now, fellow, fare thee well.

[He leaps, and falls along.]
Edg. Gone, sir? farewell.—

And yet I know not how conceit may rob
 The treasury of life, when life itself
 Yields to the theft: Had he been where he thought,
 By this, had thought been past.—Alive, or dead?
 Ho, you sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!
 Thus might he pass indeed:—Yet he revives:
 What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die.
Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,

So many fathom down precipitating,
 Thou hadst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost
 breathe;
 Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art
 sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude,
 Which thou hast perpendicularly fell;
 Thy life's a miracle: Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no?
Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn:

Look up a-height;—the shrill-gorg'd lark so far
 Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glo. Alack, I have no eyes.—
 Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
 To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
 When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
 And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm:
 Up!—So;—How is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangeness.
 Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that
 Which parted from you?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyea
 Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
 Horns whelk'd, and wav'd like the enridged sea;
 It was some fiend: Therefore, thou happy father,

Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear
Affliction, till it do cry out itself,
Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man; often 'twould say,
The fiend, the fiend: he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed up with flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard.—Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace;—this piece of toasted cheese will do't.—There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown bills.—O, well flown, bird!—i'the clout, i'the clout: hewgh!—Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Generil!—with a white beard!—They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there.
To say ay, and no, to every thing I said!—Ay and so too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter;
when the thunder would not peace at my bidding;
there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o'their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember:
Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life: What was thy cause?—
Adultery.

Thou shalt not die: Die for adultery! No:

The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'twixen the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—

Behold you' sipping dame,

Whose face between her forks presageth snow;

That minces virtue, and does shake the head

To hear of pleasure's name;

The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't

With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,

Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,

Beneath is all the fiends'; there's hell, there's dark-
ness,

there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—Fie, fie, fie! pah; pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world
Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report;—it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the ease of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: Yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears:

SCENE VII.

A tent in the French camp. LEAR on a bed, asleep; Physician, Gentleman, and Others, attending.

Enter CORDELIA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live, and work,

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'erpaid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those worsor hours;
I pry'thee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known, shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord.—How does the king? [To the Physician.]

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I'the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near.—Londer the musick there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a fae
To be expos'd against the warring winds?

To stand against the deep dread-bolke thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke

Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu!)
With this thin helm?—Mine enemy's dog,

Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; And wast thou fawn, poor father,

To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!

'Tis wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out o'the grave:—

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know; When did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide!

Phys. He's scarce awake; let him alone a while.

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?—Fair day-light?—

I am mightily abus'd.—I should even die with pity,
To see another thus.—I know not what to say.—

I will not swear, these are my hands:—let's see;
I feel this pin prick. 'Would I were assur'd

Of my condition.

Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me:—
No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me:

I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward; and, to deal plainly,

I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.

Methinks, I should know you, and know this man;
Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant

What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night: Do not laugh at me;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am.
Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, 'faith. I pray, weep not:

If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know, you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is cur'd in him: and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost.
Desire him to go in; trouble him no more,
Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The camp of the British forces, near Doer.

Enter, with drums and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold;
Or, whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course: He's full of alteration,
And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who goes out.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,

You know the goodness I intend upon you:

Tell me,—but truly,—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way
To the forefended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct
And bound'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not:—

She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister
Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.—

Sir, this I hear,—The king is come to his daughter,
With others, whom the rigour of our state
Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us as France invades our land,
Not bolds the king; with others, whom, I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy:
For these domestick and particular broils
Are not to question here.

Alb. Let us then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. O, ho, I know the riddle: [Aside.] I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor,

Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[*Exeunt Edmund, Regan, Goneril, Officers,
Soldiers, and Attendants.*]

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I sit,
I can produce a champion, that will prove

What is avouched there: If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Officers, Soldiers, &c.*

a. Some officers take them away: good guard; their greater pleasures first be known are to censure them.

b. We are not the first,
with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.
Thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
if could else out-frown false fortune's frown.—
Do not see these daughters, and these sisters?
c. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:
two alone will sing like birds i'th' cage:
thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live, pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh at dead butterflies, and hear poor rogues talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,—

we were God's spies: And we'll wear out, wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,

n. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught
thee?

That parts us, shall bring a brand from heaven, fire us hence, like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
goeys shall devour them, flesh and fell,
they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve risk. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, Officers, and Attendants.

s. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,
fortune led you well: You have the captives,
were the opposites of this day's strife:
do require them of you; so to use them,
we shall find their merits and our safety equally determine.

tw. Sir, I thought it fit to end the old and miserable king some retention, and appointed guard;
his age has charms in it, whose title more,
luck the common bosom on his side,
turn our impress'd lances in our eyes to do command them. With him I sent the queen;
reason all the same; and they are ready

th. Sir, by your patience,
I'd you but a subject of this war,
as a brother.

ti. That's as we list to grace him.
hinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,
you had spoke so far. He led our powers;

Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your advancement.

reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

gon. That were the most, if he should husband
you.

reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

gon. Holla, holla!

That eye, that told you so, look'd but a-squint.

reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.—General,

Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine:
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

edm. Nor in thine, lord.

alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine. [To Edmund.]

alb. Stay yet; hear reason:—Edmund, I arrest
thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent: [Pointing to Gon.]—for your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoken.

gon. An interlude!

alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloucester:—Let the trumpet
sound:

If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; [Throwing down a glove.] I'll prove it on thy heart,

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

reg. Sick, O, sick!

gon. If not, I'll ne'er trust poison. [Aside.]

edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a glove.] what in the world he is,

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:
Call by thy trumpet: he, that dares approach,
On him, or you, (who not?) I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

alb. A herald, ho!

edm. A herald, ho, a herald!

alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,

All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

reg. This sickness grows upon me.

Enter a Herald.

alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.
[Exit Regan, led.]

Come hither, herald,—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

off. Sound, trumpet. [A trumpet sounds.]

Herald reads.

If any man of quality, or degree, within the lists of the army, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet: He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound. [1 trumpet.]

Her. Again. [2 trumpet.]

Her. Again. [3 trumpet.]

[Trumpet answers within.]

Enter EDGAR, armed, preceded by a trumpet.

alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears Upon this call o'the trumpet.

her. What are you?

Your name, your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

edg. Know, my name is lost;
By treason's tooth bare-gnaw'd, and canker-bit:

Yet am I noble, as the adversary
I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?
Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself;—What say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword;
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,—
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor.
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince;
And from the extremest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, No,
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some 'say of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;
With the hell-bated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;
Which, (for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,)
This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak.

[Alarums. They fight. Edmund falls.]

Alb. O save him, save him!

Gon. This is mere practice, Gloster:
By the law of arms, thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it:—Hold, sir:—
Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil:—
No tearing, lady; I perceive, you know it.

[Gives the letter to Edmund.]

Gon. Say, if I do; the laws are mine, not thine:
Who shall arraign me for't?

Alb. Most monstrous!
Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know.

[Exit Goneril.]

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her.
[To an Officer, who goes out.]

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have
I done;

And more, much more: the time will bring it out;
'Tis past, and so am I: But what art thou,
That hast this fortune on me? If thou art noble,
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to scourge us:
The dark and vicious place where thee he got,
Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true;
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness:—I must embrace thee;
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy father!

Edg. Worthy prince,
I know it well.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;—

And, when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!—
The bloody proclamation to escape,
That follow'd me so near, (O our lives' sweetness!
That with the pain of death we'd hourly die,
Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift
Into a madman's rags; to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd; and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from death:
Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: But his flaw'd heart
(Alack, too weak the conflict to support!)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd
And shall, perchance, do good: but speak you
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woful, hold it
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a p
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too-much, would make much more
And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a
Who having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, findi
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven: threw him on my path
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of li
Began to crack: twice then the trumpet sound
And there I left him tranç'd.

Alb. But who was t
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who i guise

Follow'd his enemy king, and did him servie
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody kn

Gent. Help! help! O help!

Edg. What kind of

Alb. Speak,

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it s

It came even from the heart of—

Alb. Who, man?

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her

By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contract'd to them both; all

Now marry in an instant.

Alb. Produce their bodies, be they alive or d

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tr

Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gent.]

Enter KENT.

Edg. Here comes Ken

Alb. O! it is he.

The time will not allow the compliment,
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come

To bid my king and master aye good night;

Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and w

Cordelia?—

See'st thou this object, Kent?

[The bodies of Goneril and Reg brought in.]

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was be

The one the other poison'd for my sake,

And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so.—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life:—Some good I mean

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,

Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ

Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:—

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O, run—

Edg. To who, my lord?—Who has the send

Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on; take my sword,

Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife ar

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and

To lay the blame upon her own despair,

she fordid herself.
[B. The gods defend her! Bear him hence a while. [Edmund is borne off.

LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms; EDGAR, Officer, and Others.

Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O, you are men of stones; I I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so at heaven's vault should crack:—O, she is gone for ever!

Now when one is dead, and when one lives; 's dead as earth:—Lend me a looking-glass; but her breath will mist or stain the stone, yet, then she lives.

Is this the promis'd end?
Or image of that horror?

Fall, and cease!
This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so, a chance, that does redeem all sorrows at ever I have felt.

O my good master! [Kneeling. Pr'ythee, away.

'Tis noble Kent, your friend.
A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever!

Edelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha! What is't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft, mild, and low; an excellent thing in woman:—All'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Did I not, fellow? I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion I would have made them skip: I am old now, and these same crosses spoil me—Who are you? My eyes are none o'the best:—I'll tell you straight.

If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated, of them we behold.

This is a dull sight: Are you not Kent?

The same; your servant Kent: Where is your servant Caius?

He's a good fellow, I can tell you that; all strike, and quickly too:—He's dead and rotten.

No, my good lord; I am the very man;—I'll see that straight.

That, from your first of difference and decay, we follow'd your sad steps.

You are welcome hither.
Nor no man else; all's cheerless, dark, and deadly.—

Your eldest daughters have fore-doom'd themselves, And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.
Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain it is, That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter on Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle here.—

You lords, and noble friends, know our intent. What comfort to this great decay may come, Shall be applied: For us, we will resign, During the life of this old majesty, To him our absolute power:—You, to your rights;

[To Edgar and Kent. With boot, and such addition as your honours Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes The cup of their deservings.—O, see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life:

Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, - And thou no breath at all? O, thou wilt come no more,

Never, never, never, never!— Pray you, undo this button: Thank you, sir.— Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips,— Look there, look there!

Edg. He faints!—My lord, my lord,—
Kent. Break, heart; I pr'ythee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he hates him,

That would upon the rack of this tough world Stretch him out longer.

Edg. O, he is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long: He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence.—Our present business

Is general woe. Friends of my soul, you twain

[To Kent and Edgar. Rule in this realm, and the god'd state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go; My master calls, and I must not say, no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey; Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say. The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young, Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead march.

Scene,—during the greater part of the Play, in Verona; once in the fifth Act, at Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
 In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
 From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
 Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
 From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
 A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
 Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows

Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.
 The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
 And the continuance of their parents' rage,
 Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
 Is now the two hours' traffick of our stage;
 The which if you with patient ears attend,
 What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

A publick place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o'my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move, is—to stir; and to be valiant, is—to stand to it: therefore, if thou art moved, thou runn'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:—therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maiden-heads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and, 'tis known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well, thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been Poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Enter ABRAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How? turn thy back, and run!

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown, as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say—ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter BENVOLIO, at a distance.

Gre. Say—better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do. [Beats down their swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Th. Stothard del.

Aug. Fox sc.

ROMEO & JULIET.

Act. 2. Sc. 2.

Published by W. Pickering 57. Chancery Lane 1825

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace; put up thy sword, Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word, As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee: Have at thee, coward. [They fight.]

Enter several Partizans of both houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs.

Cl. Clubs, bills, and partizans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his gown; and Lady CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this!—Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say!—Old Montague is come, and flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter MONTAGUE and Lady MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain, Capulet,—Hold me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,— Will they not hear?—what ho! ybu men, you beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins, On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mis-temper'd weapons to the ground, And bear the sentence of your moved prince.—

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets; And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cost by their grave beseeching ornaments, To wield old partizans, in hands as old, Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate: Never you disturb our streets again,

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time, all the rest depart away: You, Capulet, shall go along with me; And, Montague, come you this afternoon,

To know our further pleasure in this case, To old Free-town, our common judgment-place. Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exeunt Prince, and Attendants; Capulet, Lady Capulet, Tybalt, Citizens, and Servants.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?— Speak, nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary, And yours, close fighting ere I did approach: I drew to part them; in the instant came The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;

Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, He swung about his head, and cut the winds, When, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn:

While we were interchanging thrusts and blows, Came more and more, and fought on part and part, Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo!—saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun Peer'd forth the golden window of the east, A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;

Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore, That westward roothed from the city's side,— So early walking did I see your son: Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me, And stole into the covert of the wood: I, measuring his affections by my own,—

That most are busied when they are most alone,— Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his, And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen, With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew, Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun Should in the furthest east begin to draw The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,

Away from light steals home my heavy son, And private in his chamber pens himself; Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out, And makes himself an artificial night:

Black and portentous must this humour prove, Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends:

But he, his own affections' counsellor, Is to himself—I will not say, how true—

But to himself so secret and so close, So far from sounding and discovery,

As is the bud bit with an envious worm, Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,

Or dedicate his beauty to the sun. Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow, We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter ROMEO, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you, step aside;

I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would, thou wert so happy by thy stay, To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt Montague and Lady.]

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ah me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was:—What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which, having, makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view, Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still, Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!

Where shall we dine?—O me!—What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all. Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:—

Why then, O hawling love! O loving hate!

O any thing, of nothing first create!

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!—

This love feel I, that feel no love in this. Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.—

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest

With more of thine: this love, that thou hast shown,

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:

What is it else? a madness most discreet,

A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz. [Going.]

Ben. Soft, I will go along;

And if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who she is you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

Ben. Groan? why, no;

But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will:—

Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!—

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man!—And she's fair
I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives unarm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:
O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;

For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love; and, in that vow,
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;
He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note,
Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap. And Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before:

My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.
This night I hold an old accustomed feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number
more.

At my poor house, look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inheret at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:
Such, amongst view of many, mine, being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me;—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out, Whose names are written there, [Gives a paper.]
and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exeunt Capulet and Paris.]

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here? It is written—that the shoemaker sho meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his li the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with nets; but I am sent to find those persons, wh names are here writ, and can never find w names the writing person hath here writ. I m to the learned:—In good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns not another burning,

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;
Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning;

One desperate grief cures with another's languor
Take thou some new infection to thy eye,

SCENE III.

A room in Capulet's house.

Enter Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

Ld. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? cal forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maiden-head,—at t year old,—

I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-bi God forbid!—where's this girl? what, Juliet!

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now, who calls?

urse.

Your mother.

at is your will?
Madam, I am here.

Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give leave a while, must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again; re remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel.

I know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age.

urse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Cap. She's not fourteen.

urse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth, yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,— is not fourteen: How long is it now Lammas-tide?

Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

urse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, is Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen.

in and she,—God rest all Christian souls!—

re of an age.—Well, Susan is with God;

was too good for me: But, as I said,

Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen;

t shall she, marry; I remember it well.

since the earthquake now eleven years;

'she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,— all the days of the year, upon that day:

I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

ing in the sun under the dove-house wall,

lord and you were then at Mantua:—

r, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,

en it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool!

see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug.

ke, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I trow, bid me trudge.

I since that time it is eleven years:

then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood, could have run and waddled all about.

even the day before, she broke her brow:

I then my husband—God be with his soul!

was a merry man;—took up the child:

'quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face?

ou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more wit;

if thou not, Jule? and, by my holy-dam,

a pretty wretch left crying, and said—Ay;

see now, how a jest shall come about!

narrant, an I should live a thousand years,

never should forget it; Wilt thou not Jule?

quoth he:

d, pretty fool, it stinted, and said—Ay.

Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy

peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam; Yet I cannot choose but laugh, think it should leave crying, and say—Ay:

d yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow

bump as big as a young cockrel's stone;

parlous knock; and it cried bitterly.

'quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face?

ou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st to age;

ilt thou not, Jule? it stinted, and said—Ay.

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!

on wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd:

I might live to see thee married once,

save my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme same to talk of:—Tell me, daughter Juliet, ow stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour, that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse, d say, thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now; younger than you,

ere in Verona, ladies of esteem,

re made already mothers: by my count,

was your mother match upon these years hat you are now a maid. Thus then, in brief;—

be valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man,

s all the world—Why, he's a man of wax.

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

his night you shall behold him at our feast:

read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,

And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;

Examine every married lineament,

And see how one another lends content;

And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies,

Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,

To beautify him, only lacks a cover:

The fish lives in the sea; and 'tis much pride,

For fair without the fair within to hide:

That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,

That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;

So shall you share all that he doth possess,

By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less? nay, bigger; women grow by men.

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris'

love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move:

But no more deep will I endart mine eye,

Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you call'd, my young lady ask'd for, the nurse

curs'd in the pantry, and every thing in extremity.

I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee.—Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and Others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such proximity:

We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,

Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;

Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke

After the prompter, for our entrance:

But, let them measure us by what they will,

We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch,—I am not for this ambling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have a dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes,

With nimble soles; I have a soul of lead,

So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,

And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore pierc'd with his shaft,

To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,

I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:

Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;

Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,

Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.—

Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a mask.]

A visor for a visor!—what care I,

What curious eye doth quote deformities?

Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons, light of heart,

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels;

For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,—

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on,—

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own

word:

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire

Of this (save reverence) love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light, ho.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.

Take our good meaning; for our judgment sits

Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well, in going to this mask;

But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer.

Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer.

And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer.

That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed, asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you.

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;

The traces, of the smallest spider's web;

The collars, of the moonshine's watry beams;

Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film;

Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm

Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,

Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.

And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love:

On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies straight:

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees:

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,

Because their breaths with sweet-meats tainted are.

Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit:

And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,

Then dreams he of another benefice:

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,

Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths 'ave fathom deep; and then anon

Drums in his ear; at which he starts, and wakes;
And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two,
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab,

That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.

This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.

This, this is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace;

Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer.

True, I talk of dreams;

Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;

Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves;
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives,
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death:

But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A hall in Capulet's house.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwash'd too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate:—good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1 Serv. You are look'd for, and call'd for, as for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too cheerily, boys; be brisk a while, and the lion liver take all. [They retire behind.]

Enter CAPULET, &c. with the Guests, and the Maskers.

Cap. Gentlemen, welcome! ladies, that h

A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.

[Musicke plays, and they dance.]

More light, ye knives; and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.

Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.

Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;

For you and I are past our dancing days:

How long is't now, since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis no much:

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mas

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder,
His son is thirty.

1 Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady's that, which doth enrich hand.

Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bri

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;

A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo is't?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Rom

1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone:

He bears him like a portly gentleman;

And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:

I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here in my house, do him disparagement:

Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will; the which if thou respect,

As ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest;
I'll not endure him.

o smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too
much,

Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
aints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,
and palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

e. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?
Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
O then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
hey pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

1. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.

from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd.

[Kissing her.]
Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

e. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!
me my sin again.

You kiss by the book.
e. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

1. What is her mother?
e. Marry, bachelor,

mother is the lady of the house,
a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:
e'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;
you,—he, that can lay hold of her,
have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.
Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.
Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.
I Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;
We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.—
Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:
More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed.
Ah, sirrah, [To 2 Cap.] by my fay, it waxes late;
I'll to my rest. [Exeunt all but Juliet and Nurse.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is yon gentleman?
Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.
Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?
Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be yong Petruccio?
Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance?
Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name:—if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague:
The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?
Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
Of one I danc'd withal. [One calls within, Juliet.]

Nurse. Anon, anon:—
Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone.

[Exeunt.]

Enter CHORUS.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir;
That fair, which love groan'd for, and would die,
With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.

Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-beloved anywhere:

But passion lends them power, time means to meet,
Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

In open place, adjoining Capulet's garden.

Enter ROMEO.

e. Can I go forward, when my heart is here?
back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.]

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

1. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!
e. He is wise;

on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.
1. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:
good Mercutio.

e. Nay, I'll conjure too.—
so! humours! madman! passion! lover!
er thou in the likeness of a sigh,
e but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
ut—Ah me! couple but—love and dove;
k to my gossip Venus one fair word,
ickname for her purblind son and heir,
g Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,
a king Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.—
areth not, stirreth not, he moveth not;
ape is dead, and I must conjure him.—
jure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes, er high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
er fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,
er demesnes that there adjacent lie,
in thy likeness thou appear to us.

e. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

e. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
That were some spite: my invocation
Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those trees,
To be consorted with the humorous night:
Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,
As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.—
Romeo, good night;—I'll to my truckle-bed;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
To seek him here, that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Capulet's garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—
[Juliet appears alone, at a window.]

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks!
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!—
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she;
Be not her maid, since she is envious;

Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—
It is my lady; O, it is my love:
O, that she knew she were!—
She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright,
That birds would sing, and think it were not night.
See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!
Rom. She speaks:—
O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lacy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?
Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy;—
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.

What's Montague! it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet:
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that tide—Romeo, doff thy name;
And for that name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptis'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,
So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound:
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.
Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me? and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb;
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch
these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.
Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.
Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;

And, but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire;
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far

As that vast shore, wash'd with the furthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st, the mask of night is on my face;
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek;
For that which thou hast heard, me speak to-night,
Fain would I dwell on form, fain fide deny
What I have spoke; But farewell compliment:
Dost thou love me? I know, thou wilt say—
And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear
Thou mayst prove false; at lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay;
So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;
And therefore thou mayst think my haviour light;
But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.
I should have been more strange, I must confess;
But that thou overheard'st, ere I was 'ware,
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love
I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be Ere one can say—It lightens. Sweet, good night:
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breeze,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.
Good night, good night! as sweet repose and Come to thy heart, as that within my breast.

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?
Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-
Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request
And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what pose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

Rom. O blessed blessed night! I am afear'd
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good
indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.
Jul. I come, anon:—But if thou mean'st not
I do beseech thee,—

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.
Jul. By and by, I come.
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—
Jul. A thousand times good night!
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to wear light.—

re goes toward love, as school-boys from their books;
love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

[Retiring slowly.]

Re-enter JULIET, above.

ul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer's voice, lure this tassel-gentle back again!
savage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
e would I tear the cave where echo lies,
I make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
th repetition of my Romeo's name.
lom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:
e silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
e softest musick to attending ears!

ul. Romeo!

lom. My sweet!

ul. At what o'clock to-morrow ll I send to thee?

lom. At the hour of nine.

ul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till then.
ave forgot why I did call thee back.

lom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.

ul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there, nemb'ring how I love thy company.

lom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget, getting any other home but this.

ul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone:
I yet no further than a wanton's bird;
ho lets it hop a little from her hand,
e a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
I with a silk thread plucks it hack again,
loving-jealous of his liberty.
lom. I would, I were thy bird.

ul. Sweet, so would I:
I should kill thee with much cherishing.
d night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,
t I shall say—good night, till it be morrow.

[Exit.]

lom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast—

ould I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
nee will I to my ghostly father's cell;
help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, with a basket.

ul. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning
night,
ckering the eastern clouds with streaks of light;
d flecked darkness like a drunkard reels mforth day's path-way, made by Titan's wheels:
ere the sun advance his burning eye,
e day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
ust up-fill this osier cage of ours,
idh baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
e earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
hat is her burying grave, that is her womb:
d from her womb children of divers kind e sucking on her natural bosom find;
ny fur many virtues excellent,
ne but for some, and yet all different.
mickle is the powerful grace, that lies berbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
r nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
t to the earth some special good doth give;
e nought so good, but, strain'd from that fair use,
volts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:
ae itself turns vice, being misapplied;
d vice sometime's by action dignified.
ithin the infant rind of this small flower son hath residence, and med'cine power:
r this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part;
ing tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
o such opposed foes encamp them still man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;
d, where the wurser is predominant,
ll sooa the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

lom. Good morrow, father!

ul. Benedicite!
hat early tongue so sweet salueth me?—
ung son, it argues a distemper'd head,

So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed?
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-rous'd by some distemp'ature;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physick lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us this day.

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:

If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then—

Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And had'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not; she, whom I love now, Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.

But come, young waverer, come go with me,

In one respect I'll thy assistant be;

For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely, and slow; They stumble, that run fast. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

A street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spake with his man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench,

that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,

Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead! stabb'd with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft; And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you. O, he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house,—of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antick, lipping, affecting fantastiques; these new tuners of accents!—By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good whore!—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-moy's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring!—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in: Laura, to his lady, was but a kitchen-wench;—marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Diao, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, hindalls and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; Can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and, in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to court'sy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flower'd.

Mer. Well said: Follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits fail.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad: which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his haubt in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale longer.

Mer. O, thou art deceived, I would have it short: for I was come to the whole depth of tale: and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's goodly geer!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon?

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Pr'ythee, do, good Peter, to hide her for her fan's the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;—For self to mar, quoth'a?—Gentlemen, can any of tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo was older when you have found him, than he was you sought him: I am the youngest of that for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yes, is the worst well? very well if faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some dence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A hawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be

An old hare bear,
And an old hare hoar,
Is very good meat in lent:
But a hare that is hoar,
Is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent.—

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady. [Exeunt Mercutio and Ben]

Nurse. Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, saucy merchant was this, that was so full of ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear self talk; and will speak more in a minute, he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me take him down an 'a were lustier than he is twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his gills; I am none of his skains-mates:—And must stand by too, and suffer every knave to me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure had, my weapon should quickly have been a warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the like my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vex'd, every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!—you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my lady bade me inquire you out; what she bid say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as say, it were a very good kind of behaviour, as say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, if the if you should deal double with her, truly, it an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and tress. I protest unto thee,— Nurse. Good heart! and, i'faith, I will tell her such: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful woman.

om. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest; oh, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.
om. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift; afternoon;

there she shall at friar Laurence's cell shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

om. Go to; I say, you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be so.
om. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee;

bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;

which to the high top-gallant of my joy

it be my convoy in the secret night.

swell!—He trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.

swell!—Commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee!—Hark you, sir.

om. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear

say—

he may keep counsel, putting one away?

om. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest

—Lord, lord!—when 'twas a little prating girl.—O,—there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good girl, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see me. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that she is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, no I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in varsal world. Both not rosemary and Romeo in both with a letter?

om. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is the dog's name. No; I know it begins with some other letter: and she hath the prettiest sententious of you and rosemary, that it would do you to hear it.

om. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit.]

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times.—Peter!

et. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, Take my fan, and go before.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Capulet's garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;

half an hour she promis'd to return.

Chance, she cannot meet him:—that's not so.—

He is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts, which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,

wing back shadows over lowering hills:

Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,

and therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

Why is the sun upon the highest hill

when this day's journey; and from nine till twelve three long hours,—yet she is not come.

She affections, and warm youthful blood,

'd be as swift in motion as a ball;

words would bandy her to my sweet love,

and his to me:

Old folks, many feign as they were dead;

young folks, some sulk, and some do lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Nurse. Good, she comes!—O honey nurse, what news?

What thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Why sighs news be sad, yet tell them merrily;

and good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news

playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am weary, give me leave a while;—

how my bones ache! What a jaunt have I had!

Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy news:

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak;—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, What haste? can you not stay a while?

Do you not see, that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me—that thou art out of breath?

The excuse, that thou dost make in this delay,

Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:

Let me be satisfied, Is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice;

you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no,

not he; though his face be better than any man's,

yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench; serve God!—What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before;

What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head akes! what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o't'other side,—O, my back, my back!—

Beshrew your heart, for sending me about,

To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I'faith, I am sorry that thou art not well:

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my

love?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,

And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,

And, I warrant, a virtuous:—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother?—why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou reply'st!

Your love says like an honest gentleman,—

Where is your mother?

Nurse. O, God's lady dear!

Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;

Is this the poultrie for my aking bones?

Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil;—Come, what says

Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Laurence's cell,

There stays a husband to make you a wife:

Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,

They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.

Hie you to church; I must another way,

To fetch a ladder, by the which your love

Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark:

I am the drudge, and toil in your delight;

But you shall bear the burden soon at night.

Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. His to high fortune!—honest nurse, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,

That after-hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy,

That one short minute gives me in her sight:

Do thou but close our hands with holy words,

Then love-devouring death do what he dare,

It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends,

And in their triumph die; like fire and powder,

Which, as they kiss, consume: The sweetest honey,

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,

And in the taste confounds the appetite:

Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so;

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady:—O, so light a foot

Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:

A lover may bestride the gossamers

That idle in the wanton summer air,

And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.
Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.
Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.
Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
 Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more
 To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
 This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
 Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
 Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Coccit, more rich in matter than in wo
 Brags of his substance, not of ornament;
 They are but beggars that can count their wort
 But my true love is grown to such excess,
 I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.
Fri. Come, come with me, and we will n short work;
 For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
 Till holy church incorporate two in one. [Exe

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A publick place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire;
 The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
 And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl;
 For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.
Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, God send me no need of thee! and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other.
 Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes; What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath waken'd thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old ribband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter TYBALT, and Others.

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.
 —Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You will find me apt enough to that, sir,
 if you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the publick haunt of men:
 Either withdraw into some private place,
 Or reason coldly of your grievances,
 Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze:

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:
 Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;

Your worship, in that sense, may call him—
Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford
 No better term than this—Thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee
 Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
 To such a greeting:—Villain am I none;
 Therefore farewell; I see, thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Fore, this shall not excuse the injuries
 That thou hast done me; therefore turn, and draw.

Rom. I do protest, I never injur'd thee;
 But love thee better than thou canst devise,
 Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
 And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
 As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
A la stoccata carries it away.—
 Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing, but one of nine lives; that I mean to take bold withal, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rethe eight. Will you pluck your sword out of its pilcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They

Rom. Draw, Benvolio;

Beat down their weapons:—Gentlemen, for sl
 Forbear this outrage;—Tybalt—Mercutio—
 The prince expressly hath forbid this bandy in
 In Verona streets:—hold, Tybalt;—good Mer [Exeunt Tybalt and his Party

Mer. I am hurt;—

A plague o'both the houses!—I am sped:—
 Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What art thou in?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry enough.—

Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surg
 [Exit.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be m

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a man. I am pepper'd, I warrant, for this world.
 A plague o'both your houses!—'Zounds, a d rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death;
 braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the of arithmetic!—Why, the devil, came you tween us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio,
 Or I shall faint.—A plague o'both your houses
 They have made worms' meat of me;
 I have it, and soundly too:—Your houses!

[Exeunt Mercutio and Ben

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near all;
 My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt
 In my behalf; my reputation stain'd
 With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour
 Hath been my kinsman:—O sweet Juliet,
 Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,
 And in my temper soften'd valour's steel.

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's d
 That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,
 Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days depend;
 This but begins the woe, others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

en. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.
om. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio's slain!
ry to heaven, respective lenity,
fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!—
y, Tybalt, take the villain back again, late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul
at a little way above our heads, ring for thine to keep him company;
er thou, or I, or both, must go with him.
ob. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him
here,
it with him hence.

This shall determine that.

[They fight; Tybalt falls.]

en. Romeo, away, be gone!
citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:—
ad not amaz'd:—the prince will doom thee death, hou art taken:—hence!—be gone!—away!
om. O! I am fortune's fool!
en.

Why dost thou stay?

[Exit Romeo.]

Enter Citizens, &c.

Cit. Which way ran he, that kill'd Mercutio?
alt, that murderer, which way ran he?
en. There lies that Tybalt.

Cit. Up, sir, go with me;
arge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and Others.

rin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?
en. O noble prince, I can discover all e unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:
ere lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
at slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

a. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child!
happy sight! ah me, the blood is spill'd
my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true, blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.—
onsin, cousin!

rin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?
en. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;

meo, that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
e nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal ur high displeasure:—All this—uttered ith gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,—

uld not take truce with the unruly spleen Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts ith piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast;
ho, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
d, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats ld death aside, and with the other sends back to Tybalt, whose dexterity torts it: Romeo he cries aloud, ld, friends! friends, part! and, swifter than his
tongue,

a agile arm beats down their fatal points,
d 'twixt them rushes: underneath whose arm
t envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled:
at by and by comes back to Romeo,
ho had but newly entertain'd revenge,
d to't they go like lightning; for, ere I uld draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain;
d, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly:
is is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague, fection makes him false, he speaks not true:
me twenty of them fought in this black strife,
d all those twenty could but kill one life:
beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;
omeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

rin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio; ho now the price of his dear blood doth owe?
Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's
friend;
is fault concludes but, what the law should ead,
e life of Tybalt.

rin. And, for that offence,
mediately we do exile him hence:
have an interest in your hates' proceeding,
y blood for your rude brawls doth lie a bleeding;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine:
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses,
Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A room in Capulet's house.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' mansion; such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.—
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!
That run-away's eyes may wink; and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of, and unseem!—
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties: or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods:
Hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,
Think true love acted, simple modesty.
Come, night!—Come, Romeo! come, thou day in
night!

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—
Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd
night,

Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival,
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,

Enter Nurse, with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue, that speaks
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence.—
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there?
the cords,

That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse.

Ay, ay, the cords.

[Throws them down.]

Jul. Ah me! what news! why dost thou bring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!
he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!
Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse.

Romeo can,

Though heaven cannot:—O Romeo! Romeo!

Who ever would have thought it!—Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me
thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,
And that bare vowel I shall poison more:
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shent, that make thee answer, I.
If he be slain, say—/; or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my weal, or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaw'd in blood,
All in gore blood;—I swooned at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes! ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this, that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd? and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-lov'd cousin, and my dearer lord?
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.
Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravens lamb!
Bespiced substance of divinest show!

Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!—
O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,

When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?—
Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—
Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua vitae:—
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.
Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O, what a beast was I to chide at him!
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy
name,

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?—
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my
husband:

All this is comfort; Wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's death,
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;

But, O! it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;

That—banished, that one word—banished,
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needily will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said—Tybalt's dead,
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
Romeo is banished,—to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead:—Romeo is banished,—
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe
sound.—
Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords:—Poor ropes, you are beguill'd,
Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd:
He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding bed;
And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
To comfort you:—I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true knave,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.

SCENE III.

Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearing man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the principal doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company;

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the principal doom?

Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lip,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death for exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: 'do not say—banishment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona wall,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And death's exile is death:—then banishment
Is death mis-term'd: calling death—banishment.

Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment.

This is death mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not.—More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished;
Flies may do this, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.
And say'st thou yet, that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knive, No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so meet:
But—banished—to kill me; banished?

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word—banishment?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.
Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word.
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banish'd—hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Fri. O, then I see, that madmen have no ears.
Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou try thy hair,

fall upon the ground, as I do now,
 as the measure of an unmade grave.

f. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.

g. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans, like, unfold me from the search of eyes.

h. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there?—
 Romeo, arise;

i. wilt be taken:—Stay a while:—stand up;

to my study:—By and by:—God's will!
 it wilfulness is this?—I come, I come.

knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;
 as from lady Juliet.

Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.

nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,

is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

l. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,

in her case!

l. O woeful sympathy!

what predicament!

nurse. Even so lies she,

heaving and weeping, weeping and blubbering:—

l. up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:

Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;

should you fall into so deep an O?

m. Nurse!

nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—Well, death's the end of all.

m. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?

she not think me an old murderer,

I have stain'd the childhood of our joy

a blood remov'd but little from her own?

is she? and how doth she? and what says

oncecall'd lady to our cancell'd love?

nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

now falls on her bed; and then starts up,

Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,

then down falls again.

m. As if that name,

from the deadly level of a gun, murder her; as that name's curs'd hand

leav'd her kinsman.—O tell me, friar, tell me, what vile part of this anatomy

my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.]

l. Hold thy desperate hand:

thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;

tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote unreasonable fury of a beast:

emly woman, in a seeming man!

l. beseeming beast, in seeming both!

hast amaz'd me: by my holy order, ought thy disposition better temper'd.

thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?

slay thy lady too that lives in thee,

being damn'd hate upon thyself?

l. rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

the birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.

l. fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit;

as, like an usurer, abound'st in all,

usest none in that true use indeed which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.

l. noble shape is but a form of wax,

creasing from the valour of a mau;

dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury, eng that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish:

wit, that ornament to shape and love,

shapen in the conduct of them both,

powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,

set on fire by thine own ignorance,

thou dismember'd with thine own defence.

l. rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,

whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;

o art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,

But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy

too:

The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:

A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;

Happiness courts thee in her best array;

But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,

Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love:

Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.

Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed.

Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;

But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,

For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;

Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time

To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,

Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back

With twenty hundred thousand times more joy

Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.

Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;

And bid her hasten all the house to bed,

Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:

Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have staid here all the

night,

To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—

My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir:

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

[Exit Nurse.]

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

Fri. Go hence: Good night; and here stands all your state:—

Either begone before the watch be set,

Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence:

Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,

And he shall signify from time to time

Every good hap to you, that chances here:

Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good night.

Rom. But that a joyous part calls out on me,

It were a grief, so brief to part with thee:

Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Capulet's house.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily,

That we have had no time to move our daughter:

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,

And so did I;—Well, we were born to die.—

'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:

I promise you, but for your company,

I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo:

Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early tomorrow;

To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender

Of my child's love: I think, she will be rul'd

In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;

Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;

And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—

But, soft; What day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,

O'Thursday let it be;—O'Thursday, tell her,

She shall be married to this noble earl:—

Will you be ready? do you like this haste?

We'll keep no great ado;—a friend, or two:—

For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,

It may be thought we held him carelessly,

Being our kinsman, if we revel much:

Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,

And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were tomorrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone:—O'Thursday be it

then:—

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed.

Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.—

Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho!

Afore me, it is so very late, that we
May call it early by and by:—Good night.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Juliet's chamber.Enter ROMEO and JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops;
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not day-light, I know it, I:
It is some meteor, that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say, yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay, than will to go:—
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.—
How is't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, his hence, be gone, away;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say, the lark and leathard do change eyes;
O, now I would they had chang'd voices too!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light?—more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.Nurse. Madam!Jul. Nurse?

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your chamber:
The day is broke; be wary, look about.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend.
[Romeo descends.]

Jul. Art thou gone so? my love! my lord! my friend!

I must hear from thee every day i'the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou, we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul:
Methinks, I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb:

Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!
[Exit Romeo.]

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle:
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renew'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

La. Cap. [within.] Ho, daughter! are you up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady mother?
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?
An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live:
Therefore have done: Some grief shows much of love;
But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so for his death,

As that the villain lives, which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder:
God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murders lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands
'Would, none but I might venge my cousin's death.

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear
not:

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua
Where that same banish'd runaway doth live:
That shall bestow on him so sure a draught,
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:

And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd:—
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it;
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet.—O, how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt,
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful
What are they, I beseech your ladyship?

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful
child;

One, who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is't?

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next morn,

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The county Paris, at Saint Peter's church,
Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by saint Peter's church, and Peter
He shall not make me there a joyful bride.

I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
Ere he, that should be husband, comes to w.

I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I sw
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris:—These are news indeed!

La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell yourself.

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle
But for the sunset of my brother's son,
It rains downright.—

How now? a conduit, girl? what, still in te Evermore showering? in one little body
Thou counterfeist a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sig
Who,—raging with thy tears, and they with t
Without a sudden calm, will overset
Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife!
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she you thanks.

ould, the fool were married to her grave!
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife.
 Will she not give us thanks?
 He not proud? doth she not count her bless'd, worthy as she is, that we have wrought worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?
Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:

And can I never be of what I hate;
 Thankful even for hate, that is meant love.
Cap. How now! how now, chop-logic! What is this?

And,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you not;—
 I yet not proud;—Mistress minion, you,
 Ask me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
 I'll settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
 go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,
 I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.
 O, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!
 A tallow face!

a. Cap. Fie, fie! what are you mad?
Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees, be me with patience but to speak a word.
Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient
 wretch!

Get thee what,—get thee to church o' Thursday,
 never after look me in the face:
 Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
 fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us bless'd,
 if God had sent us but this only child;
 now I see this one is one too much,
 I that we have a curse in having her:
 Out on her, bilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!
 I dare to blame, my lord, to rate her so.
Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue, and prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.
Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O, God ye good den!
Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!
 Her gravity o'er a gossip's bowl, is here we need it not.

a. Cap. You are too hot.
Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad: Day, night, late, early,

home, abroad, alone, in company, waking, or sleeping, still my care hath been having her match'd: and having now provided gentleman of princely parentage, fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,
 well (as they say,) with honourable parts,
 proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man,
 I then to have a wretched puling fool,
 whining marmet, in her fortune's tender,
 answer—'I'll not wed,—I cannot love,
 I'm too young,—I pray you, pardon me;—
 no, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you:
 Swear where you will, you shall not house with me;
 Ask not, think on't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
 An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
 An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets,
 For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
 Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
 Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.
Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
 That sees into the bottom of my grief?
 O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
 Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
 Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
 In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word;
 Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.
Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
 How shall that faith return again to earth,
 Unless that husband send it me from heaven
 By leaving earth?—comfort me, counsel me.—
 Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
 Upon so soft a subject as myself!—
 What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
 Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. 'Faith, here 'tis: Romeo
 Is banished; and all the world to nothing,
 That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
 Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
 Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
 I think it best you married with the county.
 O, he's a lovely gentleman!
 Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam,
 Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
 As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
 I think you are happy in this second match,
 For it excels your first: or if it did not,
 Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
 As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?
Nurse. From my soul too;
 Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!
Nurse. To what?
Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous
 much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
 Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence's cell,
 To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.
 [Exit.
Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!
 Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsworn,
 Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue,
 Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
 So many thousand times?—Go, go, councillor;
 Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—
 I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
 If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.
Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
 and I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.
Fri. You say, you do not know the lady's mind:

Seven is the course, I like it not.
Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death, and therefore have I little talk'd of love;
 or Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
 Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,
 that she doth give her sorrow so much sway;
 and in his wisdom, hastens our marriage,
 to stop the inundation of her tears;
 which, too much minded by herself alone,
 is by put from her by society:
 do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.
 Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell. [Aside.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife!
Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.
Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. That's a certain text.
Par. Come you to make confession to this father?
Jul. To answer that, were to confess to you.
Par. Do not deny to him, that you love me.
Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.
Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love me.
Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
 Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.
Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.
Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;
 For it was bad enough, before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, that is a truth; And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—

Are you at leisure, holy father, now;

Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now:—

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you;

Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss.

[Exit Paris.]

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so, Come weep with me; Past hope, past cure, past help!

Fri. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;

It strains me past the compass of my wits:

I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,

On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:

If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give me help,

Do thou but call my resolution wise,

And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,

Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt

Turn to another, this shall slay them both:

Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time,

Give me some present counsel; or, behold,

'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife

Shall play the umpire; arbitrating that

Which the commission of thy years and art

Could to no issue of true honour bring.

Be not so long to speak; I long to die,

If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution

As that is desperate which we would prevent.

If, rather than to marry county Paris,

Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself;

Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake

A thing like death to chide away this shame,

That cop'st with death himself to scape from it;

And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,

From off the battlements of yonder tower;

Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk

Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears;

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,

O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,

With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;

Or bid me go into a new-made grave,

And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;

Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble;

And I will do it without fear or doubt,

To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow;

To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,

Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:

Take thou this phial, being then in bed,

And this distilled liquor drink thou off:

When, presently, through all thy veins shall run

A cold and drowsy humour, which shall seize

Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep

His natural progress, but surcease to beat:

No warmth, no-breath, shall testify thou liv'st;

The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade

To pale ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,

Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;

Each part, depriv'd of supple government,

Shall stiff, and stark, and cold, appear like death:

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death

Thou shalt remain full two and forty hours,

And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.

Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:

Then (as the manner of our country is),

in thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,

Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,

Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.

In the mean time, against thou shalt awake, Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift; And hither shall he come; and he and I Will watch thy waking, and that very night Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua. And this shall free thee from this present shame If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear, Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, O give me! tell me not of fear!

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed

To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength a help afford.

Farewell, dear father!

[Exit]

SCENE II.

A room in Capulet's house.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, Nurse, Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.

[Exit Serv]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that can lick his own fingers: therefore he, that cannot his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.— [Exit Serv]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—

What, is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shift & merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests; and am enjoin'd

By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,

And beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech you

Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of th

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's ce

And gave him what became love I might,

Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad o't; this is well

stand up:

This is as't should be.—Let me see the county

Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,

All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my cl

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision

'Tis now near night.

Against to-morrow: my heart is wond'rous lig

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.

[Exit]

SCENE III.

Juliet's chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, g

nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;

For I have need of many orisgns move the heavens to smile upon my state, ich, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady CAPULET.

1. Cap. What, are you busy? do you need my help?
*1. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessities as are behoveful for our state to-morrow:
 please you, let me now be left alone,
 let the nurse this night sit up with you;
 I am sure, you have your hands full all,
 his so sudden business.*

2. Cap. Good night!
 thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.
[Exit Lady Capulet and Nurse.]
1. Farewell!—God knows, when we shall meet again.

1. A faint cold fear thrills through my veins, that almost freezes up the heat of life:
 I call them back again to comfort me;
 —Nurse!—What should she do here?
 O dismal scene! needs must act alone.—
 O, phial,—
 at if this mixture do not work at all?
 if I of force be married to the county?—
 no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.—
[Laying down a dagger.]

1. That if it be a poison, which the friar hath minister'd to have me dead;
 and in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
 because he married me before to Romeo?
 O, it is so; and yet, methinks, it should not,
 because he hath still been tried a holy man:
 I will not entertain so bad a thought.—
 O, if, when I am laid into the tomb,
 I wake before the time that Romeo cometh to redeem me! there's a fearful point!
 O, if I not then be stifled in the vault, to whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,
 and there die strangled ere my Romeo comes!
 O, if I live, is it not very like,
 a horrible conceit of death and night,
 together with the terror of the place,— in a vault, an ancient receptacle, where, for these many hundred years,
 the bones of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
 here bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
 is fast'ring in his shroud; where, as they say,
 some hours in the night spirits resort;—
 O, wick, alack; is it not like, that I,
 early waking,—what with loathsome smells;
 and shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,
 that living mortals hearing them, run mad;—
 O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught, environed with all these hideous fears?
 and madly play with my forefathers' joints?
 and pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
 O, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
 with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
 O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body upon a rapier's point:—Stay, Tybalt, stay!
 O, Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the bed.]

SCENE IV.

Capulet's hall.

Enter Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
 the curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:—
 look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:
 spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go, get you to bed; 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
 on this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd
 ere now

all night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exit Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow,
 What's there?

Enter Servants, with spits, logs, and baskets.

1. Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]—
 Sirrah, fetch drier logs;

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2. Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs, and never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.]

Cap. 'Muss, and well said; A merry whoreson! ha,
 Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 'tis day:
 The county will be here with musick straight, [Musick within.]

For so he said he would. I hear him near:—
 Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;
 I'll go and chat with Paris:—Hie, make haste,
 Make haste! the bridegroom he is come already:
 Make haste, I say! [Exit.]

SCENE V.

Juliet's chamber; JULIET on the bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!—fast,
 I warrant her, she:—
 Why, lamb!—why, lady!—fie, you slug-a-bed!—
 Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—why, bride!—

What, not a word?—you take your pennyworths
 now;

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
 The county Paris hath set up his rest,
 That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,
 (Marry, and amen!) how sound is she asleep!
 I needs must wake her:—Madam, madam, madam!
 Ay, let the county take you in your bed;
 He'll fright you up, i'faith.—Will it not be?
 What, drest! and in your clothes! and down again!
 I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady!
 Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—
 O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—
 Some aqua-vitæ, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only life,
 Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—
 Help, help!—call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is
 come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead; alack
 the day!

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Nurse. Ha! let me see her:—Out, alas! she's cold;
 Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
 Life and these lips have long been separated;
 Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
 Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Accurs'd time! unfortunate old man!

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return:

O son, the night before thy wedding day
 Hath death lain with thy bride:—See, there she lies,
 Flower as she was, deflowered by him.

Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded! I will die,
And leave him all; life leaving, all is death's.

Far. Have I thought long to see this morning's
face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this?
La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful
day!

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful, woful day!
Most lamentable day! most woful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!

Far. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—
O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!—
Uncomfortable time! why cam'st thou now
To murder murder our solemnity?—
O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!—
Dead art thou, dead!—alack! my child is dead;
And, with my child, my joys are buried!

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives
not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid:

Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was—her promotion;

For 'twas your heaven, she should be advanc'd:
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd,
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married, that lives married long;

But she's best married, that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corpse; and, as the custom is,

In all her best array bear her to church:
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments, to melancholy bells;

Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corpse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with him;—
And go, sir Paris;—every one prepare
To follow this fair corpse unto her grave:
The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill;

Move them no more, by crossing their high wit

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Mantua. A street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead; (Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think.)

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter BALTHASAR.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?

How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be i
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;

I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. Pardon me, sir, I will not leave you
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.
Rom. No matter: Get thee g

I hire those horses ; I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit Balthasar.]

all, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
 's see for means :—O, mischief ! thou art swift enter in the thoughts of desperate men !
 lo remember an apothecary,— d hereabouts he dwells,—whom late I noted tatter'd weeds, with overarching brows, lling of simples ; meagre were his looks,
 arp misery had worn him to the bones :
 d in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
 alligator stuff'd, and other skins ill-shap'd fishes ; and about his shelves beggarly account of empty boxes, een earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
 mnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
 ere thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
 ting this penury, to myself I said—
 if a man did need a poison now, hose sale is present death in Mantua,
 re lives a catif wretch would sell it him.
 this same thought did but fore-run my need ;
 d this same needy man must sell it me.
 I remember, this should be the house :
 ing holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
 hat, ho ! apothecary !

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud ?
Rom. Come hither, man.—I see, that thou art poor ;
 ld, there is forty ducats : let me have dram of poison ; such soon-speeding gear will disperse itself through all the veins, at the life-weary taker may fall dead ;
 d that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath violently, as hasty powder fir'd
 th hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.
Ap. Such mortal drugs I have ; but Mantua's law death, to any he that utters them.
Rom. Art thou so hure, and full of wretchedness, d fear'st to die ? famine is in thy cheeks,
 ed and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
 on thy back hangs ragged misery,
 e world is not thy friend, nor the world's law :
 e world affords no law to make thee rich ;
 en be not poor, but break it, and take this.
Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.
Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
 d drink it off ; and, if you had the strength
 twenty men, it would despatch you straight.
Rom. There is thy gold ; worse poison to men's souls,
 ing more murders in this loathsome world, an these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell :
 sell these poison, thou hast sold me none.
 urrell ; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
 me, cordial, and not poison ; go with me
 Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar JOHN.

John. Holy Franciscan friar ! brother, ho !

Enter Friar LAURENCE.

Lau. This same should be the voice of friar John.—
 'lcome from Mantua : What says Romeo ?
 r, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.
John. Going to find a bare-foot brother out, ce of our order, to associate me,
 ere in this city visiting the sick,
 d finding him, the searchers of the town, specting that we both were in a house here the infectious pestilence did reign, ald up the doors, and would not let us forth ;
 d that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.
Lau. Who bare my letter then to Romeo ?
John. I could not send it,—here it is again,— or get a messenger to bring it thee, or fearful were they of infection.
Lau. Unhappy fortune ! by my brotherhood, he letter was not nice, but full of charge, d dear import ; and the neglecting it

May do much danger : Friar John, go hence ;
 Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
 Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring 't thee. [Exit.]

Lau. Now must I to the monument alone ;
 Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake ;
 She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
 Hath had no notice of these accidents :
 But I will write again to Mantua,
 And keep her at my cell till Romeo come ;
 Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb !
 [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A church-yard ; in it, a monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy : Hence, and stand aloof ;—

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
 Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
 Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground ;
 So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread,
 (Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,)
 But thou shalt hear it : whistle then to me,
 As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
 Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.
Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
 Here in the church-yard ; yet I will adventure.

[Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed :

Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain
 The perfect model of eternity ;
 Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
 Accept this latest favour at my hands ;
 That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
 With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb !

[The Boy whistles.]

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.
 What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
 To cross my obsequies, and true love's rites ?
 What, with a torch !—muffle me, night, a while.

[Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter ; early in the morning
 See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
 Give me the light : Upon thy life I charge thee,
 Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
 And do not interrupt me in my course.
 Why I descend into this bed of death,
 Is, partly, to behold my lady's face :
 But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead finger
 A precious ring ; a ring, that I must use
 In dear employment : therefore hence, be gone :—
 But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
 In what I further shall intend to do,
 By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
 And strew this hungry church-yard with thy limbs :
 The time and my intents are savage-wild ;
 More fierce, and more inexorable far,
 Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—Take thou that :

Live, and be prosperous ; and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout ;
 His locks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
 Garg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
 Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Breaking open the door of the monument:]

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food !

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague, That murder'd my love's cousin ;—with which
 grief,

It is supposed, the fair creature died,—
 And here is come to do some villainous shame
 To the dead bodies : I will apprehend him.—

[Advances:]

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague ;

Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?
 Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
 Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.
Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.—

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
 Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these gone;
 Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,
 Heep not another sin upon my head,
 By urging me to fury:—O, be gone!
 By heaven, I love thee better than myself;
 For I come hither arm'd against myself:
 Stay not, be gone;—live, and hereafter say—
 A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,
 And do attach thee as a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee,
 boy. [They fight.]

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch. [Exit Page.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.]—If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will!—Let me peruse this face;—
 Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris:—
 What said my man, when my betossed soul
 Did not attend him as we rode? I think,
 He told me, Paris should have married Juliet:
 Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
 Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
 To think it was so?—O, give me thy hand,
 One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!
 I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—
 A grave? O, no; a lantern, slaughter'd youth,
 For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
 This vault a feasting presence full of light.
 Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the monument.]
 How oft, when men are at the point of death,
 Have they been merry? which their keepers call
 A lightning before death: O, how may I
 Call this a lightning?—O, my love! my wife!
 Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
 Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
 Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
 Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
 And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
 Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
 O, what more favour can I do to thee,
 Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
 To sunder his that was thine enemy?
 Forgive me, cousin!—Ah, dear Juliet,
 Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
 That unsubstantial death is amorous;
 And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
 Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
 For fear of that, I will still stay with thee;
 And never from this palace of dim night
 Depart again; here, here will I remain
 With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O, here
 Will I set up my everlasting rest;
 And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
 From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
 The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
 A dateless bargain to engrossing death!
 Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
 Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
 The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary hark!
 Here's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary!
 Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die. [Dies.]

Enter, at the other end of the church-yard, Friar LAURENCE, with a lantern, crow, and spade.
Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night Have my old feet stumbled at graves?—Who's there?
 Who is it, that consorts, so late, the dead?
Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.
Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
 What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
 To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
 It burneth in the Capels' monument.
Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
 One that you love.

Fri. Bless be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
 What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
 To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
 It burneth in the Capels' monument.
Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
 One that you love.

Enter some of the Watch, with BALTHASAR

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him
 the church-yard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince

Enter another Watchman, with Friar LAURENCE

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, si and weeps:

We took this mattock and this spade from him
 As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion; stay the friar?
Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
 That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not,

My master knows not, but I am gone hence;

And fearfully did menace me with death,

If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone:—Fear comes
 me;

O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
 I dreamt my master and another fought,
 And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo?—[Advanc

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody; Search
 the church-yard:

Go, some of you, who e'er you find, attach.

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;—

And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead,
 Who here hath lain these two days buried.—
 Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,—

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
 But the true ground of all these piteous woes,
 We cannot without circumstance descry.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him
 the church-yard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, si

We took this mattock and this spade from him
 As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion; stay the friar?
Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
 That calls our person from our morning's rest?

er CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and Others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

Cap. The people in the street cry—Romeo, is—Juliet, and some—Paris; and all run, in open outcry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears?

Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain;

Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before, arm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;

the instruments upon them, fit to open these dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heavens!—O, wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

A dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo! his house empty on the back of Montague,—

It mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell, it warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up, see thy son and heir more early down.

Mont. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night; of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath:

What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mont. O thou nuntaught! what manners is in this, press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while, till we can clear these ambiguities,

I know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes, and lead you even to death: Mean time forbear,

I let mischance be slave to patience.—

Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Mont. I am the greatest, able to do least,

Most suspected, as the time and place

Doth make against me, of this direful murder;

I here I stand, both to impeach and purge

Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Mont. I will be brief, for my short date of breath out so long as is a tedious tale.

My meo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet; and she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife

Married them; and their stolen marriage-day was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death

Wish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city; for whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

As to remove that siege of grief from her,—

That he should hither come as this dire night,

To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,

Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, friar John,

Was staid by accident; and yesternight

Return'd my letter back: Then all alone,

At the prefixed hour of her waking,

Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;

Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:

But, when I came, (some minute ere the time

Of her awakening,) here untimely lay

The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.

She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,

And bear this work of heaven with patience:

But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;

And she, too desperate, would not go with me,

But (as it seems,) did violence on herself.

All this I know; and to the marriage

Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this

Miscarried by my fault, let my old life

Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,

Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;

And then in post he came from Mantua,

To this same place, to this same monument.

This letter he early bid me give his father;

And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.—

Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did;

Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;

And, by and by, my master drew on him;

And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:

And here he writes—that he did buy a poison

Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal

Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—

Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!—

See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,

That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!

And I, for winking at your discords too,

Have lost a brace of kinsmen:—all are punish'd.

Cap. O, brother Montague, give me thy hand:

This is my daughter's jointure, for no more

Can I demand.

Mont. But I can give thee more:

For I will raise her statue in pure gold;

That, while Verona by that name is known,

There shall no figure at such rate be set,

As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;

Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:

Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:

For never was a story of more woe,

Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Elsinore. A platform before the castle.

FRANCISCO on his post. Enter to him
 BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?
Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!
Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.
Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks: 'tis bitter cold, And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?
Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.
 If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
 The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Fran. I think, I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.
Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.
Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier:
 Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place.
 Give you good night. [Exit Francisco.]

Mar. Holla! Bernardo!
Ber. Say,

What, is Horatio there?
Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fantasy;
 And will not let belief take hold of him,
 Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us:
 Therefore I have entreated him along,
 With us to watch the minutes of this night;
 That, if again this apparition come,
 He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush! tush! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down a while;
 And let us once again assail your ears,
 That are so fortified against our story,
 What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
 And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
 When yon same star, that's westward from the pole,
 Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven
 Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,
 The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like:—it harrows me with fear, and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Speak to it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,
 Together with that fair and warlike form
 In which the majesty of buried Denmark
 Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee,
 speak.

Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay; speak; I charge thee, speak. [Exit Ghost.]

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.
Ber. How now, Horatio? you tremble, and look pale:

Is not this something more than fantasy?
 What think you of it?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
 Without the sensible and true avouch
 Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself:
 Such was the very armour he had on,
 When he the ambitious Norway combated;
 So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
 He smote the sledded Polack on the ice.
 'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump at this dead hour,

HAMLET.

Act. 4. Sc. 7.

Published by W. Pickering 57 Chancery Lane. 1825.

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not;

But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion, This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch So mightily toils the subject of the land; And why such daily cast of brazen cannon, And foreign mart for implements of war; Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task Does not divide the Sunday from the week: What might be toward, that this sweaty haste Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day; Who is't, that can inform me?

Hor. That can I; At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, Whose image even but now appear'd to us, Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway, Thareto prick'd on by a most emulate pride, Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet (For so this side of our known world esteem'd him,) Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact, Well ratified by law, and heraldry,

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands, Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror: Against the which, a moiety competent Was gaged by our king; which had return'd To the inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same co-mart, And carriage of the article design'd, His fall to Hamlet: Now, sir, young Fortinbras, Of unimprov'd mettle hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there, Shark'd up a list of landless resolute, For food and diet, to some enterprise

That hath a stomach in't: which is no other (As it doth well appear unto our state,) But to recover of us, by strong hand, And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands So by his father lost: And this, I take it, Is the main motive of our preparations; The source of this our watch; and the chief head Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think, it be no other, but even so: Well may it sort, that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch; so like the king That was, and is, the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye. In the most high and palmy state of Rome, A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.

As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood, Dimsters in the sun; and the moist star, Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands, Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse. And even the like precursor of fierce events,— As harbingers preceding still the fates, And prologue to the omen coming on,— Have heaven and earth together demonstrated Unto our climatures and countrymen.—

Re-enter Ghost.

Let, soft; behold! lo, where it comes again! I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion! If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,

Speak to me: If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do ease, and grace to me,

Speak to me: If thou art privy to thy country's fate, Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,

O, speak! Or, if thou hast uphoarded in thy life Exorted treasure in the womb of earth,

For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death, Speak of it:—stay, and speak.—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partizan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'Tis here!

Hor. 'Tis here!

Mar. 'Tis gone! [Exit Ghost.]

We do it wrong, being so majestic, To offer it the show of violence; For it is, as the air, invulnerable, And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing Upon a fearful summons. I have heard, The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat Awake the god of day; and, at his warning, Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air, The extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine: and of the truth herein This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock. Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, This bird of dawning singeth all night long: And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad; The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike, No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm, So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it. But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad, Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill: Break we our watch up; and, by my advice, Let us impart what we have seen to-night Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him: Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it, As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know, Where we shall find him most convenient.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room of state in the same.

Enter the King, Queen, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green; and that it us befitted To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom To be contracted in one brow of woe; Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature, That we with wisest sorrow think on him, Together with remembrance of ourselves.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen, The imperial jointress of this warlike state, Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,— With one auspicious, and one dropping eye; With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage, In equal scale weighing delight and dole,— Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone With this affair along:—For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,— Holding a weak supposal of our worth; Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death, Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, Colleague'd with this dream of his advantage, He hath not fail'd to pester us with message, Importing the surrender of those lands Lost by his father, with all hands of law, To our most valiant brother.—So much for him. Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting.

Thus much the business is: We have here writ To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,— Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress His further gait herein; in that the levies, The lists, and full proportions, are all made Out of his subject:—and we here despatch You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand, For bearers of this greeting to old Norway; Giving to you no further personal power To business with the king, more than the scope Of these dilated articles allow.

Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. Vol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell. [Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.]

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; What is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: What wouldst thou beg,
Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow
leave,

By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces: spend it at thy will.—
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?
Ham. Not so, my lord, I am too much i'th' sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not, for ever, with thy veiled lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st, 'tis common; all, that live, must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?
Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly: These, indeed, seem,
For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within, which passeth show;
These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term

To do obsequious sorrow: but to persevere
In obstinate condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, or mind impatient;
An understanding simple and unshool'd:

For what, we know, must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse, till he that died to-day,
This must be so. We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe; and think of us
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love,
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet;

I pray thee, stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health, that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruit
A Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.
[Exit King, Queen, Lords, &c. Polonius, and Laertes.]

Ham. O, that this too solid flesh would Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross
nature,

Possesses it merely. That it should come to this
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not betem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth Must I remember? why, she would hang on to
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: And yet, within a month, Let me not think on't;—Frailty, thy name is
man!

A little month; or ere these shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's bow,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,—
O heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with uncle,

My father's brother; but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married:—O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to good;
But break, my heart; for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, BERNARDO, and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!
Ham. I am glad to see you and Horatio,—or do I forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—
Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir.

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it trustful of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.
Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student.
I think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral meats

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
'Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!—
My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. Who?
My lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.
Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.
Ham. Saw I! who?

Fr. My lord, the king your father.
Am. The king my father!
Fr. Season your admiration for a while
 In an attent ear; till I may deliver,
 As the witness of these gentlemen,
 A marvel to you.

Am. For God's love, let me hear.
Fr. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
 Cellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
 A dead waist and middle of the night,
 A thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
 Seated at point, exactly, cap-à-pé,
 Aars before them, and, with solemn march,
 A slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,
 Their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,
 Behin his truncheon's length; whilst they, distill'd
 In sweat, to jelly with the act of fear,
 And dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
 A fearful secrecy impart they did;
 I with them, the third night, kept the watch:
 Ere, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
 And of the thing, each word made true and good,
 Apparition comes: I knew your father;
 And these hands are not more like.

Am. But where was this?
Fr. My lord, upon the platform where we Watch'd.

Am. Did you not speak to it?
Fr. My lord, I did;
 My answer made it none: yet once, methought,
 He lifted up his head, and did address
 His words to motion, like as it would speak:
 Even then, the morning cock crew loud;
 As if the sound it shrunk in haste away,
 And vanish'd from our sight.

Am. 'Tis very strange.
Fr. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true;
 And we did think it writ down in our duty,
 Let us know of it.

Am. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.
 Did you the watch to-night?

Fr. We do, my lord.
Am. Arm'd, say you?

Fr. Arm'd, my lord.
Am. From top to toe?

Fr. My lord, from head to foot.
Am. Then saw you not
 His face?

Fr. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.
Am. What, look'd he frowningly?

Fr. A countenance more
 Sorrow than in anger.
Am. Pale, or red?

Fr. Nay, very pale.
Am. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Fr. Most constantly.
Am. I would, I had been there.
Fr. It would have much amaz'd you.

Am. Very like,
 As you like: Stay'd it long?
Fr. While one with moderate haste might tell
 A hundred.

Fr. Ber. Longer, longer.
Fr. Not when I saw it.

Am. His beard was grizzl'd? no?
Fr. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
 A sable silver'd.

Am. I will watch to-night;
 And chance, 'twill walk again.

Fr. I warrant, it will.
Am. If it assume my noble father's person,
 I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
 And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
 You have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
 And it be tenable in your silence still;
 And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
 And to it an understanding, but no tongue;
 Will requite your loves: So, fare you well:
 Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
 Visit you.

Am. Our duty to your honour.
Am. Your loves, as mine to you: Farewell.

[Exit Horatio, Marcellus, and Bernardo.
 My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
 Doubt some foul play: 'twould, the night were Come!

Till then sit still, my soul: Foul deeds will rise,
 Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.
 [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A room in Polonius' house.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell:
 And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
 And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
 But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
 Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood;
 A violet in the youth of primy nature,
 Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
 The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
 No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more:
 For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
 In thews and bulk; but, as this temple waxes,
 The inward service of the mind and soul
 Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now;
 And now no soil, nor cautel, doth besmirch
 The virtue of his will: but, you must fear,
 His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
 For he himself is subject to his birth:
 He may not, as unvalued persons do,
 Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
 The safety and the health of the whole state;
 And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
 Unto the voice and yielding of that body,
 Whereof he is the head: Then if he says, he loves you,
 It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
 As he in his particular act and place
 May give his saying deed; which is no further,
 Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
 Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
 If with too credent ear you list his songs;
 Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
 And keep you in the rear of your affection,
 Out of the shot and danger of desire.
 The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
 Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes:
 The canker galls the infants of the spring,
 Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
 Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary then: best safety lies in fear;
 Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep
 As watchman to my heart: But, good my brother,
 Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
 Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
 Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
 Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
 And recks not his own read.

Laer. O, fear me not.

I stay too long;—But here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame!
 The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
 And you are staid far: There,—my blessing with you; [Laying his hand on Laertes' head.]

And these few precepts in thy memory
 Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
 Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
 Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
 The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
 Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel;
 But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
 Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware
 Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
 Bear it, that the opposer may beware of thee.
 Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
 Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
 Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
 But not express'd in fancy; rich, nor gaudy;

For the apparel oft proclaims the man ;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be :
For loan oft loses both itself and friend ;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—To thine ownself be true ;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

Farewell ; my blessing season this in thee !
Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you ; go, your servants tend.
Laer. Farewell, Ophelia ; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit Laertes.]

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you ?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord

Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought :
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you ; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous :
If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves my daughter, and your honour :
What is between you ? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection ? puh ! you speak like a green girl,
Unsuited in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them ?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you : think yourself a baby ;
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly ;
Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Wrangling it thus,) you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love,
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it ; go, to go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech,
my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows : these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a making,—
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat scancer of your maiden presence ;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, That he is young ;
And with a larger tether may he walk,
Than may be given you : In few, Ophelia,

Do not believe his vows : for they are brokers
Not of that die which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment's leisure,
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.

Look to't, I charge you ; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly ; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now ?

Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Iodeed ? I heard it not ; it then draws near the season,

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.]

What does this mean, my lord ?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassel, and the swaggering up-spring r
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish do
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom ?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't :

But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom

More honour'd in the breach, than the observ

So, oft it chances in particular men,

Since nature cannot choose his origin,)

As infinite as man may undergo,)

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend !

Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts

Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape,

That I will speak to thee ; I'll call thee, Ha
King, father, royal Dane : O, answer me :

Let me not burst in ignorance ! but tell,
Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,

Have burst their cerements ! why the sepulch
Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,

To cast thee up again ! What may this mean

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire

To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous
It waves you to a more removed ground :

But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak ; then I will follow.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the

Ham. It waves me still

Go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands

Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries

And makes each petty artery in this body hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.— till am I call'd;—unhand me, gentlemen;—

 heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me:— say, away:—Go on, I'll follow thee.

[Ghost beckons.]
[Breaking from them.]
[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.]
 Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.
 Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.
 Hor. Have after:—To what issue will this come?
 Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.
 Hor. Heaven will direct it.
 Mar. Nay, let's follow him.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A more remote part of the platform.

Re-enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak, I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.
 Ham. I will.
 Ghost. My hour is almost come,

When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!
 Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing to what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.
 Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?
 Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;

Joom'd for a certain term to walk the night;
 And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires,
 Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature, are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid

To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
 I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
 Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood;

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres;
 Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
 And each particular hair to stand on end,
 Like quills upon the fretful porcupine;

But this eternal blazon must not be
 To ears of flesh and blood:—List, list, O list!—
 If thou dost ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O heaven!
 Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder?
 Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
 But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings
 as swift

As meditation, or the thoughts of love,
 May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;
 And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
 That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf,
 Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear:

'Tis given out, that, sleeping in mine orchard,
 A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark
 Is by a forged process of my death

Rankly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth,
 The serpent, that did sting thy father's life,
 Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetick soul! my uncle!
 Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
 With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
 (O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
 So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust

The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen:
 O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
 From me, whose love was of that dignity,
 That it went hand in hand even with the row

I made to her in marriage; and to decline
 Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
 To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
 Though lewdness court it in a shape of heav'n;
 So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
 Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
 And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air;
 Brief let me be:—Sleeping within mine orchard,
 My custom always of the afternoon,
 Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
 With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial,
 And in the porches of mine ears did pour
 The leperous distilment; whose effect
 Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
 That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
 The natural gates and alleys of the body;
 And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset
 And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
 The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mios;
 And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
 Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
 All my smooth body.
 Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
 Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd:
 Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
 Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd;
 No reckoning made, but sent to my account
 With all my imperfections on my head:
 O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
 If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
 Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
 A couch for luxury and damned incest.
 But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,
 Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
 Against thy mother aught; leave her to heaven,
 And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
 To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
 The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
 And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire:
 Adieu, adieu, adieu! remember me.
 Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?
 And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, hold, my
 heart;
 And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
 But bear me stiffly up!—Remember thee?
 Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
 In this distracted globe. Remember thee?
 Yea, from the table of my memory
 I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
 All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
 That youth and observation copied there;
 And thy commandment all alone shall live
 Within the book and volume of my brain,
 Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven,
 O most pernicious woman!
 O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
 My tables,—meet it is, I set it down,
 That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
 At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark:
[Writing.]
 So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
 It is, Adieu, adieu! remember me.
 I have sworn't.
 Hor. [Within.] My lord, my lord,—
 Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet,—
 Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!
 Ham. So be it!
 Mar. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!
 Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.
Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.
 Mar. How is't, my noble lord?
 Hor. What news, my lord?
 Ham. O, wonderful!
 Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
 Ham. No;
 You will reveal it.
 Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
 Mar. Nor I, my lord.
 Ham. How say you then; would heart of man once think it!—
 But you'll be secret,—
 Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
 Ham. There's ne'er a villain, dwelling in all
 Denmark,
 But he's an arrant knave.
 Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,
 To tell us this.
 Ham. Why, right; you are in the right;
 And so, without more circumstance at all,
 I hold it fit, that we shake hands, and part:
 3 P

You, as your business, and desire, shall point you;—
For every man hath business, and desire,
Such as it is;—and, for my own poor part,
Look you, I will go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,
Faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,
And much offence too. Touching this vision here,—
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you :
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'er-master it as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one peer request.

Hor. What is't, my lord?

We will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. Mar. My lord, we will not.

Ham. Nay, but swear't.

Hor. In faith,
My lord, not I.

Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, true-penny?

Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,— Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Hic & ubique? then we'll shift our ground:—

Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword :
Swear by my sword,

Never to speak of this that you have heard.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear by his sword.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' earth so fast?

A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good friend Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it
come.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.
But come;—

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy!

How strange or odd soe'er I hear myself,

As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on,—

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, Well, well, we know;—or, We could, an if would;—or, If we list to speak;—or, There be,

if they might;—

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note

That you know ought of me:—This do you swear

So grace and mercy at your most need help you!

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen

With all my love I do commend me to you:

And what so poor a man as Hamlet is

May do, to express his love and friending to you

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.

The time is out of joint;—O cursed spite!

That ever I was born to set it right!

Nay, come, let's go together. [Exit]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A room in Polonius's house.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquiry

Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and ad who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expence; and finding,
By this encompassment and drift of question,

That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it:

Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;
As thus,—I know his father, and his friends,

And, in part, him;—Do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. *And, in part, him;—but, you may say, not
well:*

*But, if't be he I mean, he's very wild;
Addicted so and so;—and there put on him*

*What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him; take heed of that;*

*But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known*

To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarreling, Drabbing:—You may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency;

That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so quaintly,

That they may seem the taints of liberty:

The flash and out-break of a fiery mind;

A savageness in unreclaimed blood,

Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord,

I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:

You laying these slight sullies on my son,

As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,

Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound,

Having ever seen, in the prenominate crimes,

The youth you breathe of, guilty, be assur'd,

He closes with you in this consequence;

Good sir, or so; or friend, or gentleman,—

According to the phrase, or the addition,
Of man, and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this?—He does—

What was I about to say?—By the mass, I about to say something:—Where did I leave?

Rey. At, closes in the consequence.

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—Ay, marry

He closes with you thus:—I know the gentleman

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day,

*Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you
There was he gaming; there o'ertook in his rouse*

There falling out at tennis; or, perchance,

I saw him enter such a house of sale,

(Videlicet, a brothel), or so forth.—

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,

With windlaeces, and with assays of bias,

By indirections find directions out;

So, by my former lecture and advice,

Shall you my son: You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord,—

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Pol. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his musick.

Pol. Well, my lord.

[Exit.]

Enter OPHELIA.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?

Pol. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Pol. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet, my brother Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd; hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd, garter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle; pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other; and with a look so piteous in purport, if he had been loosed out of hell, to speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Pol. My lord, I do not know; truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Pol. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard; and goes he to the length of all his arm;

and, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

he falls to such perusal of my face,

as he would draw it. Long staid he so;

last,—a little shaking of mine arm,

and thrice his head thus waving up and down,— rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

as it did seem to shatter all his bulk,

and end his being: That done, he lets me go;

and, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

and out o'doors he went without their helps,

and, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the king.

Pol. His is the very ecstasy of love;

whose violent property foredoes itself,

and leads the will to desperate undertakings,

as oft as any passion under heaven,

that does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—

but, have you given him any hard words of late?

Pol. No, my good lord; but, as you did command, he did repel his letters, and denied access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.

Pol. Am sorry, that with better heed and judgment, had not quoted him: I fear'd, he did but trifle,

and meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy!

seems, it is as proper to our age

to cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,

as it is common for the younger sort to lack discretion. Come, go we to the king;

his must be known; which, being kept close,

might move

more grief to hide, than hate to utter love.

Pol. Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A room in the castle.

Enter King, Queen, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern!

forever that we much did long to see you, he need, we have to use you, did provoke to hasty sending. Something have you heard of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it, since not the exterior nor the inward man resembles that it was: What it should be, more than his father's death, that thus hath put him so much from the understanding of himself, cannot dream of: I entreat you both, that,—being of so young days brought up with him, and, since, so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,—that you vouchsafe your rest here in our court some little time: so by your companies to draw him on to pleasures; and to gather, so much as from occasion you may glean, whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus: that, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;

And, sure I am, two men there are not living, to whom he more adheres. If it will please you to show us so much gentry, and good will, as to expend your time with us a while, for the supply and profit of our hope, your visitation shall receive such thanks as fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties might, by the sovereign power you have of us, put your dread pleasures more into command than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey; and here give up ourselves, in the full bent, to lay our service freely at your feet, to be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz:

And I beseech you instantly to visit my too much changed son.—Go, some of you, and bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our practices, pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

[Exeunt Ros. Guil. and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,

both to my God, and to my gracious king:

And I do think, (or else this brain of mine hunts not the trail of policy so sure as it hath us'd to do,) that I have found the very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; and do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;

my news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.

[Exit Polonius.]

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found the head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main;

his father's death, and our o'er-hasty marriage.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends!

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Pol. Most fair return of greetings, and desires.

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress his nephew's levies; which to him appear'd

to be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;

but, better look'd into, he truly found it was against your highness: Whereat griev'd,— that so his sickness, age, and impotence, was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests

on Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys;

receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine,

makes vow before his uncle, never more to give the assay of arms against your majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee;

and his commission, to employ those soldiers,

so levied as before, against the Polack:

with an entreaty, herein further shown,

[Gives a paper.]

That it might please you to give quiet pass through your dominions for this enterprise;

on such regards of safety, and allowance,

as therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;

and, at our more consider'd time, we'll read,

answer, and think upon this business.

Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour:

go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:

most welcome home! [Exeunt Pol. and Cor.]

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam, to expostulate

What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night, night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore,—since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,—
I will be brief: Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it: for, to define true madness,
What is't, but to be nothing else but mad:
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true, 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis, 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him then: and now remains,
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect;
For this effect, defective, comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend.
I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: Now gather, and surmise.
—To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia,—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautified is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.—Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.—

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay a while; I will be faithful.—

Doubt thou, the stars are fire;

Doubt, that the sun doth move:

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt, I love.

[Reads.]

*O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best,
O most best, believe it. Adieu.*

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me:
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,) what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk, or table-book;
Or given my heart a working mute and dumb;
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus did I bespeak:
*Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be:* and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,)
Fell into a sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think, 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I'd fain know
that,)

That I have positively said, 'Tis so,

When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
[Pointing to his head and shoulder.]

If circumstances lead me, I will find

Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed

Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours
together,

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to his
Be you and I behind an arras than;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter HAMLET, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretches comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away;
I'll board him presently:—O, give me leave.—

[Exit King, Queen, and Attendants.]

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes is to be one man pick'd out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dog, being a god, kissing carrion,—Have you

daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i'the sun: conception

a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] Still harp on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first;

said, I was a fishmonger: He is far gone, far gone and, truly, in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again.

—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words!

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful

lack of wit, together with most weak hams;

which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it said to set down; for yourself, sir, shall be as old as an arm, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there's method in it. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air,

lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o'the air.—How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that o-madness hits on, which reason and sanity could so prosperously be deliver'd of. I will leave him and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir!

[To Poloni.]

Guil. My honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou

Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, do ye

both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not very happy;

On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. 'Faith, her privates we.

Iam. In the secret parts of fortune? O, most she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord; but that the world's grown oost.

Ham. Then is doomsday near: But your news not true. Let me question more in particular: hat have you, my good friends, deserved at the ods of fortune, that she sends you to prison her?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many fines, wards, and dungeous; Denmark being of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is thing either good or bad, but thinking makes it: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; s too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, d count myself a king of infinite space; were it t that I have had dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for a very substance of the ambitious is merely the adow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and ht a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies; and our onarchs, and outstretch'd heroes, the beggars' adows: Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with e rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an mest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, the beaten way of friendship, what make you : Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; t I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks e too dear, a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? : it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? ome, come; deal justly with me: come, come; y, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Any thing—but to the purpose. You were nt for; and there is a kind of confession in your oks, which your modesties have not craft enough : colour: I know, the good king and queen have nt for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conre you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the nsonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ee-preserved love, and by what more dear a better eposer could charge you withal, be even and diet with me, whether you were sent for, or no.

Ros. What say you? [To Guildenstern.]

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.]

if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticiation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to e king and queen moult no feather. I have of te, (but, wherefore, I know not,) lost all my irth, forgone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, e goes so heavily with my disposition, that this oodly frame, the earth, seems to me a steril prosonatory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look u, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majesical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears o other thing to me, than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is an! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, ow like a god! the beauty of the world! the paagon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this antience of dust? man delights not me,—nor sman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem e say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humourous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o'the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an airy of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapp'd for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them,) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sio, to tarre them on to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for arguement, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys cawry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange: for my uncle is king of Denmark; and those, that would make mouths at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come then: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb; lest my exteot to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west; when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern;—and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Haply, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o'Moodyay morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome.—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass, —

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical, historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel,—what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,—One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.]

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I am a daughter, that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why, As by lot, God wot, and then, you know, It came to pass, As most like it was.—The first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! Why, thy face is valanced since I saw thee last; Com'st thou to beard me in Denmark?—What! my young lady and mistress! By-'r-lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not crack'd within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll 'e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: We'll have a speech straight: Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

I Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,—but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once: for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments, in such matters, cried in the top of mine,) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there were no sallets in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might incite the author of affection: but call'd it, an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Aeneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see;—
The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,—

'tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

*The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couched in the ominous horse,
Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd
With heraldry more dismal; head to foot
Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons;
Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,
That lend a tyrannous and a damned light
To their lord's murder: Roasted in wrath, and fire,
And thus o'er-sized with congregate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus
Old grandsire Priam seeks:—So proceed you.*

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

I Play. Anon he finds him

*Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command: Unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage, strikes wide;
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerv'd father falls. Then senseless Ilium, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword
Which was declining on the milky head
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i'the air to stick:
So, as a painted tyrant Pyrrhus stood;
And, like a neutral to his will and matter,*

Did nothing.

*But, as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death; anon, the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause
A roused vengeance sets him new a work;
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars' armour, Jorg'd for proof eterne,
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.—
Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you g
In general synod, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and fellyes from her wheel,
And bow the round nave down the hill of h
ven,*

As low as to the fends!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.
Pr'ythee, say on:—He's for a jig, or a tale
bawdry, or he sleeps:—say on: come to Hea!

I Play. *But who, ah woe! had seen the mo
queen—*

Ham. The mobled queen?

Pol. That's good; good queen is good.

I Play. *Run barefoot up and down, threat'n
the flames*

*With hisson rheum; a clout upon that head,
Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-teened loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;
Who this had seen, with tongue in vacuum steep,
'Gainst fortune's state would treason have nounc'd:*

*But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus naked multicolour sport
In mingling with his sword her husband's limb:
The instant burst of clamour that she made,
(Unless things mortal move them not at all,
Would have made mitch the burning eyes of hea
And passion in the gods.*

Pol. Look, whether he has not turn'd his col and has tears in's eyes.—Pr'ythee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the
of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see players well bestowed? Do you hear, let her well used; for they are the abstract, and chronicles, of the time: After your death you better have a bad epitaph, than their ill re while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to desert.

Ham. Odd's bodikin, man, much better: every man after his desert, and who shall 's whipping? Use them after your own honour dignity: The less they deserve, the more mer in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

[Exit Polonius, with some of the Pla
Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a pla morrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend; can play the murder of Gonzago?

I Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You co for a need, study a speech of some dozen or six lines, which I would set down, and insert it could you not?

I Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My friends, [To Ros. and Guild.] I'll leave you night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenst
Ham. Ay, so, God be wi'you:—Now I am al
O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!
Is it not monstrous, that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit,
That, from her working, all his visage wann'd
Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
With forms to his conceit? And all for nothing
For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? What would he d be the motive and the cue for passion, at I have? He would drown the stage with tears,

d cleave the general ear with horrid speech;
he mad the guilty, and appal the free,
sfound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed,
a variety of eyes and ears.

I,
lull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
ce John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, d can say nothing; no, not for a king,
on whose property, and most dear life,
I am'd defeat was made. Am I a coward?
he calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
eaks off my beard, and blows it in my face?
eeps as to the lungs? Who does me this?

ay, I should take it: for it cannot be, t I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall make oppression bitter; or, ere this, ould have fatted all the region kites
ith this slave's offal: Bloody, bawdy villain!
orseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!
hy, what an ass am I! This is most brave;
at I, the son of a dear father murder'd,

Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion!

Fie upon't! foh! About, my brains! Humph! I have heard,

That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul, that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions:
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players

Play something like the murder of my father,
Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks;
I'll tent him to the quick; if he do blench,
I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen,
May be a devil: and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps,
Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,
(As he is very potent with such spirits,)
Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
More relative than this: The play's the thing,
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

[Exit.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A room in the castle.

ter King, Queen, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference at from him, why he puts on this confusion;
rating so harshly all his days of quiet with turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted;
at from what cause he will by no means speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sound'd;
at, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
f his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands, ost free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him
o any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
Ve o'er-raught on the way; of these we told him;
nd there did seem in him a kind of joy
b hear of it: They are about the court;
nd, as I think, they have already order his night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true:
nd he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,
o hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me

o hear him so inclin'd.
ood gentlemen, give him a further edge,
nd drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too:
or we have closely sent for Hamlet hither;
hat he, as 'twere by accident, may here
sfront Ophelia:

ter father, and myself (lawful espials,)
Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge;
nd gather by him, as he is behav'd,
Ft be the affliction of his love, or no,
hat thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you:
nd, for your part, Ophelia, I do wish,
hat your good beauties be the happy cause
f Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope, your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again, fo both your honours.

Pol. Madam, I wish it may.
[Exit Queen.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here:—G:acious, so please
you,

We will bestow ourselves:—Read on this book;
[To Ophelia.

That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,—
'Tis too much prov'd,—that, with devotion's visage,
And pious action, we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

King. O, 'tis too true! how smart
A lash that speech doth give my conscience!

The harlot's cheek, beautied with plast'ring art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Than is my deed to my most painted word:
O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord.
[Exit King and Polonius.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:—
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
The clings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And, by opposing, end them:—To die,—to sleep,—
No more;—and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ach, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die:—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: There's the respect,
That makes calamity of so long life:

For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life;
But that the dread of something after death,—
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns,—puzzles the will;
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprizes of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!
The fair Ophelia:—Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Ham. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well.
Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
 That I have longed long to re-deliver;
 I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
 I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well,
 you did;

And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd
 As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
 Take these again; for to the noble mind,
 Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.
 There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery; Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not born me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious;
 with more offences at my beck, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in: What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us: Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in's own house.
 Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry; Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell: Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them.
 To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance: Go to; I'll no more of 't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit Hamlet.]

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
 The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue,
 sword:

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
 The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
 The observ'd of all observers! quite, quite down!
 And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
 That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
 Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
 Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
 That match'd form and feature of blown youth,
 Blasted with ecstasy: O, woe is me!
 To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
 Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
 Was not like madness. There's something in his soul,

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
 And, I do doubt, the hatch, and the disclose,
 Will be some danger: Which for to prevent,

I have, in quick determination,
 Thus set it down; He shall with speed to Engle
 For the demand of our neglected tribute:
 Haply, the seas, and countries different,
 With variable objects, shall expel
 This something-settled matter in his heart;
 Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
 From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: But yet I do believe,
 The origin and commencement of his grief
 Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophel
 You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
 We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
 But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
 Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
 To show his grief; let her be round with him;
 And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
 Of all their conference: if she find him not,
 To England send him; or confine him, where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
 Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A hall in the same.

Enter HAMLET, and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but you must think it as you would say it, and your mouth it, as many of our players do, I have lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do saw the air too much with your hand, thus;
 use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, must acquire and beget a temperance, that give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ear the groundlings; who, for the most part, are pable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows, noise: I would have such a fellow whipp'd o'er-doing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: I you, avoid it.

I Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your discretion be your tutor: suit the action to word, the word to the action; with this spe-observance, that you o'erstep not the modest nature: for any thing so overdone is from the puse of playing, whose end, both at the first,
 now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirup to nature; to show virtue her own feet scorn her own image, and the very age and of the time, his form and pressure. Now 't overdone, or come tardy off, though it make unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judic-grieve; the censure of which one, must, in y allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others.
 there be players, that I have seen play,—and he others praise, and that highly,—not to speaprofanely, that, neither having the accent of chtians, nor the gait of christian, pagan, nor n have so strutted, and bellowed, that I have tho-some of nature's journey-men had made men, not made them well, they imitated humanitabominably.

I Play. I hope, we have reform'd that in-ferently with us.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let th that play your clowns, speak no more than is down for them; for there be of them, that themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of ba-spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean t-some necessary question of the play be then considered: that's villainous; and shows a n-pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, y you ready.— [Exeunt Play.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this p-
 of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.— [Exit.]
 Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. Ay, my lord. [Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]
Ham. What, ho; Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:
 that advancement may I hope from thee,
 at no revenue hast, but thy good spirits, feed, and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

Let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp;
 I crook the pregnant hinges of the knee, were thrift may follow fawning. Dust thou hear?
 as my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
 I could of men distinguish her election,
 I hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
 man, that fortune's buffets and rewards at ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those, whose blood and judgment are so well co-mingled,
 at they are not a pipe for fortune's finger sound what stop she please: Give me that man at is not passion's slave, and I will wear him my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,

I do thee.—Something too much of this.—
 ere is a play to-night before the king;
 a scene of it comes near the circumstance,
 which I have told thee of my father's death.

By thee, when thou seest that act a-foot, go with the very comment of thy soul serve my uncle: if his occulted guilt do not itself unkenneled in one speech, is a damned ghost that we have seen;
 and my imaginations are as foul

Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note:
 for I mine eyes will rivet to his face;
 and after, we will both our judgments join in censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord:
 he steal aught, the whilst this play is playing,
 I scape detecting, I will pay the theft.
Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:
 do you a place.

March. A flourish. Enter King, Queen,
 POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i'faith; of the camelion's dish:
 at the air, promise-cramm'd: You cannot feed on so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet;
 we words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you play'd e'e in the university, you say? [To Polonius.]

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was kill'd i' the Capitol; Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so callous a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.
Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.]

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?
 [Lying down at Ophelia's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think, I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids'
 heads.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: But, by-'r-lady, he must build churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O,
the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb show follows.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away.
 The poisoner woos the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling a while, but, in the end, accepts his love. [Exeunt.]

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mitching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him:
 Be not you ashamed to show, he'll not chame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; I'll mark
 the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
 Here stooping to your clemency,
 We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a King and a Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart gone round

Neptune's salt wash, and Tellur's orb'd ground;
 And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen;
 About the world have times twelve thirties been;
 Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands,
 Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
 Make us again count o'er, ere love be done!

But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,
 So far from cheer, and from your former state,
 That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must:
 For women fear too much, even as they love;
 And women's fear and love hold quantity;
 In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;
 And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
 Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
 Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shuttly too;

My operant powers their functions leave to do:
 And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
 Honour'd, below'd; and haply, one as kind
 For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!
 Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
 In second husband let me be accurst!

None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move,

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;

A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe, you think what now you speak;

But, what we do determine, oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory;
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark, his favourite flies;
The poor advanced makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend:
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I begun,—
Our wills, and fates, do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:

So think thou wilt no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.
P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me, day, and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blinks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me, lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now,—

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.]

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit.]

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest;
no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, how? Typically. 'This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the gall'd jade wince, our withers are unwrung.—

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you mistake your husbands.—Begin, murderer;—leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come:—

—The croaking raven

Doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecat's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magick and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the poison into the sleeper's ear.]
Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for his ear.
His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, written in very choice Italian: You shall see a how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light!—away!

Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play:

For some must watch, while some must sleep:
Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers,
the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me,
two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some musick; come recorders.—

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.—

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Come, some musick.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word
you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous dis-

pered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, pluck him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is the right breed. If it shall please you to make a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon, and my relief shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my diseased: But, sir, such answer as I can you shall command; or, rather, as you say, mother: therefore no more, but to the matter:
mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; Your behaviour struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish mother!—But is there no sequel at the heel this mother's admiration? impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her chamber; ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause distemper? you do, surely, bar the door own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your

d.
am. Sir, I lack advancement.
os. How can that be, when you have the voice he king himself for your succession in Den-k I am. Ay, sir, but, While the grass grows,—the verb is something musty.

Enter the Players, with recorders.

the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw a you:—Why do you go about to recover the d of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?
uil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my is too unmannerly.

am. I do not well understand that. Will you r upon this pipe?

uil. My lord, I cannot.

am. I pray you.

uil. Believe me, I cannot.

am. I do beseech you.

uil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

am. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ven-es with your fingers and thumb, give it breath
d your mouth, and it will discourse most elo-at musick. Look you, these are the stops.

uil. But these cannot I command to any utter-e of harmony; I have not the skill.

am. Why, look you now, how unworthy a g you make of me? You would play upon me; d would seem to know my stops; you would ck out the heart of my mystery; you would ad me from my lowest note to the top of my spass: and there is much musick, excellent voice, his little organ; yet cannot you make it speak.
ood, do you think, I am easier to be play'd on a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, ugh you can fret me, you cannot play upon

Enter POLONIUS.

d bless you, sir!

ol. My lord, the queen would speak with you,
I presently.

am. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in pe of a camel?

ol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

am. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

ol. It is back'd like a weasel.

am. Or, like a whale?

ol. Very like a whale.

am. Then will I come to my mother by and —They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will be by and by.

ol. I will say so. [Exit Polonius.]

am. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends.
[Exit Ros. Guil. Hor. &c.] is now the very witching time of night;

hen churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out ntagion to this world: Now could I drink hot
blood,

id do such business as the bitter day ould quake to look on. Soft; now to my mother.—

heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever se soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:

me be cruel, not unnatural:

will speak daggers to her, but use none;

y tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:

ow in my words soever she be shent,

give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A room in the same.

ter King, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDEN-STERN.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you;
your commission will forthwith despatch,
ad he to England shall along with you:
he terms of our estate may not endure ward so near us, as doth hourly grow as of his lunas.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:

ost holy and religious fear it is,

keep those many many bodies safe,

That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,
With all the strength and armour of the mind,
To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more
That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it, with it: it is a mossy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;
For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guil.

We will haste us.

[Exit Ros. and Guil.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:
Behind the arras I'll convey myself,
To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax him
home:

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet, that some more audience, than a mother,
Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King.

Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Polonius.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will;
My stronger guilt defeats my stroug intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood?
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,
To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy,
But to confront the visage of offence?

And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,—
To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—

That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.

May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice;
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above;

There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?

Yet what can it, when one can not repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed soul! that, struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd! Help, angels, make assay!

Bow, stubborn knees! and, heart, with strings of steel,

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe!—
All may be well!

[Retires, and kneels.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying;
And now I'll do't;—And so he goes to heaven:
And so am I reveng'd? That would be scann'd:
A villain kills my father; and, for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
And how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,

When he is fit and season'd for his passage?

No.

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent:

When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;

Or in the incestuous pleasures of his bed;

At gaming, swearing; or about some act

That has no relish of salvation in't:

Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven;

And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black,

As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:

This physick but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.]

The King rises, and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Another room in the same.

Enter Queen and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him:

Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with;

And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.

Pray you, be round with him.

Queen. I'll warrant you;

Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Polonius hides himself.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother; what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so:

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;

And,—would it were not so!—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;

You go not, till I set you up a glass

Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help!

Ham. How now! a rat?

[Draws.]

Dead, for a ducat, dead.

[Hamlet makes a pass through the arras.]

Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain.

[Falls, and dies.]

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay, I know not:

Is it the king?

[Lifts up the arras, and draws forth Polonius.]

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good mother,

As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!

[To Polonius.]

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:

Thou find'st, to be too busy, is some danger.—

Leave wringing of your hands: Peace; sit you down,

And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,

If it be made of penetrable stuff;

If damned custom have not braz'd it so,

That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;

Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose

From the fair forehead of an innocent love,

And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows

As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed,
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me, what act,

That roars so loud, and thunders in the index!

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.

See, what a grace was seated on this brow:

Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;

A station like the herald Mercury,

New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;

A combination, and a form, indeed,

Where every god did seem to set his seal,

To give the world assurance of a man:

This was your husband.—Look you now,

follows:

Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear,

Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed

And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eye

You cannot call it, love: for, at your age,

The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble

And waits upon the judgment; And what judg-

Would step from this to this? Sense, sure

have,

Else, could you not have motion: But, sure sense

Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err;

Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd,

But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,

To serve in such a difference. What devil w

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind

Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,

Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans al

Or but a sickly part of one true sense

Could not so mope.

O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious h

If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,

To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,

And melt in her own fire: proclaim no sharr

When the compulsive ardour gives the charge

Since frost itself as actively doth burn,

And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no

Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;

And there I see such black and grained spot

As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to li

In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed;

Stew'd in corruption; honeying and making

Over the nasty styte;—

Queen. O, speak to me no

These words like daggers enter in mine ears

No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer, and a vi

A slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe

Of your precedent lord:—a vice of kings:

A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;

That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,

And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A king

Of shreds and patches:—

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings:

You heavenly guards!—What would your gr

figure?

Queen. Alas, he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to

That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by

The important acting of your dread command

O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget: This visitation

Is but to what thy almost blunted purpose.

But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:

O, step between her and her fighting soul;

Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works;

Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you,

Queen. Alas, how is't with you?

at you do bend your eye on vacancy,
 d with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
 with at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
 d, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
 or bedded hair, like life in excrescements, arts up, and stands on end. O gentle son, on the heat and flame of thy distemper rinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him! on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!

is form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
 ould make them capable.—Do not look upon me;
 st, with this piteous action, you convert y stern effects: then what I have to do ill want true colour; tears, perchance, for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing, but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!

y father, in his habit as he liv'd!
 ook, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

[Exit Ghost.]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain!
 his bodiless creation ecstasy
 y cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!

ly pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
 nd makes as healthful music: It is not madness, hat I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
 nd I the matter will re-word; which madness ould gambol from. Mother, for love of grace, ay not that flattering unctio to your soul,
 hat not your trespass, but my madness speaks:
 t will but ski and film the ulcerous place;
 Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
 nfects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
 lepent what's past; avoid what is to come;
 nd do not spread the compost on the weeds,
 o make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue:
 for in the fatness of these pursy times,
 irtue itself of vice must pardon beg;
 fea, curb and woo, for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worse part of it, and live the purer with the other half.

Food night: but go not to my uncle's bed;

Assume a virtue, if you have it not.

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat

Of habit's devil, is angel yet in this;

That to the use of actions fair and good

He likewise gives a frock, or livery,

That aptly is put on: Refrain to-night;

And that shall lend a kind of easiness

To the next abstinence: the next more easy:
 For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
 And either curb the devil, or throw him out
 With wondrous potency. Once more, good night!
 And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
 I'll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord,

[Pointing to Polonius.]

I do repent: But heaven hath pleas'd it so,—

To punish me with this, and this with me,

That I must be their scourge and minister.

I will bestow him, and will answer well

The death I gave him. So, again, good night!—

I must be cruel, only to be kind:

Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.—

But one word more, good lady.

Queen.

What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I hid you do:

Let the hoat king tempt you again to bed;

Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you, his mouse;

And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,

Or padding in your neck with his damn'd floggers,

Make you to ravel all this matter out,

That I essentially am not in madness,

But mad in craft. 'Twere good, you let him know:

For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,

Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,

Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?

No, in despite of sense, and secrecy,

Unpeg the basket on the house's top,

Let the birds fly; and, like the famous ape,

To try conclusions, in the basket creep,

And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe

What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack,

I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two school-

fellows,—

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd,—

They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,

And marshal me to knavery: Let it work;

For 'tis the sport to have the engineer

Hoist with his own petar: and it shall go hard,

But I will delve one yard below their mines,

And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,

When in one line two crafts directly meet.—

This man shall set me packing.

I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room:—

Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor

Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,

Who was in life a foolish prating knave.

Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you:—

Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; Hamlet dragging in Polonius.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same.

Enter King, Queen, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs; these profound heaves

You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them:

Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—

[To Ros. and Guil. who go out.]

Ab. my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier: In his lawless fit,

Behind the arras hearing something stir,

Whips out his rapier, cries, A rat! u rat!

And, in his brainish apprehension, kills

The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!

It had been so with us, had we been there:

His liberty is full of threats to all;

To you yourself, to us, to every one.

Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd!

It will be laid to us, whose providence

Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,

This mad young man: but, so much was our love,

We would not understand what was most fit;

But, like the owner of a foul disease,

To keep it from divulging, let it feed

Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd:

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore,

Among a mineral of metals base,

Shows itself pure; he works for what is doer.

King. O Gertrude, come away!

The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,

But we will ship him hence; and this vile deed

We must, with all our majesty and skill,

Both countenance and excuse.—Ho! Guildenstern!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid:

Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,

And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:

Go, seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body

Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slender,—
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air.—O; come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Another room in the same.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. — Safely stow'd,— [Ros. &c. within.
Hamlet! lord Hamlet!] But soft,—what noise?
who calls on Hamlet? O, here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence,

And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge!—what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouth'd, to be last swallow'd: When he needs
what you have glean'd, it is but squeezing you, and, spunge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord?

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Another room in the same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.
How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose?
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And, where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: Diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

Or not at all.—How now? what hath befallen?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten:
a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet:
we eat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that he eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i'the old place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him within this month, you shall nose him as you up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendant.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee
hence

With fiery quickness: Therefore, prepare thyself:
The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
Ths associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Go.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.—
Ham. I see a cherub, that sees them.—
Come; for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: Father and mother is not and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, mother. Come, for England.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with spice

abroad;
Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night:
Away; for every thing is seal'd and done
That else leans on the affair: Pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.
And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught;
(As my great power thereof may give thee sense
Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us), thou mayst not coldly set
Our sovereign process; which imports at full,
By letters conjuring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England
For like the hectick in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me: Till I know 'tis done,
Howe'er my haps, my joys will ne'er begin. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

A plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king.
Tell him, that, by his licence, Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye,
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on. [Exeunt Fortinbras and Forces.

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir?

I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. What's the business, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras
Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir?
Or some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, sir, and with no addition
We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole, anker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Oph. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,

If not debate the question of this straw:
s is the imposthume of much wealth and peace;
it inward breaks, and shows no cause without yet the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Oph. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit Captain.]

Ham. Will't please you go, my lord?
Ham. I will be with you straight. Go a little before.

[Exit Ros. and Guil.]

On all occasions do inform against me, and spur my dull revenge! What is a man, his chief good, and market of his time,
but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more.

He, that made us with such large discourse, making before, and after, gave us not at capability and godlike reason to fust in us unus'd. Now, whether it be oblivion, or some craven scruple of thinking too precisely on the event,— thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,

and ever, three parts coward,—I do not know
by yet I live to say, This thing's to do;

but I have cause, and will, and strength, and means,
to do't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me:

Witness, this army of such mass, and charge,
led by a delicate and tender prince;
whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd,
makes mouths at the invisible event;

proposing what is mortal, and unsure,
all that fortune, death, and danger, dare, to do for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,
is not to stir without great argument;
and greatly to find quarrel in a straw, when honour's at the stake. How stand I then,
that have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
excitements of my reason, and my blood, to let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see the imminent death of twenty thousand men, that, for a fantasy, and trick of fame,
go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot whereon the numbers cannot try the cause, which is not tomb enough, and continent,
to hide the slain?—O, from this time forth,
my thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!

[Exit.]

SCENE V.

Elsinore. A room in the castle.

Enter Queen and HORATIO.

Queen.—I will not speak with her.

Hor. She is impertunate; indeed, distract;
her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Hor. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears,

her father's tricks i'the world; and hems, and beats her
heart;

perns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,
that carry but half sense: her speech is nothing, but the unshaped use of it doth move

the hearers to collection; they aim at it, and botch the words up fit to their own thoughts;

which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield
them,

indeed would make one think, there might be thought,
though nothing were, yet much unhappily.

Queen. 'Twere good, she were spoken with; for she may strew

dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds:
let her come in. [Exit Horatio.]

Go my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
each toy seems prologue to some great amiss;

so full of artless jealousy is guilt,
it spills itself, in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia?

Oph. How should I your true love know

From another one?

By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon. [Singing.]

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

He is dead and gone, lady,

He is dead and gone;

At his head a grass-green turf,

At his heels a stone.

O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,
[Sings.]

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded all with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God'ield you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray, let us have no words of this; but when they ask you, what it means, say you this:

Good morrow, 'tis Saint Valentine's day,

All in the morning betime,

And I a maid at your window,

To be your Valentine:

Then up he rose, and don'd his clothes,

And dupp'd the chamber door;

Let in the maid, that out a maid

Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, without an oath, I'll make an end
on't:

By Gis, and by Saint Charity,

Alack, and fie for shame!

Young men will do't, if they come to't;

By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to wed:

[He answers.]

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,

An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient:
but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they should lay him i'the cold ground: My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night.

[Exit.]

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.]

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death: And now behold,
O Gertrude, Gertrude,

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions! First, her father slain;

Next, your son gone; and he most violent author
Of his own just remove: The people muddled,

Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts, and
whispers,

For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly,

In hoggish-mugger to inter him: Poor Ophelia
Divided from herself, and her fair judgment;

Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts.
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France:

Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear

With pestilent speeches of his father's death;

Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our person to arraign

In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering piece, in many places
Gives me superfluous death! [A noise within.] Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Attend.
Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door:
What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord;
The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste,
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'erbears your officers! The rabble call him, lord;
And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry, Choose we! Laertes shall be king!
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!
O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.]

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Dan. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.]

Laer. I thank you:—keep the door.—O thou vile
king,

Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that's calm, proclaims me bastard;

Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot
Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?—
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person;
There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes,
Whythou art thus incens'd;—Let him go, Gertrude;— Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with:
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation: To this point I stand,—
That both the worlds I give to negligence,
Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd
Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world's:

And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,

They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,

If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge,
That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms;

And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican,
Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child, and a true gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment 'pear,
As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Enter OPHELIA, fantastically dressed with straws and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears, seven times salt,

Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!—
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with woe,
Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May,
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!—
O heavens! is't possible, a young maid's wit
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in love; and, where 'tis fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him barefac'd on the bier,
They no monny, noney hey noney;
And in his grave rain'd many a tear.

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst per-revenge,
It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing, Down a-down, an you him a-down-a. O; how the wheel becomes it the false steward, that stole his master's daughter!

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance;
pray you, love, remember: and there is pansy,
that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness; thoughts and membrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbin—there's rue for you; and here's some for me may call it, herb of grace o'Sundays:—you wear your rue with a difference.—There's a —I would give you some violets; but they with-all, when my father died:—They say, he good end,—

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy,—

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell
She turns to favour, and to prettiness.

Oph. And will he not come again?
And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead,
Go to thy death-bed,
He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,
All flaxen was his poll:
He is gone, he is gone,
And we cast away moan;
God 'a mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls! I pray God. G
wi'you! [Exit Op]

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and If by direct or by collateral hand
They find as touch'd, we will our kingdom g
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours
To you in satisfaction; but, if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so;
His means of death, his obscure funeral,—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his b
No noble rite, nor formal ostentation,—
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to ear
That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall.
And, where the offence is, let the great axe f
I pray you, go with me. [Ex]

SCENE VI.

Another room in the same.

Enter HORATIO, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with Serv. Sailors, sir;
They say, they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in.— [Exit]
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

1 Sail. God bless you, sir.

For. Let him bless thee too.

(Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador it was bound for England; if your name be Helio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads.] Horatio, when thou shalt have ordered this, give these fellows some means to the king; y have letters for him. Ere we were two days old sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us notice: Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on compell'd valour; and in the grapple I boarded him: on the instant, they got clear of our ship; so I became their prisoner. They have dealt with like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they do; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king see the letters I have sent, and repair thou to me as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear, will make thee dumb; yet they are much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England; of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet.

me, I will give you way for these your letters; and do't the speedier, that you may direct me to him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.

Another room in the same.

Enter King and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal, and you must put me in your heart for friend; that you have heard, and with a knowing ear, that he, which hath your noble father slain, accus'd my life.

Laer. It well appears:—But tell me, why you proceeded not against these feats, so criminal and so capital in nature, that by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else, so mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons; which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsnew'd, at yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother, lives almost by his looks; and for myself, by virtue, or my plague, be it either which, is so conjunctive to my life and soul, that, as the star moves not but in his sphere, could not but by her. The other motive, why to a publick count I might not go, is the great love the general gender bear him; who, dipping all his faults in their affection, forsake like the spring that turneth wood to stone, convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows, so slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, would have reverted to my bow again, and not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost; a sister driven into desperate terms; whose worth, if praises may go back again, good challenger on mount of all the age or her perfections:—But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think, that we are made of stuff so flat and dull, that we can let our beard be shook with danger, and think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more: lov'd your father, and we love ourself; and that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—how now? what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet: his to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say: I saw them not; they were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them from him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them:—leave us. [Exit Messenger.]

[Reads.] High and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow I shall beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and most strange return. Hamlet.

What should this mean! Are all the rest come back? Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. Naked,—And, in a postscript here, he says, alone: Can you advise me?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come; it warms the very sickness in my heart, that I shall live and tell him to his teeth, Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,—As how should it so!—how otherwise!—Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord; So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—

As checking at his voyage, and that he means No more to undertake it,—I will work him To an exploit, now ripe in my device, Under the which he shall not choose but fall: And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe; But even his mother shall unchange the practice, And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd; The rather, if you could devise it so, That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right. You have been talk'd of since your travel much, And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts Did not together pluck such envy from him, As did that one; and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very ribband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears, Than settled age his sables, and his weeds, Importing health and graveness.—Two mantles since, Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French, And they can well on horseback: but this gallant Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat; And to such wondrous doing brought his horse, As he had been incorps'd and demi-natur'd With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought, That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks, Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed, And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you; And gave you such a masterly report, For art and exercise in your defence, And for your rapier most especial, That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed, If one could match you: the scrimers of their nation, He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, If you oppos'd them: Sir, this report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy, That he could nothing do, but wish and beg Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you. Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you? Or are you like the painting of a sorrow, A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think, you did not love your father;

But that I know, love is begun by time; And that I see, in passages of proof, Time qualifies the spark and fire of it. There lives within the very flame of love A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it; And nothing is at a like goodness still; For goodness, growing to a plurisy, Dies in his own too-much: That we would do, We should do when we would; for this would change,

And hath abatements and delays as many,
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this should be like a spendthrift sigh,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer:
Hamlet comes back; What would you undertake,
To show yourself in deed your father's son
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church.
King. No place, indeed, should murdersanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber:
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine,
together,

And wager o'er your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice,
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't:
And, for the purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal, that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion; that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,
May fit us to our shape: if this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assay'd; therefore, this project
Should have a back, or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft!—let me see:—
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning, —
I ha't:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,

(As make your bouts more violent to that end,)
And that he calls for drink, I'll have preferr'd him
A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there. But stay, what noise

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's he
So fast they follow:—Your sister's drown'd, Laert Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows ascaunt the brook
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream
Therewith fantastick garlands did she make
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purpl
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call ther
There on the pendant boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide
And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;
Which time, she chanted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indu'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, she is drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophel
And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gor
The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord!
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it. [E

King. Let's follow, Gertru
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I, this will give it start again;
Therefore, let's follow. [Exe

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

A church-yard.

Enter two Clowns, with spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that willfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; therefore, make her grave straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drown'd herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else.
For here lies the point: If I drown myself witi-ngly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform:
Argal, she drown'd herself wittingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman delver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water;
good: here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nil he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: Argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry is't; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st: And the more pity; that great folks should have countenance in this world to hang or drown themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture saith Adam digg'd; Could he dig without arms?
put another question to thee: if thou answer me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame o' lives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith;
gallows does well: But how does it well? it d well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill say, the gallows is built stronger than the chur argal, the gallows may do well to thee. T again; Come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and uoyage!

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it;
your dull ass will not mend his pace with beatin and, when you are ask'd this question next, say grave-maker; the houses that he makes, last doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan, and fe me a stoup of liquor. [Exit 2 Clo.

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,

Methought, it was very sweet,

To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behave
O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his busine-he sings at grave-making.

1. Custom hath made it in him a property of ness.
am. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment
the daintier sense.

Cl^o. But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me into the land,
As if I had never been such.
[Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could speak: How the knave jowls it to the ground, if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would smother the God, might it not?

For. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could say, Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?
Is might be my lord such-a-one, that prais'd my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it;
might it not?

For. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so: and now my lady Worm's;
pless, and knock'd about the mazzard with a toe's spade: Here's fine revolution, an we had trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more breeding, but to play at loggats with them?
no ache to think 'on't.

1 Cl^o. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings.
For—and a shrouding sheet:
O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. There's another: Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits and his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his socks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to kick him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery?
O' my! This fellow might be in's time a great tyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his coveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt?
Will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box;
and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

For. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

For. Ay, my lord, and of calves-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow:
—Whose grave's this, sirrah?

1 Cl^o Mine, sir.—

O, a pit of clay for to be made [Sings.
For such a guest is meet.

Ham I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

1 Cl^o. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't, and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Cl^o. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again,
from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Cl^o. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman then?

1 Cl^o. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

1 Cl^o. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Cl^o. Of all the days i'th' year, I came to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long's that since?

1 Cl^o. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was that very day that young Hamlet was born: he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent to England?
1 Cl^o. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Cl^o. 'Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Cl^o. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Cl^o. 'Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Cl^o. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sixteen here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'th' earth ere he rot?

1 Cl^o. 'Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corpses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Cl^o. Why, sir, his hide is so tann'd with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while;
and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now hath lain i'th' earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Cl^o. A whoreson mad fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Cl^o. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he pour'd a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

[Takes the skull.

1 Cl^o. E'en that.

Ham. Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio;
a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorr'd in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kiss'd I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning?
quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

For. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander look'd o'this fashion i'th' earth?

For. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah! [Throws down the skull.

For. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio!
Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

For. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, 'faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth;
of earth we make loam: And why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Caesar, dead, and torn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!
But soft! but soft! aside;—Here comes the king,

Enter Priests, &c. in procession; the corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following it; King, Queen, their Trains, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: Who is this they follow?
And with such maimed rites! This doth betoken,
The corpse they follow, did with desperate hand
Fordo its own life. 'Twas of some estate:
Conch we a while, and mark. [Retiring with Hor.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham.

That is Laertes,

A very noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

I Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd As we have warranty: Her death was doubtful; And, but that great command o'erways the order, She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her: Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants, Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

I Priest. No more be done! We should profane the service of the dead, To sing a requiem, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth;— And from her fair and unpolluted flesh May violets spring!—I tell thee, churchward, priest, A ministring angel shall my sister be, When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!
Queen. Sweets to the sweet: Farewell!

[Scattering flowers.]

I hop'd, thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife; I thought, thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid, And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe Fall ten times treble on that cursed head, Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense Depriv'd thee of!—Hold off the earth a while, Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the grave.]

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead; Till of this flat a mountain you have made, To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skyish head Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them stand Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I, Hamlet the Dane.

[Leaps into the grave.]

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I pray thee, take thy fingers from my throat; For, though I am not splenetic and rash, Yet have I in me something dangerous, Which let thy wisdom fear: Hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.]

Hana. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme, Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers Could not, with all their quantity of love Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Zounds, show me what thou'lt do: Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't fast? woul't tear thyself?

Woul't drink up Esil? eat a crocodile?

I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw Millions of acres on us; till our ground, Singeing his pate against the burning zone, Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth, I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:

And thus a while the fit will work on him;

Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir;

What is the reason that you use me thus?

I lov'd you ever: But it is no matter;

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew, and dog will have his day. [Exit.]

King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.—

[Exit Horatio.]

Strengthen your patience in our last night's sleep

[To Laer.]

We'll put the matter to the present push.—

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—

This grave shall have a living monument:

An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

Till then, in patience our proceeding be. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A hall in the castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you the other;—

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fight

That would not let me sleep; methought, I lay

Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly

And prais'd he rashness for it.—Let us know,

Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,

When our deep plots do pall: and that should teach us,

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,

Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark

Grop'd I to find out them: had my desire;

Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew

To mine own room again: making so hold,

My fears forgetting manners, to unseal

Their grand commission; where I found, Hora

A royal knavery: an exact command,—

Larded with many several sorts of reasons,

Importing Denmark's health, and England's too

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,—

That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,

No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,

My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission; read it at leisure.

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. Ay, 'beseech you.

Ham. Being thus beheaded round with villainy

Or I could make a prologue to my brains,

They had begun the play:—I sat me down;

Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair:

I once did hold it, as our statistes do,

A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much

How to forget that learning; but, sir, now

It did me yeoman's service: Wilt thou know

The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—

As England was his faithful tributary;

As love between them like the palm might flourish

As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,

And stand a comma 'tween their amities;

And many such like as's of great charge,—

That, on the view and knowing of these content

Without debatement further, more, or less,

He should the bearers put to sudden death,

Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordain'd

I had my father's signet in my purse,

Which was the model of that Danish seal:

Folded the writ up in form of the other;

Subscrib'd it; gave't the impression; plac'd it safe

The changeling never known: Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to't employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow:

'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes

Between the pass and fell incensed points

Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon

He that hath kill'd my king, and whor'd my mothe

Popp'd in between the election and my hopes;

own out his angle for my proper life,
I with such cosenage; is't not perfect conscience,
quit him with this arm? and is't not to be damn'd, let this canker of our nature come further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,

that is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;

and a man's life's no more than to say, one.

I am very sorry, good Horatio,

that to Laertes I forgot myself;

and by the image of my cause, I see a portraiture of his: I'll count his favours:

and, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me

on a towering passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here?

Enter OSRICK.

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this ster-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a privilege to know him: He hath much land, and fertile:

like a beast he lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'Tis a chough; but, as I feel, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Os. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of wit: Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the ad.

Os. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind northerly.

Os. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry and hot; or my complexion—

Os. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,— 'twere,—I cannot tell how.—My lord, his mastery bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.]

Os. Nay, good my lord; for my ease, in good faith, Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes:

believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society, and great showing: Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is a card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find him the continent of what part a gentleman would be.

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you;—though, I know, to divide him inventorially, and dizzy the arithmetic of memory; and yet at raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblance is his mirror; and, who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Os. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap our gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Os. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another language? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Os. Of Laertes?

Hor.—His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Os. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me:—Well, sir.

Os. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Os. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's un-allow'd.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Os. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Os. The king, sir, hath wager'd with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has impawn'd, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so:

Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Os. I knew, you must be edified by the margent, ere you had done.

Os. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides;

I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on:

Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceit carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: Why is this impar'd, as you call it?

Os. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid, on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Os. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Os. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Os. I commend my duty to your lordship.

[Exit.]

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well, to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before 'he sneak'd it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy age dotes on,) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnow'd opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osrick, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: He sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or wheosoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you, to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me.

[Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France,
I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think, how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestal their repair hither, and say, you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter King, Queen, LAERTES, Lords, OSRICK, and Attendants with foils. &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Laer. into that of Ham.]
Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done you wrong;

But pardon it, as you are a gentleman. This presence knows, and you must needs have heard, How I am punish'd with a sore distraction.

What I have done, That might your nature, honour, and exception, Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never, Hamlet: If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And, when he's not himself, does wrong Laertes, Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then? His madness: If't be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy. Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot my arrow o'er the house, And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature, Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,

I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation, Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace, To keep my name ungor'd: But till that time,

I do receive your offer'd love like love, And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely; And will this brother's wager frankly play.—

Give us the foils; come on. Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i'the darkest night, Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir. King. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osrick.— Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager? Ham. Very well, my lord;

Your grace hath laid the odds o'the weaker side. King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both:—

But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds. Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.]

Osrick. Ay, my good lord. King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table:—

If Hamlet give the first or second hit, Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordnance fire; The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;

And in the cup an union shall he throw, Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn: Give me the cups; And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoneer without, The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth,

Now the king drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin;— And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir. Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. One. Laer. No. Ham. Judgment.

Osrick. A hit, a very palpable hit. Laer. Well,—again.

King. Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup. [Trumpets sound; and cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by a while. Come.—Another hit: What say you? [They play.]

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess. King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.— Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows: The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,— King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord;—I pray you, pardon King. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now. King. I do not think.

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience. [As]

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence; I am afeard, you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.]

Osrick. Nothing neither way. Laer. Have at you now.

[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffling they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.]

King. Part them, they are incen-

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.]

Osrick. Look to the queen there, Hor. They bleed on both sides:—How is it, lord?

Osrick. How is't, Laertes? Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own spring;

Osrick; I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen? King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my Hamlet!—

The drink, the drink;—I am poison'd! [Laertes falls.]

Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock'd: Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.]

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain! No medicine in the world can do thee good,

In thee there is not half an hour's life; The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated, and envenom'd: the foul practice Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,

Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd; I can no more:—the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.]

Osrick & Lords. Treason! treason! King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damn'd Dane,

Drink off this potion:—Is the union here? Follow my mother. [King falls.]

Laer. He is justly serv'd; It is a poison temper'd by himself.—

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet: Mine and my father's death come not upon the Nor thine on me! [D] Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee!

I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu! You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act, Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,

Is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you,— But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;

Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it; I am more an antique Roman than a Dane, Here's yet some liquor left. Ham. As thou'rt a man,

Give me the cup; let go; by heaven I'll have it! O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind it! If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicity a while, And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story.— [March afar off, and shot with]

Osrick. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;

potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit;
 I do prophesy, the election lights
 Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
 all him, with the occurments, more and less,
 which have solicited,—The rest is silence. [Dies.]
For. Now cracks a noble heart:—Good night, sweet prince;
 Flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
 Why does the drum come hither? [March within.]

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English ambassadors, and Others.

For. Where is this sight?
For. What is it, you would see?
 Sight of woe, or wonder, cease your search.
For. This quarry cries on havoc!—O proud death!
 Hast thou not feast in thine eternal cell,
 when thou so many princes, at a shot,
 bloody hast struck?

Amb. The sight is dismal;
 And our affairs from England come too late:
 These ears are senseless, that should give us hearing,
 to tell him, his commandment is fulfill'd,
 that Rosenerantz and Guildenstern are dead:
 here should we have our thanks?

For. Not from his mouth,
 who had the ability of life to thank you;
 he never gave commandment for their death.
 Since, so jump upon this bloody question,
 you from the Polack wars, and you from England,
 are here arriv'd; give order, that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view;
 And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,
 How these things came about: So shall you hear
 Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;
 Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
 Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cause;
 And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
 Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

For. Let us haste to hear it,
 And call the noblest to the audience.
 For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
 I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
 Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.

For. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
 And from his mouth whose voice will draw on
 more:

But let this same be presently perform'd,
 Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mis-
 chance,

On plots, and errors, happen.

For. Let four captains
 Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
 For he was likely, had he been put on,
 To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage,
 The soldiers' music, and the rites of war,
 Speak loudly for him.—

Take up the bodies:—Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
 Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead march.]

[Exeunt, bearing off the dead bodies; after which, a peal of ordnance is shot off.]

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

Duke of VENICE.
BRABANTIO, a senator.
Two other Senators.
GRATIANO, brother to Brabantio.
LODOVICO, kinsman to Brabantio.
OTHELLO, the Moor:
CASSIO, his lieutenant;
IAGO, his ancient.
RODERIGO, a Venetian gentleman.

MONTANO, Othello's predecessor in the government of Cyprus.
Clown, servant to Othello.
Herald.

DESEDEMONA, daughter to Brabantio, and wife to Othello.
EMILIA, wife to Iago.
BIANCA, a courtesan, mistress to Cassio.

Officers, Gentlemen, Messengers, Musicians, Sailors, Attendants, &c.

Scene,—for the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-port in Cyprus.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Venice. A street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush, never tell me, I take it much unkindly,
That thou, Iago,—who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine,—shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:—
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Oft capp'd to him;—and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them, with a bombast circumstance,
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;

And, in conclusion, consents
My mediators; for, certes, says he,
I have already chose my officer.

And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theorick,
Wherein the tog'd consuls can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,
Is all his soldiership. But, he, sir, had the election:
And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof,
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds
Christian and heathen,—must be lee'd and calm'd
By debitor and creditor, this counter-caster;
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I, (God bless the mark!) his Moorship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. But there's no remedy, 'tis the curse of service:

Preferment goes by letter, and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,
Whether I in any just term am affin'd
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O, sir, content you;

I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters

Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender; and, when he's old,
cashier'd;

Whip me such honest knaves: Others there are,
Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves;
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them, and, when they have
lin'd their coats,

Do themselves homage: these fellows have some
soul;

And such a one do I profess myself.

For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,
If he can carry't thus!

Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kinsmen,
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud.
Iago. Do; with like timorous accent, and dire yell,

As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho!

Iago. Awake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves!
thieves! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags:
Thieves! thieves!

BRABANTIO, above, at a window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?

T. Stothard R.A.

OTHELLO.

Act 2. Sc. 1.

Published by W. Pickering, 57, Chancery Lane, 1825.

Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are robb'd; for shame,
put on your gown;

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul;
Even now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you:
Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I; What are you?

Rod. My name is—Roderigo.

Bra. The worse welcome:
I have charg'd thee, not to haunt about my doors:
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper, and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit, and my place, have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are one of those, that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, you think we are ruffians:
You'll have your daughter cover'd with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you:
you'll have coursers for cousins, and gennets for germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee,
Roderigo.

Iago. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech you,

If't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find, it is,) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o'the night,
Transported—with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gouldolier,—
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—

If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you hold and saucy wrongs;
But, if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe,
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her leave,—
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger,
Of here and every where: Straight satisfy yourself:
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on'the tinder, ho!

Give me a taper;—call up all my people:—

This accident is not unlike my dream,

Belief of it oppresses me already:—

Light, I say! light! [Exit, from above.]

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:

It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,

To be produc'd (as, if I stay, I shall),

Against the Moor: For, I do know, the state,—

However this may gall him with some check,—

Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd

With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars,

(Which even now stand in act,) that, for their souls,

Another of his fathom they have not,

To lead their business: in which regard,

Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,

Yet, for necessity of present life,

I must show out a flag and sign of love,

Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,

Lead to the Sagittary the rais'd search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. [Exit.]

Enter, below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despised time,
Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O, unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father?—

How didst thou know 'twas she?—O, thou deceiv'st me

Past thought!—What said she to you?—Get more tapers;

Raise all my kindred.—Are they married, think
you?

Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Bra. O heaven!—How got she out?—O treason of the blood!—

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act.—Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir; I have, indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, that you had her!—

Some one way, some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think, I can discover him; if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;
I may command at most:—Get weapons, ho!

And raise some special officers of night.—
On, good Roderigo;—I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. Another street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain
men,

Yet do I hold it very stuff o'the conscience,
To do me contriv'd murder; I lack iniquity
Sometimes, to do me service: Nine or ten times
I had thought to have jerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,

And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forhear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? for, be sure of this,—
That the magnifico is much believ'd;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double as the duke's: he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what constraint and grievance
The law (with all his might, to enforce it on,)
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
(Which, when I know that hoasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate,) I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege; and my demerits
May speak, unbought, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder?

Enter CASSIO, at a distance, and certain Officers with torches.

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I: I must be found;

My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends!

What is the news ?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general; And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance, Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you ?
Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine; It is a business of some heat: the galleys Have sent a dozen sequent messengers This very night, at one another's heels; And many of the consuls, rais'd, and met, Are at the duke's already: You have been hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found, The senate hath sent about three several quests, To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you. I will but spend a word here in the house, And go with you. [Exit.]

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here ?
Jago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack;

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Jago. He's married. To who ?
Cas.

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Jago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go ?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers of night, with torches and weapons.

Jago. It is Brabantio:—general, be advis'd; He comes to bad intent.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief! [They draw on both sides.]

Jago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.
Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.—

Good signior, you shall more command with years, Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her:

For I'll refer me to all things of sense,

If she in chains of magic were not bound,

Whether a maid—so tender, fair, and happy;

So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,—

Would ever have, to incur a general mock,

Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom

Of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight.

Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense,

That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;

Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,

That waken motion:—I'll have it disputed on:

'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.

I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,

For an abuser of the world, a practiser

Of arts inhibited and out of warrant:—

Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,

Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,

Both you of my inclining, and the rest:

Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it

Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge ?

Bra. To prison; till fit time

Of law, and course of direct session,

Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey ?

How may the duke be therewith satisfied;

Whose messengers are here about my side,

Upon some present business of the state,

To bring me to him ?

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior,

The duke's in council; and your noble self,

I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!

In this time of the night!—Bring him away:

Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,

Or any of my brothers of the state,

Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own:

For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves, and pagans, shall our statesmen be [Exeunt]

SCENE III.

The same. A council-chamber.

The Duke, and Senators, sitting at a table; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news,
That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd:
My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.
2 Sen. And mine, two hundred

But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these cases, where the aim reports,

'Tis oft with difference,) yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment,
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What ho! what ho! what ho!

Enter an Officer with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now! the business:
Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes:
So was I bid report here to the state,

By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change ?

1 Sen. This cannot be

By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze: When we consider

The impotency of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,

That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,

For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities

That Rhodes is dress'd in:—if we make thought
this,

We must not think, the Turk is so unskilful,
To leave that latest, which concerns him first;

Neglecting an attempt of ease, and gain,
To wake, and wage, a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes
Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought:—How many, as you guess ?

Mess. Of thirty sail: and now do they re-sten
Their backward course, bearing with frauk apperance

Their purposes toward Cyprus.—Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,

With his free duty, recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.—
Marcus Lucchesi, is he not in town ?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us; wish him post-post-haste despatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ
you

Against the general enemy Ottoman.
I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;

[To Brabantio.]
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours: Good your grace, pardon me:
Neither my place, nor ought I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the generacare

Take hold on me; for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,

and it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me; he is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted with spells and medicines bought of mountebanks: for nature so preposterously to err, being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense, as witchcraft could not—

Duke. Whoe'er he be, that, in this foul proceeding, hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself, and you of her, the bloody book of law you shall yourself read in the bitter letter, under your own sense; yea, though our proper son be good in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace. He is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems, you have special mandate, for the state affairs, to send hither brought.

Duke & Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this? [To Othello.]

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors, my very noble and approv'd good masters,—that I have ta'en away this old man's daughter, is most true; true, I have married her; and very head and front of my offending against this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech, and little bless'd with the set phrase of peace; for since these arms of mine had seven years' pith, till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd their dearest action in the tented field; and little of this great world can I speak, more than pertains to feats of broil and battle; and therefore little shall I grace my cause, speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious patience, will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms, what conjuration, and what mighty magic, or such proceeding I am charg'd withal, I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold; of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion lush'd at herself; And she,—in spite of nature, five years, of country, credit, every thing,—is fall in love with what she fear'd to look on? This is a judgment maim'd, and most imperfect, that will confess—perfection so could err against all rules of nature; and must be driven to find out practices of cunning hell, why this should be. I therefore vouch again, that with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood, or with some dram conjur'd to this effect, he wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof; without more certain and more overt test, than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods of modern seeming, do prefer against him.

I Sen. But, Othello, speak;—did you by indirect and forced courses abduct and poison this young maid's affections? or came it by request, and such fair question a soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you, send for the lady to the Sagittary, and let her speak of me before her father: if you do find me foul in her report, the trust, the office, I do hold of you, I will not take away, but let your sentence even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither. Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.— [Exeunt Iago and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven do confess the vices of my blood. So justly to your grave ears I'll present how I did thrive in this fair lady's love, and she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me; still question'd me the story of my life, from year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes,

That I have pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days, to the very moment that he bade me tell it. Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances, of moving accidents, by flood, and field; of hair-breadth scapes; the imminent deadly breach; of being taken by the insolent foe, and sold to slavery; of my redemption thence, and portance in my travels' history; wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle, Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak, such was the process; And of the Cannibals that each other eat, The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads do grow beneath their shoulders. These things to hear,

Would Desdemona seriously incline: But still the house affairs would draw her thence; Which ever as she could with haste despatch, She'd come again, and with a greedy ear Devour up my discourse: Which I observing, Took once a pliant hour; and found good means To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart, That I would all my pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcels she had something heard, But not intently: I did consent; And often did beguile her of her tears, When I did speak of some distressful stroke, That my youth suffer'd. My story being done, She gave me for my pains a world of sighs: She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful: She wish'd, she had not heard it; yet she wish'd That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her, I should but teach him how to tell my story, And that would woo her. Upon this hint, I spake: She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd; And I lov'd her, that she did pity them. This only is the witchcraft I have us'd; Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think, this tale would win my daughter too.—

Good Brabantio, Take up this mangled matter at the best: Men do their broken weapons rather use, Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak; If she confess, that she was half the wooer, Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress; Do you perceive in all this noble company, Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father, I do perceive here a divided duty:

To you I am bound for life, and education; My life, and education, both do learn me How to respect you; you are the lord of duty, I am hitherto your daughter: But here's my husband; And so much duty as my mother show'd To you, preferring you before her father, So much I challenge that I may profess Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God be with you!—I have done:—Please it your grace, on to the state affairs;

I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart, Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel, I am glad at soul I have no other child; For thy escape would teach me tyranny, To hang clops on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; and lay a sentence,

Which, as a grave, or step, may help these lovers Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended, By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended. To mourn a mischief that is past and gone, Is the next way to draw new mischief on.

What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.

The robb'd, that smiles, steals something from the thief;

He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.

He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears:
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear,
That the bruis'd heart was pierced through the ear.
I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus:—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: And though we have there a substitute of most allow'd sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardness; and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reference of place, and exhibition;
With such accommodation, and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.

Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend a gracious ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?
Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites, for which I love him, are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords:—'beseech you, let her will Have a free way.
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat, the young affects,
In my distinct and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
For she is with me: No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seal with wanton dulness
My speculative and active instruments,
That my disorders corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: the affair cries—haste,
And speed must answer it; you must hence to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord?

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.
Duke. At nine i'the morning here we'll meet again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;

With such things else of quality and respect,
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancients
A man he is of honesty, and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.—
Good night to every one.—And, noble signior,
[To Brabantio]

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
I Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.
Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to her.
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &
Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I pry'thee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters add direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.
[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona]

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, think'st thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torture: and then have we a prescription to die, with death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have look'd upon the world for four times seven years: and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself.
I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity for a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is shame to be so fond; but it is not in virtue amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens;
the which, our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, or weed up thyme; supply it with one gender of herb, or distract it with many; either to have it stink with idleness, or manured with industry; why, power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poize another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us most preposterous conclusions: But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this, that you call love, to be a seer, or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a mission of the will. Come, be a man: Drown thyself? drown cats, and blind puppies. I have possess'd me thy friend, and I confess me knit to his deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; could never better stand thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should love to continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent contemptment, and thou shalt see an answerable questerment;—put but money in thy purse.—The Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food, that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice.—She must have change, she must therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst:
sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring ba-barian and a supersubtle Venetian, be not too happy for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowag thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou either to be hang'd in compassing thy joy, than to be drown'd and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me;—Go, make money:
 —I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again
 od again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted; sine hath no less reason: Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, and me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time, which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money.
 We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i'the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell: put money enough in our purse. [Exit Roderigo.]

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse:
 For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
 If I would time expend with such a snipe,
 But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
 And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
 He has done my office: I know not, if't be true;
 But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
 Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well;
 The better shall my purpose work on him.
 Cassio's a proper man: I let me see now:
 To get his place, and to plume up my will;
 A double knavery.—How? how!—Let me see:—
 After some time, to abuse Othello's ear,
 That he is too familiar with his wife:—
 He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
 To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.
 The Moor is of a free and open nature,
 That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so;
 And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
 As asses are.
 I have't;—it is engender'd:—Hell and night
 Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A sea-port town in Cyprus. A platform.

Enter MONTANO and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood; cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
 Jesury a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land;
 a fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
 if it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,

What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
 Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:

for do but stand upon the foaming shore,
 The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;

The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous
 main,

seems to cast water on the burning bear,
 and quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:

never did like molestation view
 In th' enchauf'd flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
 'tis impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lords! our wars are done;

the desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks, that their designment halts: A noble ship of Venice hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance on most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in,

Veronest; Michael Cassio,
 Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,

is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
 and is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio,—though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss,—yet he looks sadly,
 and prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted
 With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. 'Pray heaven he be;

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
 Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!

As well to see the vessel that's come in,
 As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello;

Even till we make the main, and the aerial blue,
 An indistinct regard.

Gent. Come, let's do so;

For every minute is expectancy
 Of more arrivance.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle, that so approve the Moor; O, let the heavens

Give him defence against the elements,

For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot

Of very expert and approv'd allowance;

Therefore my hopes, not surfeit'd to death,
 Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter another Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

4 Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o'the sea

Stand ranks of people, and they cry—a sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governour.

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy;
 [Guns heard.]

Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
 And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall. [Exit.]

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid

That paragon description, and wild fame;

One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
 And in the essential vesture of creation,

Does bear all excellency.—How now? who has put in?

Re-enter second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
 The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,—

Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,—
 As having sense of beauty, do omit

Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
 The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,
 Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;

Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
 A se'night's speed.—Great Jove, Othello guard,

And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath;
 That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,

Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
 Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,

And bring all Cyprus comfort!—O, behold,

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO,
 RODERIGO, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore!

Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees:—

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
 Before, behind thee, and on every haud,

Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught

But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear;—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies Parted our fellowship: But, hark! a sail.

[Cry within, A sail, a sail! Then guns heard.]

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel; This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.—

Good ancient, you are welcome;—Welcome, mistress:—

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago, That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips, As of her tongue she oft bestows on me, You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much; I find it still, when I have list to sleep: Marry, before your ladyship, I grant, She puts her tongue a little in her heart, And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens, Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk;

You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't;

For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on, assay:—There's one gone to the harbour!

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.— Come, how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention Comes from my pate, as birdlime does from frize, It plucks out brains and all: But my muse labours, And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit, The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit, She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?
Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair; For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fund paradoxes, to make fools laugh i'the alehouse. What miserably praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so fual, and foolish thereunto, But does foul pranks, which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance!—thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself!

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud; Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud; Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay; Fled from her wish, and yet said,—now I may; She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh, Bade her wrong staff, and her displeasure fly; She that in wisdom never was so frail, To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail; She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind, See suitors following, and not look behind; She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!— Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: A well said, whisper: with as little a web as th will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, such upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own couch. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such trick as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it has been better you had not kiss'd your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to put the sir in. Very good; well kiss'd! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your finger to your lips? would, they were clyster-pipes, to your sake!—[Trumpet.] The Moor,—I know trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello! It gives me wonder great as my content To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death! And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas, Olympus-high; and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear, My soul hath her content so absolute, That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknowna fate.

Des. The heavens forbid, But that our loves and comforts should increase Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers! I cannot speak enough of this content, It stops me here; it is too much of joy: And this, and this, the greatest discords be,

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. O, you are well tun'd no But I'll set down the pegs that make this music As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let's to the castle.— News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks drown'd.

How do our old acquaintance of this isle?— Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus, I have found great love amongst them. O my sw I prattle out of fashion, and I dote In mine own comforts.—I pry'thee, good Iago, Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers: Bring thou the master to the citadel; He is a good one, and his worthiness Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Oth. Des. and Attendants.]
Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility their natures more than is native to them,—me. The lieutenant-to-night watches on the coast of guard:—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.
Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul instructed. Mark me with what violence she loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling fantastical lies: And will she love him still praing? let not thy discreet heart think it. I eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is thus dull with the act of sport, there should be,—ag to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, I delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, it is a most pregnant and unforced position, w stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble; no furti reasonable, than in putting on the mere form of fil and humane seeming, for the better compass-ing of his salt and most hidden loose affection?

by, none; why, none: A slippery and subtle saw; a finder out of occasions; that has an eye in stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true (vantage never present itself: A devilish knave!
sides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath l those requisites in him, that folly and green inds look after: A pestilent complete knave; and e woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of ost bless'd condition.

Iago. Bless'd fig's end! the wine she drinks is ade of grapes: if she had been bless'd, she would ever have loved the Moor: Bless'd pudding!
hidst thou not see her paddle with the palm of is hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and bscure prologue to the history of lust and foul houghts. They met so near with their lips, bat their breaths embraced together. Villainous houghts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so oarsal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion:
ish!—But, sir, he you ruled by me: I have wrought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; or the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio crows you not;—I'll not be far from you: Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or rom what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler;
and, haply, with his truncheon may strike at you:
Provoke him, that he may: for, even out of that,
will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now I do love her too;
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure,
I stand accountant for as great a sin,)
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat: the thought whereof
Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards;
And nothing can or shall content my soul,
Till I am even with him, wife for wife;
Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—
If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd;
Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

[Exit.

SCENE II.

A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and va-

lian general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to what dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.

*A hall in the castle.

*Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO,
and Attendants.*

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard tonight:
Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest,
Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear love,
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;

[To Desdemona.

That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.—
Good night. [Exeunt Oth. Des. and Attendants.

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona: whom let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks, it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet, methinks, right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
With that which he hath drunk to-night already,
He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool,

Roderigo,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch:
Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits,
That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle,—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle:—But here they come:
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO; with him MONTANO, and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Stings.
And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

[Wine brought in.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.
Iago. I learn'd it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?
Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Alman; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be fill'd.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor—lown.

He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that does those things—Well,—Heaven's above all; and there be souls that must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand:—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then: you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before;—He is a soldier, fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction: and do but see his vice;
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear, the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well,

The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils? Is not this true?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. How now, Roderigo? [Asks

I pray you, after the lieutenant; go. [Exit Roderigo

Mon. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place, as his own second,
With one of an ingraft infirmity:
It were an honest action, to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise [Cry within,—Help! help!

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave!—teach me my duty!

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant! [Striking Roderigo

[Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk

Cas. Drunk!

Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry—a mutiny

[Aside to Rod. who goes on

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—

Help, ho!—Lientenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—

Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed

[Bell ring

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!

The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant! hold

You will be sham'd for ever.

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—

Oth. Hold, hold, for your lives.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant,—sir, Montano,

gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold, f

shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence arise

this?

Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that,

Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl!

He, that stirs next to carve for his own rage,

Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—

Silence that dreadful ball, it frights the isle

From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee,

Iago. I do not know;—friends all but now, even

now,

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom

Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,

(As if some planet had unwitted men,)

Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,

In opposition bloody: I cannot speak

Any beginning to this peevish odds;

And 'would in action glorious I had lost

These legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil

The gravity and stillness of your youth

The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure; What's the matter,

That you unlance your reputation thus,

And spend your rich opinion, for the name

Of a night brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;

Your officer, Iago, can inform you—

While I spare speech, which something now offend

me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught,

By me that's said or done amiss this night;

less self-charity be sometime a vice ;
 id to defend ourselves it be a sin,
 then violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
 y blood begins my safer guides to rule ;
 id passion, having my best judgment collied,
 says to lead the way : If I once stir,
 r do but lift this arm, the best of you all sink in my rebuke. Give me to know ow this foul root began, who set it on ;
 id he that is approv'd in this offence,
 ough he had twin'd with me, both at a birth,
 all lose me.—What ! in a town of war,
 et wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear, manage private and domestick quarrel,
 ight, and on the court and guard of safety !
 is monstrous.—Iago, who began it ?
Mon. If partially affi'd, or leagu'd in office, ou dost deliver more or less than truth,
 ou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near :
 had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
 an it should do offence to Michael Cassio ;
 et, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
 hall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.
 Iontano and myself being in speech,
 here comes a fellow, crying out for help ;
 nd Cassio following him with determin'd sword,
 o execute upon him : Sir, this gentleman
 eps in to Cassin, and entreats his pause ;
 yself the crying fellow did pursue,
 est, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,)
 he town might fall in fright : he, swift of foot, utran my purpose ; and I return'd the rather or that I heard the clink and fall of swords, nd Cassio high in oath ; which, till to-night,
 ne'er might say before : When I came back,
 For this was brief, I found them close together,
 it blow, and thrust ; even as again they were,
 When you yourself did part them.
 fore of this matter can I not report :—
 ut men are men ; the best sometimes forget :— ough Cassio did some little wrong to him,— is men in rage strike those that wish them best,— et, surely, Cassio, I believe, receiv'd, rom him that fled, some strange indignity,
 hich patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago, hy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
 faking it light to Cassio :—Cassio, I love thee ;
 ut never more be officer of mine.—

Enter DESDEMONA, attended.

ook, if my gentle love be not rais'd up ;—
 'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter, dear ?
Oth. All's well now, sweeting ; Come away to bed.
 ir, for your hurts,
 yself will be your surgeon : Lead him off.

[To Montano, who is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town ;
 And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.—
 Come, Desdemona ; 'tis the soldiers' life,
 To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant ?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid !

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation ! O, I have lost my reputation ! I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial.—
 My reputation, Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound ; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition ; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving : You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man ! there are ways to recover the general again : You are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice ;
 even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to affright an imperious lion : sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk ? and speak parrot ? and squabble ? swagger ? swear ? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow ?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil !

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword ? What had he done to you ?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible ?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly ; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O, that men should put an enemy in their mouths,
 to steal away their brains ! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts !

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough ; How came you thus recover'd ?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath : one imperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist : As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen ;
 but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again ; he shall tell me, I am a drunkard ! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast ! O strange !—Every inordinate cup is unbless'd, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used ; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you think I love
 you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk !

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you 'what you shall do.
 Our general's wife is now the general ;—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces :—confess yourself freely to her ; importune her ; she'll help to put you in your place again : she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested : This broken joint, between you and her husband, entreat her to splinter ; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely ; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me : I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant ; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he then, that says,—I play the villain !

When this advice is free, I give, and honest,
 Probal to thinking, and (indeed) the course
 To win the Moor again ? For 'tis most easy
 The inclining Desdemona to subdue
 In any honest suit ; she's fram'd as fruitful
 As the free elements. And then for her
 To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,
 All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,—
 His soul is so enfetted to her love,
 That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
 Even as her appetite shall play the god
 With his weak function. How am I then a villain,
 To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
 Directly to his good ? Divinity of hell !
 When devils will their blackest sins put on,
 They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
 As I do now : For, while this honest fool
 Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
 And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
 I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,—
 That she repeals him for her body's lust ;
 And, by how much she strives to do him good,
 She shall undo her credit with the Moor.

So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
And out of her own goodness make the net,
That shall enmesh them all.—How now, Roderigo?

Enter RODERIGO.

Rod. I do follow here in the chace, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgell'd; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience!—What wound did ever heal, but by degrees? Thou know'st, we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time.

Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio. Though other things grow fair against the sun, Yet fruits, that blossom first, will first be ripe: Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 'tis morning;

Pleasure, and action, make the hours seem short.—Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Rod] Two things a to be done,—My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress; I'll set her on; Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart, And bring him jump when he may Cassio find. Soliciting his wife:—Ay, that's the way; Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Before the castle.

Enter CASSIO, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains, Something that's brief; and bid—good-morrow, general. [Musick.]

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak i'the nose thus?

I Mus. How, sir, how!

Clo. Are these, I pray you, call'd wind instruments?

I Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.

I Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your musick, that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

I Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any musick that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear musick, the general does not greatly care.

I Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exit Musicians.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman, that attends the general's wife, be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exit.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, To send in to your wife: My suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your converse and business May be more free. [Exit.]

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morning, good lieutenant: I am sorry For your displeasure; but all will soon be well. The general, and his wife, are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly: The Moor replies, That he, you hurt, is of great fame in Cyprus, And great affinity; and that, in wholesome wisdom,

He might not but refuse you: but, he protests, I loves you;

And needs no other suitor, but his likings,

To take the safest occasion by the front,

To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—

If you think fit, or that it may be done,—

Give me advantage of some brief discourse

With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in;

I will bestow you where you shall have time

To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot;

And, by him, do my duties to the state:

That done, I will be walking on the works,

Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do'

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see'

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Before the castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do

All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do; I know it grieves me

husband,

As if the case were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt

Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again

As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam,

Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,

He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O, sir, I thank you: You do love my lord

You have known him long; and be you well assur'd

He shall in strangeness stand no further off

Than in a politic distance.

Cas.

Emil. Ay, but, lady,

That policy may either last so long,

Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,

Or breed itself so out of circumstance,

That, I being absent, and my place supplied,

My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here,

I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,

If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it

To the last article: my lord shall never rest;

I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;

I'll intermingle every thing he does

With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, Cassio;

For thy solicitor shall rather die,

Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes your lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay,

and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease, and sit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, well,

at your discretion. [Exit Cassio.]

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio, parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it, as he would steal away so guilty-like,

and sing you coming.

Oth. I do believe, 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord?

Iago. I have been talking with a suitor here, and man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't, you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord,

I have any grace, or power to move you,

and is present reconciliation take;

and, if he be not one that truly loves you,

and errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,

and have no judgment in an honest case:

and pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled, and that he hath left part of his grief with me;

and suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home;

and meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday

morning;

or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn;—

pr'ythee, name the time; but let it not exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;

and yet his trespass, in our common reason,

and have that, they say, the wars must make examples of their best,) is not almost a fault

to incur a private check: When shall he come?

Oth. All me, Othello. I wonder in my soul, and what you could ask me, that I should deny,

and stand so mammering on. What! Michael Cassio, and had came a wooing with you; and many a time,

and when I have spoke of you disparagingly,

and hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do and to bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,—

Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will;

and will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;

and 'tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,

and feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm;

and sue to you to do peculiar profit to your own person: Nay, when I have a suit,

and wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,

and shall be full of poize and difficulty,

and am fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing:

and whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,

and leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come:—Be it as your fancies teach you;

and whate'er you be, I am obedient.

[Exit with Emilia.]

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul, and let me do love thee! and, when I love thee not,

and haos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;

and no further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—Discern'st thou aught in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Oth. Ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,

and as if there were some monster in his thought

Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something:

I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'd'st not that,

and when Cassio left my wife; What didst not like?

And, when I told thee—he was of my counsel

in my whole course of wooing, thou cry'd'st, Indeed?

And didst contract and purse thy brow together,

and as if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain

Some horrible conceit: If thou dost love me, and show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think, thou dost;

and,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty,

and weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them

breath,—

Therefore these steps of thine fright me the more:

For such things, in a false disloyal knave, and are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just,

and they are close denotements, working from the heart,

and that passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,—

I dare he sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;

and Or, those that he not, 'would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why then,

and I think that Cassio is an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:

and I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings, and as thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of

thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;

and Though I am bound to every act of duty, and I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.

Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—

and as where's that palace, whereinto foul things

Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure, and But some uncleanly apprehensions

Keep leets, and law-days, and in session sit

With meditations lawful?

Oth. Then dost conspire against thy friend, Iago, and if thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear

A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,— and Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess, and As, I confess, it is my nature's plague and To spy into abuses; and, oft, my jealousy

Shapes faults that are not,—I entreat you then,

and From one that so imperfectly conceits,

and You'd take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble and Out of his scattering and unsure observance:—

and It were not for your quiet, nor your good,

and Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,

and To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my

lord,

and Is the immediate jewel of their souls:

and Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something,

and nothing;

and 'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

and But he, that filches from me my good name,

Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green ey'd monster, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: That cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But O, what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough;
But riches, fineness, is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt,
Is—once to be resolv'd: Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufficate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are mere virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,—
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of this; for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife: observe her well with Cassio;
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-honour, be abus'd; look to't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is—not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, 'twas witchcraft:—But I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.
I hope, you will consider, what is spoke Comes from my love;—But, I do see you are mov'd:—

I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at: Cassio's my worthy friend:—

My lord, I see you are mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd:—

I do not think, but Desdemona's honest.
Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point:—As,—to be bold with you,—

Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends:

Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most ranc'
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But pardon me; I do not, in position,
Distinctly speak of her: though I may fear,
Her will, recolling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And (happily) repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Exit]

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature doubtless,

Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfold Iago. My lord, I would, I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time:
And though it be fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability,)
Yet, if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have, to fear—I am,)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit]

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings: If I do prove her baggard
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black;
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have: Or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much;—
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be—to loath her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be toad
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great Prerogativ'd are they less than the base:
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death;
Even then this forked plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken Desdemona comes:

Enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you
well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. 'Faith, that's with watching; 'twill av'
again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little;

[He puts the handkerchief from him, &
it drops.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt Oth. and D

Emil. I am glad, I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it: but she so loves the token
(For he conjur'd her, she should ever keep it,)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en o'
And give it Iago:
What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I;
I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now
 For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?
Emil. What handkerchief?

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
 That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her?
Emil. No, 'faith; she let it drop by negligence;
 And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.
 Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Emil. What will you do with it, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it?
Iago. Why, what's that to you?

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
 Give it me again: Poor lady! she'll run mad,
 When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not you known of't; I have use for it.
 Go, leave me. [Exit Emila.]

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
 And let him find it: Trifles, light as air,
 Are, to the jealous, confirmations strong
 As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
 The Moor already changes with my poison:—
 Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, poisons,
 Which, at the first, are scarce found to distaste;
 But, with a little act upon the blood,
 Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—

Enter OTHELLO.

Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora,
 Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
 Shall ever med'cine thee to that sweet sleep,
 Which thou ow'st yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
 To me?

Iago. Why, how now, general? no more of that.
Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack:—

I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd,
 Than to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord?
Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
 saw I, not, thought I not, it harm'd not me:

I slept to the next night well, was free and merry;
 I found no Cassio's kisses on her lips:
 He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
 Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
 Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
 So I had nothing known: O now, for ever,
 Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
 Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
 That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
 Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
 The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
 The royal banner; and all quality,
 Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
 And O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
 The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit, Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

Iago. Is it possible?—My lord,
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore;
 Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof;

[Taking him by the throat.]
 Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
 Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
 Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is it come to this?
Oth. Make me to see it; or (at the least) so prove it,
 That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
 To hang a doubt on: or, woe upon thy life!

Iago. My noble lord,
Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
 Never pray more: abandon all remorse;
 On horror's head horrors accumulate:
 Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd,
 For nothing canst thou to damnation add,
 Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!
 Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
 God be wi' you; take mine office.—O wretched fool,

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice!
 O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world,
 To be direct and honest, is not safe.—
 I thank you for this profit; and, from hence,
 I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay:—thou shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
 And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
 I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
 I think that thou art just, and think thou art not;
 I'll have some proof: Her name, that was as fresh
 As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
 As mine own face.—If there be cords, or knives,
 Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
 I'll not endure it.—'Would, I were satisfied!

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
 I do repent me, that I put it to you.
 You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would? nay, I will.
Iago. And may: But, how? how satisfied, my
 lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on?
 Behold her tupp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
 To bring them to that prospect: Damn them then,
 If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster,
 More than their own! What then? how then?
 What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?

It is impossible you should see this,
 Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
 As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
 As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
 If imputation, and strong circumstances,—
 Which lead directly to the door of truth,—
 Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office:

But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,— Prick'd to it by foolish honesty and love,—
 I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
 And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
 I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
 That in their sleeps will utter their affairs;
 One of this kind is Cassio:

In sleep I heard him say,—*Swears Desdemona,
 Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!*

And then, sir, would he gripe, and wring my hand,
 Cry,—O, sweet creature! and then kiss me hard,
 As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
 That grew upon my lips: then laid his leg
 Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cry'd,—Cursed fate! that gave thee to the Moor!

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!
Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion;
 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
 That do demonstrate thine.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done;
 She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,—
 Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
 Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.
Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief,
 (I am sure it was your wife's), did I to-day
 See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—
Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers,
 It speaks against her, with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
 One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!
 Now do I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago;
 All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven:
 'Tis gone.—
 Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
 Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne,
 To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
 For 'tis of aspicks' tongues!

Iago. Pray, be content.
Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!
Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontick, and the Hellespont;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by yond' marble heaven,
In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels.
I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.— [Kneels.
Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
You elements that clip us round about!
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command,
And to obey shall he in me remorse,
What bloody work soever.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to't:
Within these three days let me hear thee say,
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done, at your request:
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

The same.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies?

Cl. I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Cl. He is a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabb'ing.

Des. Go to; Where lodges he?

Cl. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Cl. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say—he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in my own throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out, and be edified by report?

Cl. I will catechize the world for him; that is,
make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him,
I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well.

Cl. To do this, is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it.

[Exit.
Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cruzadoes. And, but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill-thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think, the sun, where he was born,
Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio
Be call'd to him.—How is't with you, my lord?

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. Well, my good lady:—[Aside.] O, hardness to dissemble!—
How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: This hand is moist,
my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart;—
Hot, hot, and moist: This hand of yours requires
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout;

For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: The hearts, of old, gave hand
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come, now you promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sullen rheum offend me
Lead me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept
'T would make her amiable, and subdue my father
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should but After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive
To give it her. I did so: and take heed of't,
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose or give't away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is it possible?
Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to make two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work:
The worms were hallow'd, that did breed the silk;
And it was dy'd in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then 'would to heaven, that I had never seen it.

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out of thy way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see it!

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now;

This is a trick, to put me from my suit;

I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind mis-gives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief.—

Des. I pray, talk to me of Cassio

Oth. The handkerchief.

Des. A man that, all his time

Hath founded his good fortune on your love;

Shar'd dangers with you;—

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth,

You are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit Othello

Emil. Is not this man jealous

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief:

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:

They are all hut stomachs, and we all but food;

They eat us hungrily, and when they are full,

They belch us. Look you! Cassio, and my husband

Enter IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't

And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio? what's the new
with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you, that, by your virtuous means, I may again exist, and be a member of his love, Whom I, with all the duty of my heart, Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd: If my offence be of such mortal kind, That neither service past, nor present sorrows, Nor purg'd merit in futurity, Can ransom me into his love again, But to know so must be my benefit; So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content, And shut myself up in some other course, To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio, My advocacy is not now in tune; My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him, Were he in favour, as in humour, alter'd. So help me, every spirit sanctified, As I have spoken for you all my best; And stood within the blank of his displeasure, For my free speech! You must a while be patient: What I can do, I will; and more I will, Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now, And, certainly, in strange unquietness. Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon, When it hath blown his ranks into the air; And, like the devil, from his very arm Puff'd his own brother;—And can he be angry? Something of moment, then: I will go meet him; There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I pry'thee, do so.—Something, sure, of state,— [Exit Iago.]

Either from Venice; or some unhatch'd practice, Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,— Hath puddled his clear spirit: and, in such cases, Men's natures wrangle with inferior things, Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so; For let our finger ache, and it induces Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense Of pain: Nay, we must think, men are not gods; Nor of them look for such observances As fit the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia, I was (unhandsome warrior as I am,) Arraigning his unkindness with my soul; But now I find, I had suborn'd the witness, And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. 'Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you think; And no conception, nor no jealous toy, Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause. Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so; They are not ever jealous for the cause,

But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster, Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk hereabout: If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit, And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio! Cas. What make you from home? How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? I'faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio. What! keep a week away? seven days and nights? Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours? More tedious than the dial eight score times? O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca; I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd; But I shall, in a more continuant time, Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving Desdemona's handkerchief.]

Take me this work out.

Bian. O, Cassio, whence came this? This is some token from a newer friend. To the felt absence now I feel a cause: Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Woman, go to! Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth, From whence you have them. You are jealous now, That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:

No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it? Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber. I like the work well; ere it be demanded, (As, like enough, it will,) I'd have it copied: Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general; And think it no addition, nor my wish, To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me. I pray you, bring me on the way a little; And say, if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you, For I attend here: but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanc'd. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What,

To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthor'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,

An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,

The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:

But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;

May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft, that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:—

Thou said'st,—O, it comes o'er my memory,

As doth the raven o'er the infected house,

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say,—As knaves be such abroad,

Who having, by their own importunate suit,

Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,

Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose

But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd,

No more than he'll unsweat.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her: Lie with her! that's fulsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief.—To confess, and be hang'd for his labour.—First, to be hang'd, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion, without some instruction. It is not words, that shake me thus:—Fish!—Noses, ears, and lips:—Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!—

[Falls in a trance.]

Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work; Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach,—What, ho! my lord!

Enter CASSIO.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio?

Cas. What is the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear:
The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—
[Exit Cassio.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven:
'Would, you would bear your fortunes like a man.
Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think, every bearded fellow, that's bot yok'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in those improper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.
Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you a while apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.
Whilst you were here, ere while mad with your grief,

(A passion most unsuited such a man,)
Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;
The which he promis'd. Do but enavee yourself,
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?
I will be found most cunning in my patience;
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[Othello withdraws.]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature,
That dotes on Cassio,—as 'tis the strumpet's plague,
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one;—
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter:—Here he comes:—

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smite, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour,
Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?
Cas. The worse, that you give me the addition,
Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure of't.

Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power,

[Speaking low]

How quickly should you speed?

Cas. Alas, poor caitif

Oth. Look, how he laughs already! [Aside]

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, 'faith, she loves me

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out [Aside]

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he impertunes hi

To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said. [Aside]

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry he

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph [Aside]

Cas. I marry her!—what? a customer! I pry'thee bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so wholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so: They laugh that win. [Aside]

Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes, that you shall mar

her. Pr'y'thee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: si is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own lo and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the stor [Aside]

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me i every place. I was, the other day, talking on t tea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither com the bauble; by this hand, she falls thus about r
neck!—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: h gesture imports it. [Aside]

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me so haies, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!—

Oth. Now he tells, how she pluck'd him to r chamber: O, I see that nose of yours, but not th dog I shall throw it to. [Aside]

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Enter BIANCA.

Cas. 'Fis such another fitchew! marry, a pe fumed one.—What do you mean by this haunti of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you
What did you mean by that same handkerchie you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to ta it. I must take out the whole work!—A likel piece of work, that you should find it in yo chamber, and not know who left it there! This i some minx's token, and I must take out the wor
There,—give it your hobby-horse: wheresoever yo had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now how now?

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchie [Aside]

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, yo may: an you will not, come when you are nex prepared for. [Exit]

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. 'Faith I must, she'll rail in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I woul
very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'y'thee, come; Will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio]

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at hi vice?

Oth. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing:—
A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.
Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and he damn'd to-night; for she shall not live: No, my heart is turn'd to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—
Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—And then, of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain: But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again:—this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison; strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases; very good.

Iago. And, for Cassio,—let me be his undertaker: You shall hear more by midnight.

[A trumpet within.]

Oth. Excellent good!—What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,

Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Gives him a packet.]

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

[Opens the packet, and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: How does lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord

An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will—

[Reads.]

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much

To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. 'May be, the letter mov'd him;

For, as I think, they do command him home,

Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. How, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil!

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very much;

Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil!

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,

Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:—

Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.]

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—

I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish, that I would make her turn:

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—

Very obedient;—Proceed you in your tears.—

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!—

I am commanded home:—Get you away;

I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,

And will return to Venice:—Hence, away!—

[Exit Desdemona.]

Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together.

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys! [Exit.]

Lod. Is this the noble Moor, whom our full

senate

Call—all-in-all sufficient? This the noble nature,

Whom passion could not shake! whose solid virtue

The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,

Could neither graze, nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure.

What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,—

I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What, strike his wife!

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; Yet 'would

I knew,

That stroke would prove the worst.

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me, to speak

What I have seen and known. You shall observe

him;

And his own courses will denote him so,

That I may save my speech: Do but go after,

And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard

Each syllable, that breath made up between them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o'the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,

Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,

Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch hath put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There's no man happy; the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go.—

[Exit Emilia.]

She says enough;—yet she's a simple bawd,

That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,

A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:

And yet she'll kneel, and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;
 Look in my face.
Des. What horrible façs's this?
Oth. Some of your function, mistress;

[To Emilia.
 Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;
 Cough, or cry—hem, if any body come:
 Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit Emilia.
Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,
 But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?
Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
 And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;
 Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double-damn'd,
 Swear—thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? With whom? How am I false?

Oth. O Desdemona!—away! away! away!
Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?
 Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord?

If, haply, you my father do suspect,
 An instrument of this your calling back,
 Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him,
 Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
 To try me with affliction; had he rain'd
 All kinds of sores, and shames, on my bare head;

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips;
 Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes;
 I should have found in some part of my soul
 A drop of patience; but (alas!) to make me
 A fixed figure, for the time of scorn
 To point his slow unmoving finger at,—
 O! O!

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
 But there, where I have garner'd up my heart;
 Where either I must live, or bear no life;
 The fountain, from the which my current runs,
 Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!
 Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads
 To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion there!
 Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubio;
 Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope, my noble lord, esteems me honest.
Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
 That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,
 Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
 That the sense aches at thee.—'Would, thou hadst
 ne'er been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?
Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly hook,
 Made to write whore upon? What committed!
 Committed!—O thou publick commoner!

I should make very forges of my cheeks,
 That would to cinders burn up modesty,
 Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed!
 Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks;
 The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
 Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
 And will not hear it: What committed!—
 impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian:
 If to preserve this vessel for my lord
 From any other foul unlawful touch,
 Be—not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, net a whore?
Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Oth. Is it possible?
Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then;
 I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
 That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Re-enter EMILIA.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
 And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you!
 We have done our course; there's money for you
 pains;

I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?
 How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des. Faith, half asleep.
Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with your lord?

Des. With who?
Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.
Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.
Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia.
 I cannot weep; nor answer for I none,
 But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night
 Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember;
 And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change, indeed.
Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet
 How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
 The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How it with you?
Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach you
 babes,

Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
 He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
 I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?
Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewor'd his Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
 As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name, fair lady.
Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.
Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in a drink,

Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.
Iago. Why did he so?
Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such.
Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas, the day!
Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches
 Her father, and her country, and her friends,
 To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for it!
 How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.
Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain
 Some busy and insinuating rogue,
 Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,
 Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!
Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her, whore? who keeps his company?
 What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave;
 Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:
 O, heaven, that such companions thould unfold;
 And put in every honest hand a whip,
 To lash the rascal naked through the world,
 Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.
Emil. O, fie upon him! some such squire he was
 That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
 And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.
Des. O good Iago,
 What shall I do to win my lord again?
 Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven
 I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—
 If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
 Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
 Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
 Delighted them in any other form;

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say, whore;
It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
To do the act, that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour:
The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—
Iago. It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets.]

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!
And the great messengers of Venice stay:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.
[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo?

Rod. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now), keep'st from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. 'Faith, I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist: You have told me—she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: By this haad, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fobb'd in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why now I see thee's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appear'd.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appear'd; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this might show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his zhode be linger'd here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean—removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlot, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.
Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.
Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

O,—Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look, it is done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says, he will return incontinent; He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, Give me my nightgown, and adieu: We must not now displeasure him.

Emil. I would, you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him, That even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,—Pr'ythee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one:—Good father! how foolish are our minds!—

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid, call'd—Barbara; She was in love; and he, she lov'd, prov'd mad, And did forsake her: she had a song of—willow, An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it: That song, to-night, Will not go from my mind; I have much to do, But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your nightgown?

Des. No, unpin me here.—

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice, who would have walked barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nether lip.

I.

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree, [Singing.]

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow;

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;

Lay by these:

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Pr'ythee, hie thee; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;
 Look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy's this?
Oth. Some of your function, mistress;

Des. I hope, my noble lord, esteems me honest.
Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
 That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,
 Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
 That the sense aches at thee.—'Would, thou hadst
 ne'er been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?
Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly hook,
 Made to write whore upon? What committed!
 Committed!—O thou public commoner!

I should make very forges of my cheeks,
 That would to cinders burn up modesty,
 Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed!
 Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks;

The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
 Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
 And will not hear it: What committed!—
 Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Aie not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian:
 If to preserve this vessel for my lord
 From any other foul unlawful touch,
 Be—not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?
Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!
Oth. I cry you mercy, then;
 I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
 That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Re-enter EMILIA.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
 And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you!
 We have done our course; there's money for your
 pains;
 I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.

[Exit
Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive!
 How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady!

Des. Faith, half asleep.
Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?
Emil. Why, with my lord, madam
Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady
Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia;
 I cannot weep; nor answer have I none.
 But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night
 Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember;—
 And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change, indeed
 [Exit

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
 How have I been behav'd, that he might stick.
 The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young
 babes,
 Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks;
 He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
 I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady
Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
 As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name, fair lady
Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.
Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in his drink,

Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.
Iago. Why did he so?
Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas, the day
Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,
 Her father, and her country, and her friends,
 To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep

Des. It is my wretched fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for it
 How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know
Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
 Some busy and insinuating rogue,
 Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,
 Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!
Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her, whore? who keeps her
 company?
 What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave
 Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:—
 O, heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold;
 And put in every honest hand a whip,
 To lash the rascal naked through the world,
 Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door
Emil. O, fie upon him! some such squire he doer
 That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
 And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.
Des. O good Iago,
 What shall I do to win my lord again?
 Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven
 I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—
 If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
 Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
 Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
 Delighted them in any other form;

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say, whore;
It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
To do the act, that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour:
The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—
Iago. It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets.
Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!
And the great messengers of Venice stay:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.
[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo?

Rod. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with me.
Des. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device,
Iago. and rather (as it seems to me now,) keep'st from me all convenience, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. 'Faith, I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.
Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist: You have told me—she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: By this hand, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fobb'd in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appear'd.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appear'd; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be linger'd here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean—removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right, He sups to-night with a harlot, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Another room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

O,—Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says, he will return incontinent;

He hath commanded me to go to bed,

And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, Give me my nightgown, and adieu: We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would, you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him, That even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,—Pr'ythee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one:—Good father! how foolish are our minds!—

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me

In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid, call'd—Barbara; She was in love; and he, she lov'd, prov'd mad, And did forsake her: she had a song of—willow, An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it: That song, to-night, Will not go from my mind; I have much to do, But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your nightgown?

Des. No, unpin me here.—

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice, who would have walked barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nether lip.

I.

Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

[Singing.

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;

Lay by these:

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Pr'ythee, bid thee; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:

Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath,
Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception,
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.
O perjurer! woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,—
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;
I never gave it him:—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?
Oth. That he hath—us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He'll not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;
Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't.

Des. My fear interprets then,—What, is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,

There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. (He smother's her.)

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho!

My lord! my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead: not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—

So, so.

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak
a word with you.

Oth. Yes;—'tis Emilia:—by and by.—She's
dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;

The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?

Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Were't good?

I think, she stirs again:—No.—What's the best?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:—

My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife:

O, insupportable! O heavy hour!

Methinks, it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe

Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you I may speak
with you,

O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia:—

Soft,—by and by:—Let me the curtains draw.—

Where art thou? What's the matter with thee
now?

[Unlocks the door.]

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. O, good my lord, yonder's foul murder done.

Oth. What? now?

Emil. But now, my lord!

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more near the earth than she was wont,

And makes me mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian, Call'd—Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what cry is this

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:

Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!

Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath do

This deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord; O, farewell.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who know

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth

Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell;

'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a dev

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to s

That she was false; O, she was heavenly true!

Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,

But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity: Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cass

Nay, had she been true,

If heaven would make me such another world

Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,

I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first

An honest man he is, and hates the slime

That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration, woman? I sa thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villainy hath made mocks wi

love!—

My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman?

I say, thy husband; Dost understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart;

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,

Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were bes

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do n harm,

As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—

I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,

Though I lost twenty lives:—Help! help, ho help!

The Moor has kill'd my mistress; Murder! murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, and IAGO.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general.

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done wel

That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man

He says, thou didst him that his wife was false

I know, thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told n

more

Than what he found himself to be apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false

Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
 Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie:—
 She false with Cassio!—Did you say, with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound
 to speak:
 My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.
All. O heavens forefend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy!—
 I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't!—O villainy!
 I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for grief.—
 O villainy, villainy!

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak;
 'Tis proper I obey him, but not now:—
 Perchance, IAGO, I will ne'er go home.
Oth. O! O! O! O! [Hang'g over his wife.]
Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar;
 For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
 That e'er did lift up eye.
Oth. O, she was foul!— [Rising.]
 I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece, Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:

I know, this act shows horrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's
 dead;
 Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
 Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
 This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
 Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
 And fall to reprobation.
Oth. 'Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows,
 That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
 A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:
 And she did gratify his amorous works
 With that recognizance and pledge of love,
 Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand;
 It was a handkerchief, so antique token
 My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.
Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out:—I hold my peace,
 sir? no:
 No, I will speak as liberal as the air;
 Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
 All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.
Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.

[Iago offers to stab his wife.]
Gra. Fie!

Your sword upon a woman?
Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of,
 I found by fortune, and did give my husband;
 For often, with a solemn earnestness,
 (More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,)
 He begg'd of me to steal it.
Iago. Villainous whore!
Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas; I found it,
 And I did give't my husband.
Iago. Filth, thou liest.
Emil. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentlemen:
 O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
 Do with so good a wife?

[Iago stabs Emilia, then runs out.]
Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,
 But what serve for the thunder?—Precious villain!
Gra. The woman falls; sure, he has kill'd his wife.
Emil. Ay, ay; O, lay me by my mistress' side!
Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.
Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor:
 Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,
 But kill him rather: I'll after that same villain,
 For 'tis a damned slave.

[Exeunt Montano and Gratiano.]

Oth. I am not valiant neither,
 But every puffy whipster gets my sword:—
 But why should honour outlive honesty?
 Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
 Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
 And die in music;—Willow, willow, willow.—
 Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor;
 So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
 So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.]
Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,
 It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper;—
 O, here it is:—Uncle, I must come forth.
Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;
 Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.
Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me,
 Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?
Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
 A better never did itself sustain
 Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,
 That, with this little arm, and this good sword,
 I have made my way through more impediments,
 Than twenty times your stop:—But, O vain boast!
 Who can control his fate! 'tis not so now.—
 Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;
 Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
 And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
 Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lust fear;
 Man but a rash against Othello's breast,
 And he retires:—Where should Othello go?—
 Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!
 Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,
 This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
 And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl!
 Even like thy chastity.—
 O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,
 From the possession of this heavenly sight!
 Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
 Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
 O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead?
 Dead? O! O! O!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, carried in a chair, and Officers with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate
 man?
Oth. That's he, that was Othello; here I am.
Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.
Oth. I look down towards his feet;—but that's a fable:

If that thou he'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.
 [Othello wounds Iago.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.
Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.
Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live;
 For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.
Lod. O thou Othello, that wast once so good,
 Fall'n in the practice of a cursed slave,
 What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:
 An honourable murderer, if you will;
 For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.
Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy:
 Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.
Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.
 Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil,
 Why he hath thus ensur'd my soul and body?
Iago. Demand me nothing: What you know,
 you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.
Lod. What? not to pray?
Gra. Torments will ope your lips.
Oth. Well, thou dost best.
Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,
 Which, as I think, you know not: Here is a letter,
 Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;
 And here, another: the one of them imports
 The death of Cassio to be undertook
 By Roderigo.
Oth. O villain!

A variorum edition of the Works of Ovid has long been a desired object with the literary World. The text of Burmann forms the basis of the one adopted in the present edition, which has been most carefully collated and revised. The researches of the most distinguished commentators, ancient and modern, have been resorted to for the illustration of this interesting poet; and a considerable number of notes by BENTLEY, not hitherto published, has been added from the Manuscripts in the British Museum.

IL DECAMERONE DI BOCCACCIO, con un Discorso Critico da UGO FOSCOLO, in 3 vols. crown 8vo. printed upon laid paper, embellished with a portrait, and ten beautiful engravings, by Mr. Fox, from designs by T. Stothard, esq. R. A. price £2. 12s. 6d. in extra boards.

A few copies, upon Large Paper, with proof impressions of the plates, price £4. 14s. 6d.

"In this new and beautifully printed edition of the Decameron, the text has been carefully revised by Signor Foscolo, whose prefatory essay on the genius of Boccaccio will afford great pleasure and instruction to the admirers of the old Italian novelist. The designs illustrative of the delicious introductions and endings of the different days into which the Decameron is divided, are considered by many to be Stothard's best work. In the first print, which represents the Crowning of Pampinea, as queen for the day, the party of "seven ladies and three gentlemen" are exquisitely grouped round a fountain in the midst of the court of a stately palace "angirt with galleries, halls, and chambers." Nothing can be more graceful than the action of Pampinea, who is shrinking from the proffered honour of the crown; nothing finer than the old sequestered Italian building, with its distant gardens seen through the pillars; and the whole effect of the design is like a placid dream of the leisure and enjoyment of other times. The second print shews us the party seated in the heart of a deep glade, telling their stories. What a landscape! and what a group! The women are the perfection of female loveliness. The bathing in the Valley of Ladies (sixth print) is very delicately and yet voluptuously managed; the sunny brilliance of the eighth design, with its flowers, birds and tender trees, shooting up into the blue air, is a piece of finished luxury, though of a different kind from the sixth subject. All the prints, indeed, are more or less delightful; but the most charming of all is, in our opinion, the ninth, (a night-scene) where the party are supping out of doors. The banquet is spread in the most removed and secret nook of the garden; the tapers cast a tender light over the fair company, but reach no further, for the trees hang heavily, in deep masses, in the gloom and sultriness of the nocturnal air; a thin, crescent moon just makes the "darkness of the heavens visible;" there are no stars to break the repose of the firmament with their sparkling,—no noise save the drip of a small fountain. The talk of the party has evidently subsided, and given place to happy thoughts; and the ladies, who have no doubt been coquetish enough all day, seem now amiably impressed with the languor and luxury of the scene and hour."

"We have no room here to expatiate upon the other prints, but to such of our readers as are fond of the gentler exercises of art, we earnestly recommend these illustrations of the Decameron, which, it appears, are published separately as well as in the book."

New Monthly Mag. Oct. 1825.

- "Herrick possesses a vigour of fancy, a warmth of feeling, a soundness of sense, and an ease of versification, sufficient to rank him very high in the scale of English poets."
- Quarterly Rev. Aug. 1810.*
- "The amatory poems of Herrick unite the playful gaiety of Anacreon with the tender sweetness of Catullus, and are altogether devoid of that mythological allusion, and cold conceits which, in the pages of Waller, so frequently disgust the reader. There is a vein of rich description in his poems, undiscoverable in the productions of Carew or Waller, which resembles the best manner of Milton's Minor and Marlowe's Passionate Shepherd." Drake.
